U.S. Jets Hammer 3 Oil Depots

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. planes continued hammering targets in North Viet Nam on Saturday, striking at three fuel and oil storage depots about 20 miles northwest of Dong Hoi, the U.S. Command said Sunday.

A military spokesman said an Air Force F4C Phantom was shot down by enemy fire but that the pilot was rescued after he parachuted into the sea. It was the first plane reported lost in a week and brought to 344 the number of aircraft lost over North Viet Nam.

In the raid on the fuel dumps, pilots reported one large secondary explosion and heavy black smoke billowing 1,500 feet into the air, the spokesman said.

156 MISSIONS

Heavy bomb damage reports piled up from 156 missions flown against the North on Friday. A spokesman said all planes in those raids returned safely.

Communist supplies, however, were still moving to Red troops in the South. A high U.S. Navy officer said that, though the flow has been cut considerably by heavy raids on highway, rail and barge traffic, sightings of southbound trucks "have increased appreciably over the past six weeks."

"This is not indicative that the interdiction campaign has not been performing well," the officer said. "It suggests a much heavier push toward the south. We have done a h— of a lot of damage to the oil supplies. They have unquestionably lost a lot of capability. Their stockpiles have been greatly reduced."

Air operations over South Viet Nam were marked by the crash of a U.S. Army armed helicopter that killed all its four crewmen. The gunship fell and burned 13 miles north of Saigon. A spokesman said mechanical failure was believed responsible.

On the ground, South Vietnamese forces reported killing 132 Viet Cong as battalions of government troops, supported by planes and artillery, struck an enemy force 120 miles southwest of Saigon. A spokesman said helicopters sank most of a sampan flotilla in which guerrilla survivors were carrying away the bodies of about 100 others killed in the fight.

Elements of the U.S. 173rd Airborne Brigade uncovered a major Communist supply cache 40 miles east of Saigon. The supplies included a variety of automatic weapons and rifles, 50,000 rounds of small arms ammunition, 175 mortar shells and 700 pounds of cloth for uniforms.

Viet Cong terrorism reflected the announced Communist aim of sabotaging the election of a constituent assembly Sept. 11, for which campaigning is now fully under way.

A government spokesman announced guerrillas mined a civilian bus Friday on a highway 62 miles southwest of Saigon, killing 15 passengers and wounding 10. Two officials were reported assassinated in raids on two refugee hamlets near Hue, 400 miles north of Saigon.

Red China Warns Tough Red Guards

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China today cautioned the tough teen-age "Red Guards," who are spearheading the country's cultural crackdown, against the use of violence.

An editorial in the official Peking People's Daily said the youths "should use reasoning and not violence to persuade." It was the first such statement since the campaign started and it came a day after bloodshed was reported.

The official Communist party newspaper said "we must support their — the youths' — fervent revolutionary movement" but said their actions must conform with party Chairman Mao Tze-tung's teachings.

Reports from Peking on Saturday said the youths met their first resistance and that there had been bloodshed.

14 INJURED

The Japanese newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun said 14 persons, including four "Red Guards," were injured Thursday when they were cut down by sword and dagger at a home in Peking.

The paper's Peking correspondents said the resistance report was posted in the latest notice put up by the Red Guards. It said there were two incidents Thursday, with eight persons, including three girls and a child, injured by "capitalists." The other incident included the injury of six people, including four Red Guards, a girl and a child, by an unidentified person.

The Red Guards are a specially formed youth group to support party chairman Mao Tze-tung and the Central Committee. In the past few days, with the sanction of the leadership, the students have been terrorizing Chinese cities as representatives of "the great proletarian revolution."

Despite the reported resistance, there has been no letup in the activities of the young toughs, who were compared with the Hitler youth of the Nazi era by Chinese reaching Hong Kong after mainland visits.

Chinese coming into Hong Kong from the mainland said members of the movement were still rushing through cities, raiding stores and abusing pedestrians in their demands that all trace of Western influence be eradicated from life in Communist China.

"This must have resembled Nazi Germany and Hitler's youth corps," one returning witness commented.

In Canton, the youths stopped a man with a Western-style haircut "and before he knew what was happening he was tied to a lamp post and his hair was shaved off," another said.

For the second consecutive day Monroe recorded the highest temperature in the Midsouth — a pleasant 88. Greenwood, Miss., also had the same high reading. The low Saturday, according to FAA at Selman Field in Monroe, was 58 between 5 and 6 a.m. The high occurred around noon.

Partly cloudy skies and widely scattered thundershowers dominate the weather picture through Monday. The high today should be 89 to 92 with a low tonight of 66 to 74 expected. Last year's high and low for this date were 87 and 74. Winds from the southeast will prevail at 5 to 15 miles an hour today, becoming near calm tonight.

Airlines Forecast No Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — A spokesman for the airline industry voiced doubt Saturday that the carriers will be able to reduce fares, as suggested by the chief White House economist, in the face of mounting costs.

The Civil Aeronautics Board indicated that it plans to defer action until it has more information next spring.

President Stuart G. Tipton of the Air Transport Association expressed concern over the lower fares proposal of Chairman Gardner Ackley of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

INCREASES OFFSET

"Obviously, there is a limit to the capacity of the industry to offset increases in wage and material costs," Tipton said. "Excessive wage settlements very seriously impair the ability of the industry to lower fares."

CAB Chairman Charles S. Murphy disclosed in a separate interview, that the recent six-week strike against five airlines stalled the board's study of air fare patterns.

This survey, upon which any action to raise or lower fares would be based, cannot now be completed in December as planned, but will go over into the new year, Murphy said.

Murphy also noted that the board has extended the expiration date of airline jet surcharges and excursion fares from Dec. 31 to next April 23.

Murphy said it would be logical to assume that the CAB will take no action on fares until the fare-structure study has been completed and until after additional data on surcharges and promotional fares has been gathered.

Ackley said a week ago that settlement of the strike by the AFL-CIO International Association of Machinists against five major carriers was excessive and substantially above the administration's wage-price guidelines.

He added, however, that the airlines have been doing so well that fares can continue their downward trend.

The airlines estimate their added costs, over the three years of a new contract, at about $86.8 million.

Tipton said the industry has been able to absorb increases in labor and material costs, and at the same time introduce substantial fare reductions, because it invested $3.1 billion in new equipment in the last five years.

Tipton noted that in contrast to price trends in every other part of the economy, air fares now are below the 1950 level.

"Fare reductions, increases in wages, better service, more airline capacity all depend on the same pool of earnings," Tipton said.

U.S. Seeking 3rd Country In Viet Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has tried again through a third country to get North Viet Nam into peace talks, or at least to scale down its push against South Viet Nam, it was learned Saturday.

U.S. officials suggested Saturday that Hanoi is holding hard to its present course because it believes that it will win in time through a collapse of the Saigon regime, a U.S. withdrawal under pressure of international opinion or an American pull out because of internal U.S. differences over Southeast Asian policy.

U.S. officials declined to give out for publication the name of the neutral country with whom diplomatic discussions were held recently concerning efforts to persuade Hanoi to stop its military activities in South Viet Nam.

Backstage diplomatic talks about Viet Nam have been conducted with a large number of countries in the past. It was reported that in this recent instance the U.S. diplomat told the third country representative that:

The military effort in South Viet Nam is going well, and so are the political and economic efforts to build a democratic, self-sustaining country.

The United States is determined to prevent a Communist take-over by force and will persist as long as necessary to accomplish this.

Those nations of Asia most involved with the Viet Nam question understand the reasons for Washington's action.

U.S. air attacks on North Viet Nam are aimed at raising the cost of her aggression to the South. The United States would like to hear from Hanoi what North Viet Nam would do in return for a halt of the bombing.

Ouachita School Board Fires Drew Principal

By VERNON GUIDRY
World Staff Writer

Drew Elementary School Principal Mrs. Cecile Burkett was fired Saturday by the Ouachita Parish School Board after eight hours of testimony from 18 witnesses in a marathon hearing on charges of incompetence.

Mrs. Burkett, who acted as her own counsel during the closed hearing, declined comment on whether she would take the decision to court in appeal.

She was charged with incompetence by reason of her "failure and inability" to maintain harmony with the faculty and staff of the school, parents and community, or school related organizations and activities.

PRIVATE HEARING

The hearing before the board started at 9 a.m. and the last of the parade of witnesses — teachers and parents — was dismissed shortly after 5 p.m. After cross examination of the 18, Mrs. Burkett testified in her own behalf. She called no witnesses and requested that the hearing be held in private.

After a closed door session following the principal's testimony, the board opened the meeting and voted unamiously for her removal after finding the charges "sustained by the evidence".

Discord at the school came to light at a recent board meeting when a group presented the board with a petition signed by 258 members of the Drew Community describing a "dangerous situation."

A subsequent investigation by school administrators found the charges "apparently well founded" and called for the hearing. Eight of the school's 13 teachers have either resigned or been transferred.

CLASSES MONDAY

Another personel matter, this time a hiring, brought the only fireworks in the brief open session. Roy Lee Sims was voted principal of Pinecrest School, prompting Ransom School teacher-coach Ellard Brantley to rise from the gallery and ask that the qualifications of those concerned be "put in the paper."

"Everybody knows your qualifications," School Superintendent Milton Hall shouted. "They've been there."

Brantley made news at a board meeting where he charged that he had been passed over for promotion seven times.

Board members Milton Ford, Dr. F. H. Hammonds, Mrs. George Snellings and J. H. Trousdale were absent when the vote on dismissal was taken. Assistant District Attorney Charles Traylor represented the school board.

Fred Petty Gives Views On Remarks

Fred Petty, Monroe businessman, said Saturday that some of his remarks in his introduction of Gov. McKeithen before local civic clubs last Thursday here, were misinterpreted.

"I certainly was not referring to our gospel singers or their leaders in the state in my remarks," Petty said.

Petty pointed out that what he meant in some of the remarks in his introduction was that after the excellent record established by Governor McKeithen "there was no place in this state for piano playing-singing leadership."

Although he did not use names, Petty obviously was referring to former Gov. Jimmy Davis.

"I certainly have no objection to gospel singing and the people who participate in it," he said, adding "I like it myself."

"To me it is just inconceivable that people would return to the type of leadership furnished by the Davis Administration after the magnificent performance by Governor McKeithen," Petty said Saturday. "That simply was the true intent and meaning of my remarks and I certainly was not refering to gospel music or our gospel singers."

Friendly Man Holds Family

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An amiable armed robber held a family of six hostage for 21 hours Friday, allowed them to act normally and listened sympathetically to the unemployed father.

The talkative young man entertained two fellow gunmen in the home, allowed Clements to keep an appointment for a beer at a neighborhood pub and sent the Clements children out for food.

He warned Clements politely, but firmly: "If you call the cops, I'll kill your family."

All the men wanted, Clements told police, was a hideout while they counted and divided $500 taken in a holdup at a pharmacy two blocks away.

"He was a very nice man," said Lilly Joanne, 17, one of the four Clements children.

"I told him about my troubles — being ill and unable to work — and he said, 'That's too bad. I feel sorry for you,'" Clements related.

When the gunman decided it was safe to leave, around 10 p.m. he walked to a bus stop with Clements.

"We shook hands," said Clements, "and he said to me, 'You're a good man.'"

The bandit boarded a municipal bus.

Clements said the seige began at 1:30 a.m., about half an hour after the pharmacy stickup.

The gunman apparently entered an apartment building next to the Clements apartment, pried open a window and found himself in the Clements' bathroom.

He forced Eugene Clements, 18, at gunpoint into the living room, where the family was watching television.

There he held the parents, Lilly, Eugene, Archie, 9, and Dennie, 14, until two other men arrived.

The thief let his friends in. They talked and divided the money. After several hours the other two men left.

Clements said he and his abductor spent most of the night and the day talking.

The man allowed the family to pursue a normal routine. He sent Clements out for a six pack of beer. The children were sent out for food and Eugene went for cigarettes and a bottle of vodka.

Police said they had no clues to the gunman's identity — described as curly-haired, dressed in blue denim trousers, a leather jacket and boots. They also couldn't explain how his two friends knew where to find him.

Winds Blow At Speeds Of 90 MPH

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Hurricane Faith, building her might again, lashed the U.S. space tracking station on Grand Turk Island with gales Saturday night and bore down doggedly on the rest of the scenic isles in the lower Bahamas.

The season's sixth tropical storm sent high winds whistling around the tracking station as her center thrashed some 60 to 80 miles north of the island. Tourists boating in the lower Bahamas were told to head for port immediately.

INCREASE EXPECTED

The hurricane was expected to increase both her size and intensity through the night.

Faith, which sidestepped populous Puerto Rico and the Leeward Islands, packed top winds of 90 miles an hour after dropping to as low as 80.

The 150-man crew on Grand Turk hauled down antennas, boarded up windows and sandbagged low spots.

Whether or not Faith will clobber Florida may depend on the strength of a high-pressure area in the Atlantic north of the Bahamas.

If the high-pressure area is especially strong, it may channel Faith on a collision course with Florida.

"We expect contact between the hurricane and the high within the next 24 to 36 hours," said forecaster Gilbert Clark of Miami's National Hurricane Center.

"It is a fairly strong high, extending far into the air. It could affect the storm — especially by slowing it down.

"But we don't think the high will be strong enough to send the storm barreling into Florida."

It was this heading that prevented the culmination of Project Stormfury, a 10-year-old program to see if man can tranquilize a hurricane.

The path was 150 miles south of the whale-shaped area where scientists had hoped to bombard the storm with silver iodide crystals in hopes of drawing out its strength.

The crystals collect moisture, which freezes and then falls. The loss of heat destroys the structure of the cloud wall, a circulating shield of rain and wind around the eye.

Ouachita School Board Fires Drew Principal

By VERNON GUIDRY
World Staff Writer

Drew Elementary School Principal Mrs. Cecile Burkett was fired Saturday by the Ouachita Parish School Board after eight hours of testimony from 18 witnesses in a marathon hearing on charges of incompetence.

Mrs. Burkett, who acted as her own counsel during the closed hearing, declined comment on whether she would take the decision to court in appeal.

She was charged with incompetence by reason of her "failure and inability" to maintain harmony with the faculty and staff of the school, parents and community, or school related organizations and activities.

PRIVATE HEARING

The hearing before the board started at 9 a.m. and the last of the parade of witnesses — teachers and parents — was dismissed shortly after 5 p.m. After cross examination of the 18, Mrs. Burkett testified in her own behalf. She called no witnesses and requested that the hearing be held in private.

After a closed door session following the principal's testimony, the board opened the meeting and voted unamiously for her removal after finding the charges "sustained by the evidence."

Discord at the school came to light at a recent board meeting when a group presented the board with a petition signed by 258 members of the Drew Community describing a "dangerous situation."

A subsequent investigation by school administrators found the charges "apparently well founded" and called for the hearing. Eight of the school's 13 teachers have either resigned or been transferred.

CLASSES MONDAY

Another personel matter, this time a hiring, brought the only fireworks in the brief open session. Roy Lee Sims was voted principal of Pinecrest School, prompting Ransom School teacher-coach Ellard Brantley to rise from the gallery and ask that the qualifications of those concerned be "put in the paper."

"Everybody knows your qualifications," School Superintendent Milton Hall shouted. "They've been there."

Brantley made news at a board meeting where he charged that he had been passed over for promotion seven times.

Board members Milton Ford, Dr. F. H. Hammonds, Mrs. George Snellings and J. H. Trousdale were absent when the vote on dismissal was taken. Assistant District Attorney Charles Traylor represented the school board.

Fred Petty Gives Views On Remarks

Fred Petty, Monroe businessman, said Saturday that some of his remarks in his introduction of Gov. McKeithen before local civic clubs last Thursday here, were misinterpreted.

"I certainly was not referring to our gospel singers or their leaders in the state in my remarks," Petty said.

Petty pointed out that what he meant in some of the remarks in his introduction was that after the excellent record established by Governor McKeithen "there was no place in this state for piano playing-singing leadership."

Although he did not use names, Petty obviously was referring to former Gov. Jimmy Davis.

"I certainly have no objection to gospel singing and the people who participate in it," he said, adding "I like it myself."

"To me it is just inconceivable that people would return to the type of leadership furnished by the Davis Administration after the magnificent performance by Governor McKeithen," Petty said Saturday. "That simply was the true intent and meaning of my remarks and I certainly was not refering to gospel music or our gospel singers."

Friendly Man Holds Family

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An amiable armed robber held a family of six hostage for 21 hours Friday, allowed them to act normally and listened sympathetically to the unemployed father.

The talkative young man entertained two fellow gunmen in the home, allowed Clements to keep an appointment for a beer at a neighborhood pub and sent the Clements children out for food.

He warned Clements politely, but firmly: "If you call the cops, I'll kill your family."

All the men wanted, Clements told police, was a hideout while they counted and divided $500 taken in a holdup at a pharmacy two blocks away.

"He was a very nice man," said Lilly Joanne, 17, one of the four Clements children.

"I told him about my troubles — being ill and unable to work — and he said, 'That's too bad. I feel sorry for you,'" Clements related.

When the gunman decided it was safe to leave, around 10 p.m. he walked to a bus stop with Clements.

"We shook hands," said Clements, "and he said to me, 'You're a good man.'"

The bandit boarded a municipal bus.

Clements said the seige began at 1:30 a.m., about half an hour after the pharmacy stickup.

The gunman apparently entered an apartment building next to the Clements apartment, pried open a window and found himself in the Clements' bathroom.

He forced Eugene Clements, 18, at gunpoint into the living room, where the family was watching television.

There he held the parents, Lilly, Eugene, Archie, 9, and Dennie, 14, until two other men arrived.

The thief let his friends in. They talked and divided the money. After several hours the other two men left.

Clements said he and his abductor spent most of the night and the day talking.

The man allowed the family to pursue a normal routine. He sent Clements out for a six pack of beer. The children were sent out for food and Eugene went for cigarettes and a bottle of vodka.

Police said they had no clues to the gunman's identity — described as curly-haired, dressed in blue denim trousers, a leather jacket and boots. They also couldn't explain how his two friends knew where to find him.

Public Is Seeking Curbs On Strikes

"Whenever we have a big strike, it seems like neither side wins, and the public always comes out of it worst of all."

This remark by a 48-year-old shoemaker from Brooklyn echoes the sentiments of many Americans who are growing restive about the present way of settling disputes between management and labor.

During the last year, the public has felt the effects of several serious strikes, most recently the airlines strike. The forecast is for further labor turmoil, with strikes or threats of strikes in key areas, including the electrical, telephone, and automobile industries.

Representatives of both industry and labor have held the view that it's better to let labor and management "fight it out," than to have government arbitration imposed. At the same time, they would admit that no way has yet been found to protect the public's interests.

The American people ask for an end to this "public-be-d——" philosophy.

Actually, continuation of the present system — that brings the nation to a standstill in vital areas — may only serve to harden feelings against both unions and business. For example, during or immediately following a serious strike, public attitudes about laws governing labor unions stiffen, even to the extent of increasing opposition to the principle of collective bargaining.

Unions Under Anti Trust Laws

Many people think that unions, organized as many now are on an industry-wide basis, are monopolies, in effect, and should come under the anti-trust laws, as in the case of business.

This matter of monopolies is of course a fairly complex one, and many people cannot or do not feel qualified to express an opinion. But among those with an opinion, the weight of sentiment is nearly 2-to-1 in favor of such legislation.

As further evidence of the public's present mood, a sizable minority (39 per cent) believe an individual should have the right to sue a union or an employer for any damages he personally has suffered because of a strike. Among labor union people, the percentage is 35; among non-union people, the percentage is 41.

Compulsory Arbitration Favored

Most experts in the field of labor relations oppose the idea of compulsory arbitration, that is, having the government step in when strikes in major industries are threatened.

But survey evidence shows that a majority of the people are ready to try almost any system that will stop strikes which involve the public's interest in an important way.

When the public was asked about a plan which would require a government-appointed committee to step in after a strike of 7 days, 54 per cent said they would favor such a plan, and 36 per cent said they would oppose it.

Women have always been found to be more opposed than their husbands to strikes. In the present survey, it was found that women are much more in favor of compulsory arbitration than are men.

Strangely enough, even among labor union people, about as many approve as disapprove of compulsory arbitration, after a strike has gone on for more than 7 days without being settled.

Public Pro Union

The public is obviously upset about strikes, but this does not mean they are anti-union in principle. During the last three decades, approval of labor unions has never gone below 61 per cent, and at times has been as high as 76 per cent. The great mass of people have consistently supported the right of labor to work for a decent wage and working conditions.

Basically, the objection on the part of many Americans has been that unions — while a good thing for the worker and the country — are not properly controlled and that present laws endow union leaders with too much power and too little responsibility.

The weight of opinion over the years has been that laws governing labor unions should be more strict. For example, 40 per cent earlier this year hold that laws were not strict enough, compared with 11 per cent who said they were "too strict." Some have also favored greater controls on business, but this view has never had the public support that greater curbs on unions has enlisted.

President Counts Many Blessings

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson, 58 Saturday, said some of his lifelong dreams are coming true and "no hill country could have a better birthday."

The really difficult problem is Viet Nam, he said.

"But the blessing that I consider best is the opportunity I have today — that I never had before — as leader of the people of this country in waging a war on the dreadful enemies of all mankind; disease, ignorance, illiteracy, poverty, ugliness, and so forth — and to wage it effectively," Johnson said.

It was a day of blessing counting and ever present business for Johnson, capped by a two-cake, expandable, Texas-style dinner with family and friends. Mrs. Johnson took due note of her husband's inclination to bring in unexpected guests and explained that there were going to be extra baked beans, along with barbecue and homemade, fresh peace ice cream.

The President and First Lady received newsmen in the living room of their big white ranch house beside the Pedernales River after rain had canceled out informal chatting and reminiscing outdoors.

How was Johnson feeling on this occasion?

Fine, he said, but he conceded he was a little tired when he got in Friday night from a long, strenuous speaking tour in Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma.

That was the third such trip, with political overtones, in three weekends, and it appears others are coming up. Some observers had thought he looked and sounded a bit weary after an expedition into the Northeast a week ago.

But Johnson's own appraisal was that: "I doubt that I have ever been in better health. I feel good; I sleep well. I had a wonderful night's sleep last night."

There is a constant weight problem, though. Johnson said he takes off three or four pounds in two or three days on the road, then comes back up, but there is no real problem.

"I haven't had to buy any new clothes," he said. "I am still wearing the ranch clothes I have had all year."

Sitting in an easy chair, knees crossed, Johnson was wearing a brown sports jacket, tan Western pants, and highly polished, tooled leather cowboy boots. Mrs. Johnson was wearing an aqua dress.

Reporters wanted to know whether Johnson thinks he has any special problems on his birthday, national or international. His answer underscored the obvious:

"A president always has many problems. They change from day to day and from week to week. Sure, we have problems, grave ones. But we have none that we don't feel confident that we can find the answer to.

"The problems that we have — as I have said so frequently — all year — are the problems that we have been fighting so hard to attain, namely, full employment, a high standard of living, and better housing.

"We are now at a point that I have envisioned and sought all of my adult life — or even as a boy. My earliest memories were hearing my grandfather, who was a leading advocate in this part of the country for social justice, talk about the plight of the tenant farmer, the necessity for the worker to have the protection of bargaining, the need for improvement of our transportation to get the farm out of the mud, and onto blacktop roads, and particularly the little red school house."

Johnson said that was the philosophy his father handed down to him and it came from his grandfathers on both sides.

Johnson got all kinds of congratulatory birthday messages, including good wishes from former President Harry S. Truman, the Western Union telegraph girls in Denver and the mother of a soldier in Viet Nam.

Among those telegrams reaching the ranch were greetings from Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Great Britain, President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines and Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. Thousands more, White House officials said, were waiting back in Washington.

But Johnson said the reason no hillbilly rancher could have had a better birthday was that he has a fine, happy family, a wonderful wife and two daughters, a nice home, good friends, and a prosperous country to live in.

Mrs. Johnson said daughter Lynda was to be on hand in time for the birthday party Saturday night. The President said that daughter Luci and her husband, Patrick J. Nugent, are coming to Texas by car to make their home in Austin but wouldn't arrive in time.

He explained that he had given them some fatherly advice on economy. Luci and Pat, he said, wanted to come down from Washington by plane, but he told them he thought it imprudent to spend $300 on the fare when their fathers still are helping them to attend college.

For about 45 minutes Johnson answered questions and volunteered some remarks of his own. At the end, he followed newsmen out onto the porch and down the walk, keeping up a running commentary. It was at the conclusion of the stroll that he listed Viet Nam as the really big problem.

Chief Of Staff Sees Turnabout

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Army Chief of Staff Harold K. Johnsen, without predicting victory, Saturday sketched a dramatic turnabout in the Viet Nam war from despair to allied forces grasping the strategic initiative.

"The enemy has been hurt, his timetables and his plans upset," said Gen. Johnson, in summing up the situation.

He addressed the annual convention of the Mississippi National Guard Association, which passed a resolution of "agreement with the national policy of combating communistic aggression and the aiding of victims of such aggression with whatever military assistance is necessary."

And Gen. Johnson said, "our reserve component forces are intact. And their readiness, particularly in the selected reserve force, is higher than ever before in our history."

But he dwelled primarily on the Viet Nam conflict in a 10-page speech, drawing sharp contrast between a March, 1965 visit—"things were pretty well falling apart"—and a visit this month—"a superb job."

The general cited:

The fact allied troops have "not lost a single battle involving more than 500 men since the conflict entered a new stage last summer."

That this year, through Aug. 3, Army units engaged in 147 battalion-size attacks, killing almost 9,000 enemy of a total casualty loss of 26,000.

Enemy supplies captured or destroyed by ground forces include nearly 10,000 tons of rice that "would feed about 20 Viet Cong regiments almost three years," 500 tons of salt and 280 tons of other supplies.

Gen. Johnson added it was untrue South Vietnamese soldiers do not fight, and said the Army was helping win a "nation-building struggle" with construction of schools, sanitation facilities, dispensaries and roads and dispensation of medical care.

"Nevertheless," he said, "the North Vietnamese have infiltrated at least 16 regiments of regular troops into South Viet Nam over the past 16 months, and have expended a tremendous effort to increase the capacity of the infiltration routes through Laos.

"The Viet Cong . . . have increased the frequency of terrorist attacks—more than 24,000 in a recent 12 - month period—against the entire fabric of the Vietnamese society."

But on the allied side, the general said, "deterioration is a thing of the past; there is a sense of purpose, of accomplishment, of inexorable forward motion. Performance and accomplishment have risen in a heartening manner."

The National Guard Association also approved resolutions praising Gov. Paul Johnson and Maj. Gen. Walter G. Johnson, the state adjutant general, for service to the guard and the state.

Police Activity Is Light Here

West Monroe police booked Lester M. Alexander, 23, of Rt. 5, Box 151, West Monroe, for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages and reckless driving late Friday night.

Alexander was apprehended on Cypress Street at 11:40 p.m.

Bertha Nabors, 3510 Church St., reported the theft of a billfold containing $56 to Monroe police Saturday morning. She told police that she had the billfold on her person when she went to bed Friday night, but that when she awoke Saturday morning it was missing.

Parents Who Care

What is music to a child? The wind in a corn field, the croak of a frog, a mother's lullaby — and oh, a thousand things that grownups can't hear. But hearing music and making music are different. You give nothing when you only listen to music — but when you play, you give away joy and a part of yourself and your soul. The playing of music, the giving — the sharing — the communication — the rapture — help your child's personality grow straight and tall in a world which is bent and twisted. Often the world is chaos — in music there is harmony. Where men and nations preach hate, music is a bridge between all races. The Angels of Heaven and Gabriel, too, has a trumpet — but no one has ever said the Angels of Darkness sings or plays one single note of music. Of all the arts, music is the dancing, shimmering rainbow, building a shining arc between the horizons of men's hearts. Painters, writers, sculptors are few — but almost everyone can sing or play an instrument if given the opportunity. Music is the child of love. Hand in hand through life, the two can be as great as any symphony ever written.

Police Activity Is Light Here

West Monroe police booked Lester M. Alexander, 23, of Rt. 5, Box 151, West Monroe, for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages and reckless driving late Friday night.

Alexander was apprehended on Cypress Street at 11:40 p.m.

Bertha Nabors, 3510 Church St., reported the theft of a billfold containing $56 to Monroe police Saturday morning. She told police that she had the billfold on her person when she went to bed Friday night, but that when she awoke Saturday morning it was missing.

President Counts Many Blessings

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson, 58 Saturday, said some of his lifelong dreams are coming true and "no hill country could have a better birthday."

The really difficult problem is Viet Nam, he said.

"But the blessing that I consider best is the opportunity I have today — that I never had before — as leader of the people of this country in waging a war on the dreadful enemies of all mankind; disease, ignorance, illiteracy, poverty, ugliness, and so forth — and to wage it effectively," Johnson said.

It was a day of blessing counting and ever present business for Johnson, capped by a two-cake, expandable, Texas-style dinner with family and friends. Mrs. Johnson took due note of her husband's inclination to bring in unexpected guests and explained that there were going to be extra baked beans, along with barbecue and homemade, fresh peace ice cream.

The President and First Lady received newsmen in the living room of their big white ranch house beside the Pedernales River after rain had canceled out informal chatting and reminiscing outdoors.

How was Johnson feeling on this occasion?

Fine, he said, but he conceded he was a little tired when he got in Friday night from a long, strenuous speaking tour in Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma.

That was the third such trip, with political overtones, in three weekends, and it appears others are coming up. Some observers had thought he looked and sounded a bit weary after an expedition into the Northeast a week ago.

But Johnson's own appraisal was that: "I doubt that I have ever been in better health. I feel good; I sleep well. I had a wonderful night's sleep last night."

There is a constant weight problem, though. Johnson said he takes off three or four pounds in two or three days on the road, then comes back up, but there is no real problem.

"I haven't had to buy any new clothes," he said. "I am still wearing the ranch clothes I have had all year."

Sitting in an easy chair, knees crossed, Johnson was wearing a brown sports jacket, tan Western pants, and highly polished, tooled leather cowboy boots. Mrs. Johnson was wearing an aqua dress.

Reporters wanted to know whether Johnson thinks he has any special problems on his birthday, national or international. His answer underscored the obvious:

"A president always has many problems. They change from day to day and from week to week. Sure, we have problems, grave ones. But we have none that we don't feel confident that we can find the answer to.

"The problems that we have — as I have said so frequently — all year — are the problems that we have been fighting so hard to attain, namely, full employment, a high standard of living, and better housing.

"We are now at a point that I have envisioned and sought all of my adult life — or even as a boy. My earliest memories were hearing my grandfather, who was a leading advocate in this part of the country for social justice, talk about the plight of the tenant farmer, the necessity for the worker to have the protection of bargaining, the need for improvement of our transportation to get the farm out of the mud, and onto blacktop roads, and particularly the little red school house."

Johnson said that was the philosophy his father handed down to him and it came from his grandfathers on both sides.

Johnson got all kinds of congratulatory birthday messages, including good wishes from former President Harry S. Truman, the Western Union telegraph girls in Denver and the mother of a soldier in Viet Nam.

Among those telegrams reaching the ranch were greetings from Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Great Britain, President Ferdinand Marcos of the Philippines and Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia. Thousands more, White House officials said, were waiting back in Washington.

But Johnson said the reason no hillbilly rancher could have had a better birthday was that he has a fine, happy family, a wonderful wife and two daughters, a nice home, good friends, and a prosperous country to live in.

Mrs. Johnson said daughter Lynda was to be on hand in time for the birthday party Saturday night. The President said that daughter Luci and her husband, Patrick J. Nugent, are coming to Texas by car to make their home in Austin but wouldn't arrive in time.

He explained that he had given them some fatherly advice on economy. Luci and Pat, he said, wanted to come down from Washington by plane, but he told them he thought it imprudent to spend $300 on the fare when their fathers still are helping them to attend college.

For about 45 minutes Johnson answered questions and volunteered some remarks of his own. At the end, he followed newsmen out onto the porch and down the walk, keeping up a running commentary. It was at the conclusion of the stroll that he listed Viet Nam as the really big problem.

Parents Who Care

What is music to a child? The wind in a corn field, the croak of a frog, a mother's lullaby — and oh, a thousand things that grownups can't hear. But hearing music and making music are different. You give nothing when you only listen to music — but when you play, you give away joy and a part of yourself and your soul. The playing of music, the giving — the sharing — the communication — the rapture — help your child's personality grow straight and tall in a world which is bent and twisted. Often the world is chaos — in music there is harmony. Where men and nations preach hate, music is a bridge between all races. The Angels of Heaven and Gabriel, too, has a trumpet — but no one has ever said the Angels of Darkness sings or plays one single note of music. Of all the arts, music is the dancing, shimmering rainbow, building a shining arc between the horizons of men's hearts. Painters, writers, sculptors are few — but almost everyone can sing or play an instrument if given the opportunity. Music is the child of love. Hand in hand through life, the two can be as great as any symphony ever written.

If your child is considering the study of piano or organ now being offered by the many teachers in the area, let the experienced staff of PAUL HEWITT'S assist you in selecting an instrument. You may rent a new piano or organ on our RENTAL - PURCHASE PLAN with no obligation to buy.

Coleman Denies McKeithen's Charge Of Gillis Long Ghostwriting Speeches

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP)—Perry (Buster) Coleman said Saturday that Gov. John McKeithen's charge that Gillis W. Long wrote his (Coleman's) speeches was "ridiculous."

"I don't need any help from Gillis Long," said Coleman, who was an unsuccessful candidate in the Aug. 13 primary for the 3rd District Public Service Commission seat.

"Just because Gus Weill has been writing every word McKeithen utters for so long, he thinks that is a way of life, and no one has sense enough to write his own material," said Coleman.

Weill, a former public relations man, is the governor's aide and press secretary.

McKeithen, meanwhile, charged that Alexandria attorney John Sherill was the behind-the-scenes organizer of a "new front — the foresaken friends" of McKeithen.

McKeithen, in a statement telephoned to the Alexandria Town Talk, called Sherrill an "ex-deadhead" who was fired from a Department of Conservation post when McKeithen became governor.

Coleman, in a statement Saturday, said:

"I believe that as an American citizen, and a taxpayer, as well as a qualified voter of the state of Louisiana, that if the newspapers and radio and television medias of this state believe at all in such sacred things as 'Freedom of Speech' and Freedom of the Press,' they will at least allow me enough coverage to defend myself against the scandalous, and neurotic attacks of Gov. John McKeithen.

"For the past two weeks John McKeithen, using his position . . . has castigated me with the most ridiculous lies since the vilifications of Adolph Hitler. . .

"I had every democratic right . . . to run for public office. . . I had as much right to run as McKeithen has to put John Hunt in the race and I paid for my own campaign—while the McKeithen machine . . . paid for Hunt's.

"I campaigned on the true issues in this race, regardless of whose toes I stepped on, feeling that it was high time some of McKeithen's double dealings came to light. . ."

Coleman, a Pollock oilman, ran fifth in the six-man race. However, he polled some 13,000 votes and was a virtual unknown when he entered the race. He finished ahead of State Rep. Parey Branton of Shongaloo, a well-known political figure.

McKeithen labeled Sherrill a "law partner of the poverty man."

This was an apparent reference to Gillis Long, a former deputy director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Long, also a former U.S. representative and one of the unsuccessful candidates in the 1964 gubernatorial election, engaged in a sharp exchange with McKeithen on the two-term proposal this past week.

McKeithen said Saturday, "I want John Sherill, organizer of this new club, to tell the people of central Louisiana what he did when he drew money from the taxpayers of the state. I am sure a lot of people in Alexandria would like to find that out."

The governor said he had been observing with interest the action of the "Foresaken Friends" and that he had investigated its founding.

"This is another front organization formed by (Sargent) Shriver's poverty man and the Lake crowd in Baton Rouge.

"This organizer of the new front behind the scene is John Sherrill. Sherrill is an ex-deadhead out of the Department of Conservation who I found when I became governor.

"He ws listed as special attorney at $663 a month with duties unknown. His job was abolished. This can be confirmed by anyone who would like to see the records at the Department of Conservation."

McKeithen denied that he ha "foresaken any friends" an said, "the doors of the gove nor's mansion have been opene wide now to the people of Lo isiana than during its entire hi tory."

Ethiopia Welcomes De Gaulle

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Emperor Haile Selassie gave President Charles de Gaulle the warmest kind of welcome Saturday — even to the point of scrubbing from the press and radio any mention of the rioting that marked the French leader's visit to French Somaliland.

De Gaulle, 6 feet 4, towered over the bearded emperor, 5 feet 7 as they greeted each other at the flag-bedecked airport.

The French president appeared undisturbed by the two days of rioting in Djibouti set off by independence-seeking demonstrators, and Haile Selassie made things even more comfortable by permitting no mention of the incidents in the government press or radio.

About the only sour note in the red-carpet treatment came from the embassy of the Somali Republic, which issued a statement saying it intended to raise the question of French Somaliland's independence with the Organization of African Unity. This had some point, since headquarters of the OAU is in Addis Ababa.

"The Somali people and the government are confident that member states of the OAU and all freedom-loving and democratic peoples will deplore such tragic events in French Somalia," said the embassy statement.

No one around appeared likely to call De Gaulle's attention to it. The Ethiopians have little sympathy with the Somalis, even on the question of independence. Both Ethiopia and the Somali Republic claim the French colony. The rail link between Addis Ababa and Djibouti is Ethiopia's main outlet to the sea.

Soon after De Gaulle arrived, he and Haile Selassi were closeted in their first round of talks, lasting for 90 minutes. A communique said they talked about "international and particularly African affairs."

They were alone for 45 minutes, after which they were joined by foreign and other top ministers. A French spokesman said French Somalia figured in the discussions but the incidents at Djibouti in which two persons were reported killed were not referred to.

Sen. Smith To Challenge Long Custom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Margaret Chase Smith R-Maine, who thinks some traditions are made to be broken, is getting ready to challenge a long-standing Senate custom.

Providing she is re-elected in November to a fourth six-year term, the silver-haired senator expects to be a candidate for the chairmanship of the Conference of All Republican Senators.

No woman has held this or any other party leadership post in the memory of the oldest Senate inhabitant. Which may be one good reason why Mrs. Smith wants the job.

As jobs go, it is more of an honor than a working assignment. The chairman presides at rare party caucuses and nominally names the members of a committee which passes out assignments for Republicans to the Senate's standing committees.

Then there is the prestige that goes with being asked to the White House as a member of the GOP leadership when the President has a bipartisan conference.

The conference chairmanship, currently held by retiring Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, has come to be regarded as something of a New England possession.

UNITED NATIONS Secretary General U Thant, shown during a fliming session at U.N. headquarters in New York, has promised to say Sept. 1 whether he will accept a second term. The decision could influence the course of the United Nations and the world for years to come. (AP Wirephoto)

Thant's Decision Can Change World

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U Thant will disclose Thursday a decision that can influence for years the course of events in the United Nations and much of the world.

The unassuming Burmese will send a letter to the 117 member nations saying whether he will take a second term as U.N. secretary-general. His current 5-year term ends Nov. 3.

Some among the diplomats, officials and correspondents at this headquarters are predicting Thant will bow out. Others seem as positive that he will stay. Many believe he first will announced that he wants to leave but that the Security Council will recommend him for another term — and that he finally will agree to stay a year and a half or two years.

Thant is 57 and is eligible to retire on pension at $13,750 a year. As secretary-general he gets a car and $65,000 a year in salary and allowances.

If Thant stays, he will keep trying to bring pressure for a settlement in Viet Nam, and to find a solid financial basis for U.N. peacekeeping work and for more money from the rich countries to build up the poor countries.

If he leaves, there will follow first a period of negotiation among the big powers and others to settle upon a successor and, after that, a pause in the activity of the secretary-general while the new man gets his feet on the ground and develops his own style.

The charter makes the secretary-general the U.N. chief administrative officer. He can lay before the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten international peace.

Sometimes the secretary-general has acted on his own or at the request of interested governments to help settle conflicts. Thant won points in the Cuban missile crisis and the West Irian dispute. He failed in the Yemen fighting and on the confrontation of Indonesia against Malaysia, now ended otherwise.

He is the third man to be secretary-general, after Trygve Lie of Norway and Dag Hammasrskjold of Sweden. He had been Burma's U.N. ambassador for four years when Hammarskjold died in a plane crash Sept. 17, 1961, on a peace mission in Africa.

That Nov. 3, the council and the General Assembly unanimously chose Thant acting secretary-general to serve out Hammarskjold's term, to April 10, 1963. On Nov. 30, 1962, they unanimously named him secretary-general for the rest of a normal term running to Nov. 3, 1966.

He need only say the word to get a second term. The presidents of the United States and France, the prime ministers of the Soviet Union and Britain and the African and Asian groups — 61 of the 117 U.N. members — have urged him to continue.

By the way he has led up to his decision, he has perhaps unintentionally built suspense. In January he said he would announce it in June. In June he said he would announce it in August. Now the deadline is next Thursday.

Both publicly and privately, he has talked as if he meant to leave. He has said that being secretary-general is a killing job, that he wants to spend more time with his family, that Burmese like to go back to Burma and that he is disappointed in some of the main objectives he had set for his first term; namely, to ease world tensions, get the Americans and Russians together and put U.N. peacekeeping on a sound financial basis.

Before the budget advisory committee in June, he spoke as if he meant to stay. He said he finally had got a grasp of the U.N. financial picture and had some ideas to try out.

But in Geneva last month he said that while he had not made up his mind definitely, "I have expressed my desire to be relieved of my duties at the end of my term."

When six Asian delegates saw him early this month to tell him the Asian group hoped he would stay on, some came away feeling the chances were 60-40 that he would not.

Thant told the Asians he had not made a definitive decision. But he said five years was enough for any one man to do what he could for the organization. And he recalled that, after his 1½ years as acting secretary-general, he had balked at taking a full five years beyond that.

He said he was weighing personal, official and political reasons before deciding. A listener later reported Thant was "worried about three things" — the lack of a sure way to finance peacekeeping activities, the failures of the development decade of the 1960s and the war in Viet Nam.

Because of a big-power dispute over how to finance peacekeeping, Thant has had to keep begging members to give money for the U.S. force in Cyprus.

The Soviet Union still owes roughly $70 million and France roughly $20 million, through this year, in disputed General Assembly assessments for peacekeeping and other purposes. Neither has made its promised voluntary contribution to help cover the resultant deficit.

As to the development decade, Thant's own appraisal at its midpoint showed that the developing countries, far from advancing toward a goal of an economic growth rate of 5 per cent yearly, had slipped backward. Another U.N. study brought out that the capital flow to such countries from the developed market economies was lower in 1964 than in 1961.

When it came to Viet Nam, North and South seemed bent on war to the finish. The United States paid scant attention to Thant's peace proposals. Red China accused him of promoting a "peace talks fraud" for the Americans. The Soviet Union refused to work for a new Geneva peace conference.

Thant seemed disheartened. He told the Asians, "I am only human, and the things that weigh most heavily on me are the problems of my country and my region."

He said if he decided not to continue he would help the council find a successor, and that should take only two months.

Only Thant himself has broad support for secretary-general. At least 15 other men have been mentioned to succeed him, some more seriously than others. They are:

From Asia — U.N. Undersecretary Chakravarthi V. Narasimhan of India; U.N. Ambassador Abdul Rahman Pazhwak of Afghanistan, only candidate for president of the General Assembly to convene Sept. 20, and Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan of Iran, U.N. high commissioner for refugees.

From Africa — Foreign Minister Arsene Assouan Usher of the Ivory Coast; Mongi Slim, an assistant to the president of Tunisia; Gabriel D'Arboussier of Senegal, executive director of the U.N. Institute for Training and Research; Diallo Telli of Guinea, secretary-general of the Organization of African Unity, and three U.N. ambassadors — Chief S. O. Adebo of Nigeria, Louis Ignacio-Pinto of Dahomey and Achkar Marof of Guinea.

From Europe — Foreign Minister Per Haekkerup of Denmark and Ralph Enckell, Finnish ambassador to Stockholm.

From Latin America — Ex-President Adolfo Lopez Mateos of Mexico; Luis Padilla Nervo of Mexico, judge on the international court; U.N. Ambassador Francisco Cuevas Cancino of Mexico, and Hernan Santa Cruz of Chile, assistant director for Latin America of the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

Vice-President's Son, Small-Town Beauty Wed

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The small-town beauty, who wanted a quiet wedding, and the vice president's son were married Saturday before 675 well-wishers that included top Minnesota political figures.

Hundreds jammed blocked streets outside St. Olaf's Roman Catholic church in downtown Minneapolis as blonde, blue-eyed Donna Erickson and Robert A. Humphrey exchanged vows.

The marriage, billed as the city's social event of the season, drew the top names in Minnesota's Democratic- Farmer-Labor party, the organization Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey helped build.

Guests who filled the first floor of the big brick, modern Spanish-style church included Sens. Eugene J. McCarthy and Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota, Gov. Karl F. Rolvaag, Lt. Gov. A.M. Keith, Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin and U.S. Dist. Court Judge Miles W. Lord.

The radiant 21-year-old bride smiled beneath an elbow-length illusion veil, belying the pneumonia that had forced postponement of the wedding from July 9.

Humphrey, 22 a Congregationalist repeated his vows in a strong voice as he knelt only a few feet from the beaming vice president.

The bride who sang a spoof of the Secret Service while on her way to winning the Miss Hastings, Minn., title in 1963, spoke in a voice barely audible to Secret Servicemen in the church balcony.

Miss Erickson, from Hampton, Minn., a town of about 300, drew cheers and applause as she arrived at the church wearing her wedding gown of ivory pure silk peau de soie with empire bodice and chapel-length watteau train. Her blonde hair was piled in a postiche.

She carried an arm cascade bouquet of white roses as she was escorted up the aisle by her uncle, Larry Doffing of Hampton. Her mother, Marcella Erickson, has been a widow since last July.

The 55-minute ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Charles MacDonald, chaplain for the Newman Center at Mankato State College, where the couple met at a fraternity party and where they will return for Humphrey's senior-year studies in business administration.

Father MacDonald told the couple that marriage is "an act of faith, an act of trust, a call one to another out of isolation."

At the end of the ceremony, which was conducted mostly in English, Archbishop Leo Binz of St. Paul spoke to the newlyweds, saying "May God shower heavenly blessings upon you."

Perez Calls Order For School Mixes Impossible Task

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Calling it a "worse catastrophe than Hurricane Betsy," fiery Leander H. Perez said Saturday it "would be impossible" for his Plaquemines Parish to comply with a federal judge's ruling desegregating public school classrooms.

Perez, who has had the last — and frequently the only — word about what goes on in the oil-rich county for more than 40 years, would give no indication of what course he would take.

Schools in the parish, through which the ponderous Mississippi River exits into the Gulf of Mexico south of New Orleans, are scheduled to open on Wednesday.

Chief U.S. Dist. Court Judge Herbert W. Christenberry Friday night directed that grades 1, 7, 10 and 12, plus two other grades chosen by the school board, be open to all pupils, regardless of race.

From his office in a New Orleans skyscraper, Perez fumed and thundered Saturday over the decision.

"Outrageous, a prostitution of government, part of a drive for the Communist-dominated bloc vote," said Perez, 76, a cigar-smoking white-maned lawyer who is president of the Plaquemines Parish Commission.

"The decision even enjoins our council and school authorities from talking about private schools and enjoins even the parents from sending their children to private schools," Perez said.

"Compliance with the ruling is impossible. It is an outrage against our people and will deny the children of the finest school opportunities offered anywhere."

He said the court action was not sought by Negro residents of the parish.

The Justice Department filed the school desegregation suit.

Judge Christenberry, a gray-haired, bespectacled former prosecuting attorney, signed an order which gave the Justice Department just about everything it asked for.

The decision calls for desegregation to begin with freedom of choice for all students in selecting their schools when classes begin Wednesday but gives the parish until Sept. 12 to work out the technical problems.

Perez said he and other parish officials had been working to build Plaquemine up since Hurricane Betsy last fall while federal authorities have been "working to tear it down."

The parish has about 34,000 residents with a 3-1 white ratio.

Perez was excommunicated by the Roman Catholic Church in 1962 for urging defiance of the late Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummell's edict that parochial schools be integrated.

Later that same year, Perez stood outside Our Lady of Good Harbor Catholic School at Buras — a Plaquemines Parish town — and told a white crowd that the priest who ran the school was "a sniveling coward."

Five Negro children appeared for the first day of classes at the parochial school along with 38 whites. The whites then boycotted the school and the Negroes were withdrawn. Priests and nuns kept the doors open but had no pupils.

In 1963, a mysterious explosion wrecked the school. When it was repaired, Perez refused to let it reopen, contending that church officials hadn't obtained the proper permits from the parish to make the repairs. It is still closed.

Man Makes Hospital: Finally

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) It took three ambulances, but 55-year-old Louis Harris finally made it to a hospital here Saturday.

Harris suffered an apparent stoke at his home, officials said, an dthe first ambulance was en route to the hospital when it collided with a moving van about three blocks from the hospital.

The second ambulance dispatched to the scene collided with a car about one-half block from the hospital, police said.

The third ambulance got Harris to the hospital, where a spokesman said he was not in serious condition. He suffered no injuries as a result of the traffic accidents, attendants, said.

Exercise

Specialist Fourth Class Donald R. Colson, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle E. Kraeer, 3908 Grammont St., is participating in a three-week field training exercise conducted by the 4th Armored Division in Grafenwohr, Germany.

He is regularly stationed near Erlangen with Headquarters Company of the division's Third Battalion, 51st Infantry. During the exercise, scheduled to end Sept. 9, he will take part in weapons firing and tactical maneuvers.

Spec Colson is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High School. He entered the Army in Jan., 1961, and arrived overseas in June of this year.

Adjustment

Opening of school is causing many adjustments for both parents and youngsters in Monroe and Ouachita Parish. But the biggest adjustment was this weekend, when a West Monroe young lady had to celebrate her birthday early.

It seems Melinda Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hammond, 202 Belmont St., West Monroe, will be eight years old Monday.

Because of the opening of school 10 of her friends were at the house Saturday to help her celebrate — by eating all the cake and ice cream they could hold.

Man Kills Himself After Gun Spree

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Police said a former mental patient who attempted to kill members of his family last year shot and killed himself Saturday after fatally wounding his stepdaughter and shooting three other persons, including a policeman.

The man, identified as T. Fred Paschal, 70, barricaded himself in a house in northwest Atlanta while police used an armored car to lob tear gas into the small concrete-block dwelling.

Officers said Paschal shot his stepdaughter, Pearl Robertson Paschal, 44, at close range with a shotgun when she drove up to the home with other relatives. Also hit by pellets were Paschal's wife, Mabel, and his granddaughter, Beverly Robertson, 7. They were not seriously hurt.

The policeman, E.F. Nixon, was shot in the neck and shoulder when he arrived with another officer in answer to a call. He was recovering at a hospital where the stepdaughter died about two hours after the shooting.

The officer with Nixon, Patrolman C.C. Latini, called for reinforcements and detectives, patrolmen and Fulton County deputies arrived armed with tear gas, shotguns and rifles.

Officers said Paschal, still using the shotgun, exchanged shots with police until an armored car arrived. The car was driven up near the house and tear gas fired into the building.

Detectives J.R. Stamps and B.F. Addison managed to reach the back door and went inside, wearing gas masks and carrying armored shields. They said they found Paschal's body in the hallway.

Detective B.O. Tollison said Paschal had a shotgun wound in the stomach. "He apparently took his own life," Tollison said.

Paschal's grandson-in-law, Roy Robertson, said Paschal was jealous of the attention Pearl Paschal paid to the five Robertson children, her grandchildren.

Three-Car Crash Kills Louisianian

CAIRO, Ill. (AP)—Three persons, two from St. Louis suburbs and one from New Orleans, were killed Saturday in a three-car collision in Kentucky two miles south of Cairo.

Police said the accident occurred on U.S. 60 in northern Kentucky, just south of Cairo.

Viet Nam Elections

Saigon Tailor Hits Voter Trail

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—Mai Van Chom set out with a loudspeaker mounted on a pedicab Saturday to talk his way into South Viet Nam's constitutional assembly.

Chom, 48, is an impoverished but energetic tailor.

His chances of winning a seat in the assembly are slim. The fact, however, that he is trying at all gave some hope that the election Sept. 11 may arouse enthusiasm from the peasants and workers who make up the vast majority of the people.

Disregarding the very real possibility of Viet Cong terrorism in the generally poor 5th Precinct of Saigon, Chom took to the street corners with criticism of most aspects of life in Viet Nam.

Like others among the 542 candidates, Chom was evidently feeling his way to see if the military government of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky would keep its promise of a free election.

Chom's audiences were frequently made up mainly of curious children. His amplified voice, however, was reaching into busy shops and homes and his unique approach assured attention.

Lacking money, Chom mounted a crude public address system on one of the three-wheel bicycle taxis favored in Saigon—his son pedals one for a living. With no source of electric power, Chom carried an extension cord and at each stop, went into a shop or house to ask if he could plug in. He could.

Chom is the third man on a five-man list of the Patriotic Labor party, which has no ties outside the district. Though handicapped by his position on the ticket under the proportions voting system, he is campaigning vigorously.

"Our symbol is the rooster because we want to wake the people," he said.

Like most other candidates, Chom kept his criticism of the Ky regime in low key.

The generals who overthrew President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963 were good, he told his audiences, but the succession of military coups since has permitted irresponsible men to gain power.

He said the regime was guilty of starting a "civil war" when it used force to put down Buddhist dissidence in Hue and Da Nang last May.

In a veiled reference to the United States, which now has more than 300,000 servicemen in Viet Nam, Chom said ultimately the Vietnamese must settle their own affairs. And he added what is widely known and seldom said nowadays: "The Vietnamese just don't like foreigners."

That led him to the Viet Cong —who have already started a terror campaign in an effort to sabotage the election.

The Viet Cong he said, are creatures of Chinese and Russian communism. He held it is the foreigners who have forced a civil war on the Vietnamese.

Discussing the economy, he said "The people do not have enough rice, and it is dear."

On the new constitution the assembly is to write, Chom was vague.

"I will support a constitution which suits the people," he said.

The assembly—117 men including nine who will be appointed to tribal seats—will have six months to write the constitution.

Perez Calls Order For School Mixes Impossible Task

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — Calling it a "worse catastrophe than Hurricane Betsy," fiery Leander H. Perez said Saturday it "would be impossible" for his Plaquemines Parish to comply with a federal judge's ruling desegregating public school classrooms.

Perez, who has had the last — and frequently the only — word about what goes on in the oil-rich county for more than 40 years, would give no indication of what course he would take.

Schools in the parish, through which the ponderous Mississippi River exits into the Gulf of Mexico south of New Orleans, are scheduled to open on Wednesday.

Chief U.S. Dist. Court Judge Herbert W. Christenberry Friday night directed that grades 1, 7, 10 and 12, plus two other grades chosen by the school board, be open to all pupils, regardless of race.

From his office in a New Orleans skyscraper, Perez fumed and thundered Saturday over the decision.

"Outrageous, a prostitution of government, part of a drive for the Communist-dominated bloc vote," said Perez, 76, a cigar-smoking white-maned lawyer who is president of the Plaquemines Parish Commission.

"The decision even enjoins our council and school authorities from talking about private schools and enjoins even the parents from sending their children to private schools," Perez said.

"Compliance with the ruling is impossible. It is an outrage against our people and will deny the children of the finest school opportunities offered anywhere."

He said the court action was not sought by Negro residents of the parish.

The Justice Department filed the school desegregation suit.

Judge Christenberry, a gray-haired, bespectacled former prosecuting attorney, signed an order which gave the Justice Department just about everything it asked for.

The decision calls for desegregation to begin with freedom of choice for all students in selecting their schools when classes begin Wednesday but gives the parish until Sept. 12 to work out the technical problems.

Perez said he and other parish officials had been working to build Plaquemine up since Hurricane Betsy last fall while federal authorities have been "working to tear it down."

The parish has about 34,000 residents, with a 3-1 white ratio.

Perez was excommunicated by the Roman Catholic Church in 1962 for urging defiance of the late Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummell's edict that parochial schools be integrated.

Later that same year, Perez stood outside Our Lady of Good Harbor Catholic School at Buras — a Plaquemines Parish town — and told a white crowd that the priest who ran the school was "a sniveling coward."

Five Negro children appeared for the first day of classes at the parochial school along with 38 whites. The whites then boycotted the school and the Negroes were withdrawn. Priests and nuns kept the doors open but had no pupils.

In 1963, a mysterious explosion wrecked the school. When it was repaired, Perez refused to let it reopen, contending that church officials hadn't obtained the proper permits from the parish to make the repairs. It is still closed.

Specialist Fourth Class Donald R. Colson, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle E. Kraeer, 3908 Grammont St., is participating in a three-week field training exercise conducted by the 4th Armored Division in Grafenwohr, Germany.

He is regularly stationed near Erlangen with Headquarters Company of the division's Third Battalion, 51st Infantry. During the exercise, scheduled to end Sept. 9, he will take part in weapons firing and tactical maneuvers.

Spec. Colson is a graduate of Ouachita Parish High School. He entered the Army in Jan., 1961, and arrived overseas in June of this year.

Adjustment

Opening of school is causing many adjustments for both parents and youngsters in Monroe and Ouachita Parish. But the biggest adjustment was this weekend, when a West Monroe young lady had to celebrate her birthday early.

It seems Melinda Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Hammond, 202 Belmont St., West Monroe, will be eight years old Monday.

Because of the opening of school 10 of her friends were at the house Saturday to help her celebrate — by eating all the cake and ice cream they could hold.

The hole was drilled to 11,550. A good gas sand was logged at 5,600. Operators held off until after the State Mineral Board lease sale, and, meanwhile moved the rig to the site of No. 2 State, same block, and drilled a confirmation test, which revealed a good oil sand at 6,400 feet.

Red Guards Demonstrate For Envoys

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) —Teen-age Red Guards on Friday night shouted slogans at foreign diplomats on their way to a film showing and cocktail party at the Soviet Embassy in Peking, the official Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported Saturday.

The agency's Peking correspondent said the Red Guards occupied the "Street of Struggle Against Revionism" which ends at the Soviet Embassy building and blocked it with signs and portaits of President Mao Tzetung.

Diplomatic cars had difficulty getting through the dense mass of demonstrators, the report said.

The Red Guards, with closed fists, shouted slogans like, "Down with revisionism and imperialists, we will bury you," the report said. Every car passing through was met with shouts.

"The ambassador of Afghanistan went through the throng of guards and was met with shouts against revisionism and imperialism. The same happened to the ambassadors and chiefs of missions of all Socialist — Communist — countries, to the ambassador of France or diplomats from Congo-Brazzaville or Nepal," the report said.

Being Pastor To Wealthy Big Problem

By EARL LAWRIMORE
Charlotte Observer Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Being a minister to the poor has its problems, but a less-publicized challenge to today's churches is the new wealthy.

An Episcopal minister in Charlotte knows personally of young couples "struggling to reach the top."

"But when they get there, they find they've only run into a new, often tremendously complex set of problems," he said.

"Trying to keep up with these people can be a real rat race," a Presbyterian minister said. "It's utterly impossible to decide one morning to have a meeting and that night expect even half the people to be there. Meetings must be planned weeks in advance."

"Sure I enjoy the game," he confessed, "But on the greens I can make contacts and establish relationships I couldn't make otherwise."

What are some of the challenges of a prosperous, successful congregation?

In first place are money and its temptations.

"Not only do the wealthy find that money provides many benefits," one minister said, "but it also makes them liable to many special temptations and to tremendous pressure from their fellow citizens to share the money, their abilities and free time."

Pastors also find that weekends bring "the great exodus from town — to lakes, the mountains of North Carolina or the beaches — anything to get away for a while to relax."

One minister believes leaving town "may be the only way such people can keep their sanity. If it's impossible for them to get away, they might try to escape through drinking."

Alcohol is another problem pastors of wealthy congregations must face.

"The wealthy are of course not the only ones who drink too much, but they don't have to worry about neglecting their families financially — they can just abut drink all they want," a minister said.

The wealthy couple can get caught up in the drive to succeed and leave their children on the sidelines, causing other problems.

A familiar complaint to pastors is: "I gave that boy everything, a new car, a gasoline credit card, a big allowance and now he's just running wild."

There are advantages to having a wealthy and well-educated congregation. Pastors have little trouble finding Sunday School teachers, choir members, group leaders and deacons.

"These people are as gracious and generous as any I've ever known," a minister said. "They are full of enthusiasm and help in as many tasks as they possibly have time for."

Village Builders Solve Problems

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Builders of sets for "Dr. Doolittle" solved a few problems to accommodate 115 types of animals. All it took was five months and $200,000.

The set is an African village of 11 huts on stilts, two lakes and three waterfalls on a 10-acre site at 20th Century-Fox's Malibu ranch. It's surrounded by a 10-foot high chain link fence.

Two Negro Groups Put Off March

CHICAGO (AP) — Two Negro groups dissatisfied with an open housing agreement between Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Chicago area leaders postponed Saturday for one week a march into racially tense suburban Cicero.

The march of dissidents had been planned for today.

The West Side Organization — WSO — and the Congress of Racial Equality — CORE — put off the demonstration after a long closed-door conference. The WSO said other groups which had been enlisted for the planned march were governed by the postponement decision.

Chester Robinson, executive director of the WSO, said more time was needed to mobilize its forces.

The Rev. Andrew J. Young, executive secretary of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, of which King is chairman, took part in the closed-door meeting, an appearance that might have had some influence on the decision.

Young is a leader of the Chicago Freedom Movement which concluded the open housing pact with civic, religious, business and political leaders of the community Friday. This group postpone dits march today, which had been expect to put more than 3,000 demonstrators into the streets.

A spokesman for the Chicago Freedom Movement earlier was bitterly critical of Robinson and the CORE chapter, headed by Robert Lucas.

This source said that the dissident rights groups were those whose leaders had taken little, if any, part in the month of marching demonstrations in Chicago white neighborhoods.

"They include the pop-offs who have no responsibility and want none," the source close to King said.

He said that the membership represented at Saturday's meeting was "very small."

Robinson and Lucas said that the organizations which had been ready to march today included the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, ACT, the Deacons for Defense, and the Oakland Committee for Community Improvement.

Young did not discuss the splinter meeting with newsmen. Before he entered the conference, he said only, "There are one million Negroes in Chicago. We represent a part of them."

After the conference, Robinson announced the postponement of one week. He said, "We'll march until open housing becomes a reality."

Robinson called the Friday agreement "a sellout, betrayal and treason."

He said that his group respects King, "but we are rejecting the terms of the Friday summit meeting. We are marching to demonstrate that the rank and file are a new breed without fear."

Lucas told newsmen that he spoke at the meeting and urged the postponement, "so we could have enough time to get it organized."

After Robinson announced Friday night that his organization would make a rump march, tension in Cicero, a white community of 70,000 on Chicago's western fringe, shot up to the pitch it had reached before Friday's open housing pact.

Cicero's village attorney, Christy Berkos, called Gov. Otto Kerner's office to renew a request for Illinois National Guard troops.

Kerner earlier promised troops to guard the march planned by King's movement, but preparations were called off.

Idle Funds May Bring In $12,000

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — The Mississippi Game and Fish Commission stands to earn about $12,000 between now and May 1968 through investment of idle funds under authority of a bill authored by Rep. Jim True, Harrison, which was passed by the 1966 legislature.

State Treasurer William F. Winter advised True in a letter that $200,000 of the game and fish protection fund has been invested in U.S. government notes which mature in May 1968 with a yield of approximately 5.8 per cent.

Investment of the funds was authorized by Billy Joe Cross, executive director of the Game and Fish Commission.

"As a result of your bill," Winter wrote True, "we shall stand to make almost $12,000 between now and May of 1968. You ought to take a lot of satisfaction in getting this bill through the legislature."

True recalled Saturday he had introduced broad legislation authorization to invest all idle funds of the state. But, he added, the measure died in committee.

"I decided then the best approach would be to do it piecemeal," True said, "so this year I decided to get one fund invested."

As a member of the Game and Fish Committee in the House, True said he was especially interested in the game and fish protection fund which, he determined, "had been lying idle for about 24 years with never less than $200,000 in it."

It was referred to as a "frozen fund," he said, requiring an act of the legislature to spend from it. "It seemed ridiculous to me for that money to be lying idle in a bank somewhere," True said.

Gay China Demonstrations Begin Taking On Ugly Notes

Editor's Note — Canadian free-lance journalist Cecile Nicholls returned to Hong Kong Friday after 20 days in Communist China. She witnessed the mass marchers and destructive activities of the ultra patriotic "Red Goard" youth groups. In this exclusive article written for The Associated Press she relates her experiences.

By CECILE NICHOLLS

HONG KONG (AP) — The demonstrations in Peking began in a fiesta atmosphere. Everyone was gay and smiles were everywhere.

But by the time I reached the midway point of my 20-day tour of Communist China it had taken on an ugly note.

I arrived in Peking Aug. 8, only hours before crowds began gathering in streets to celebrate the meeting of the Central Committee of the Communist party of China.

It was after this session that it was disclosed Defense Minister Lin Piao had been elevated to become party chairman Mao Tze-tung's heir apparent, and student units began mass demonstrations to support Mao and condemn what was described as bourgeois traditions.

I saw more than a mile of bicycles parked at least 50-deep along a road near a school where students were holding mass discussions on the revolutionary idea of disbelieving their professors in favor of "creative self-reliance."

There seemed never a moment, for more than 10 days, when the sound of drums and cymbals could not be heard day and night.

In Shanghai, when an estimated 800,000 marchers filed past my hotel, it seemed — in my 12th-floor room — as though a train as long as China itself was rumbling past.

At 3 a.m., I took some sleeping pills with the hope of getting some rest. But the beating of drums and cymbals, and the singing of revolutionary songs and shouted slogans kept sleep away.

At 5:30 a.m. — more than 20 hours after the demonstrations began outside my hotel window — marchers continued shuffling by, spurred on by cheerleaders.

In Tainan, Wushi and Soochow, marchers remained in a festive mood, even applauding foreigners as our bus stopped alongside.

Up to this point there had been no sign of violence. It was in Hangchow that I first saw evidence of destruction, when middle — high — school students desecrated a Buddhist temple. They were probably members of the ultranationalistic Red Guard organization which has been so widely publicized.

Just before I arrived at Lin Yin Temple a detachment of teen-agers had defiled the images of Buddha and pasted on the two large temples crude signs scrawled on sheets of old newspapers.

By the tme I reached the main temple paper notices already were pasted on the face and body of the main Buddha while two boys, one armed wtih a paste bucket and brush, slapped notices on other Buddhas in the upper temple.

On being questioned through my interpreter, the head monk was reported to have said that "This is probably a very good thing."

As Lin Yin Temple is a national monument, the vandals made only the symbolic gesture of breaking one bench and throwing a small Buddha to the ground.

We passed the crowd on the road soon after, strutting back to town to drum and cymbal, banners high, in search of further burgeois signs. At 10:30 p.m., they knocked down, just nay my hotel, a marble monolith commemorating the visit of an ancient dynasty emperor. The pieces lay on the ground as we drove to the railroad station the next morning.

My guide said that similar demonstrations would be taking place all over the country on Aug. 24 and 25. At Fushan I saw evidence of this. Commune members had broken a granite gravestone of a former landlord and were using a second, bearing his name, as a bridge across the stream in their commune village street.

Soviets Tell China To Halt 'Hooligans'

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has demanded that Communist China take immediate steps to halt "outrages" by Chinese hooligans — apparently meaning the youthful "Red Guards" — at the Soviet Embassy in Peking. Tass reported Saturday the Kremlin handed an "emphatic protest" note to a Red Chinese diplomat here Friday.

The Soviet news agency said the note itemized incidents of violence and cited calls "for hatred and violence against the Soviet people" and added:

"These outrages are being committed before the eyes of Chinese policemen, who do not take any steps to cut short such actions."

"On the Soviet government's instructions, the Foreign Ministry of the U.S.S.R. demanded that effective measures be taken to put an end to such actions."

The Russians said the Chinese had already rejected an earlier version of the protest. The two Communist giants thus appeared to be nearing a point at which the threat of a break in diplomatic relations might become a real possibility.

The Soviet note charged that Chinese hooligans outside the Soviet Embassy in Peking were harassing Soviet diplomats, threatening their safety and committing other "outrages," thus violating basic norms of international law protecting diplomats and embassies.

The protest demanded that the Chinese take immediate and unconditional steps to insure the safety of Soviet officials in Peking and end the incidents.

Should the Chinese reject the Soviet note, Moscow might have to choose between a push toward a formal break in relations with Peking, or do nothing. By doing nothing the Soviets could leave themselves open to the charge of "paper tiger" which China now levels at the United States.

The Soviet note said China's Foreign Ministry defended "the participants in the provocations against the embassy of the U.S.S.R." by saying they were in "accord with the methods of the current political campaign," the cultural purge in China.

This suggested the Russians were talking about the high-riding Red Guards and their actions against foes of Mao Tze-tung.

The Soviet note made these charges:

"Acts of holliganism" outside the Soviet Embassy in Peking "seriously hamper the normal work of the embassy and create a threat to the security of its officials."

On Aug. 22 an embassy car flying the Sovite flag was stopped by a Chinese mob. The Soviet charge d' affaires, was forced to leave the car and return to the embassy, was unable to attend an official function, the airport departure for Moscow of Vice President Reuben C. Kamanga of Zambia.

The charge d' affaires protested to the Chinese Foreign Ministry and was told, in effect, that the Chinese could do nothing about the incident, would do nothing to prevent such incidents in the future, and "did not want to assume responsibility for these outrages."

"There are also cases when other embassy officials are prevented from leaving embassy territory."

"Once a stone was thrown by someone in the crowd at a Soviet Embassy official who was on the territory of the embassy."

Pat Nugent Groomsman, Luci Absent

WAUKEGAN, Ill. (AP)—Patrick L. Nugent served as groomsman at the wedding of friends Saturday but his bride of three weeks, the former Luci Johnson, did not attend the church ceremony.

"It's her day and I don't want to spoil it," President Johnson's daughter said of Saturday's bride, the former Diane Welker, who became Mrs. Bruce Pecaro. Luci said her presence at the wedding might cause attention that would detract from her friends big day.

The Nugents drove to Chicago from the East this week. They plan to go on to Texas for the President's birthday observance this weekend. Johnson turned 58 Saturday.

Nugent and Pecaro have been friends throughout boyhood and attended Marquette University together. Pecaro and his bride are 23.

Red Sloganeers

TOKYO (AP) — The sloganeering campaign of Communist China's rampaging young "Red Guards" to change the name of Peking—"Northern Capital" to Tong Fang Hong "The East is Red"—apparently has made no initial progress. The official New China News Agency was still using the Peking dateline on dispatches.

Louisiana Gets Funds

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Interior Department announced the apportionment of $1,115,026 to Louisiana from the land and water conservation fund.

The money is available after approval of individual projects by appropriate state agencies and the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation, which administers the fund.

A total of $59,132,700 was apportioned to the states and territories, which is 90 per cent of the $65.7 million appropriated by Congress.

The state's share of the fund provides for financial assistance to their political subdivisions and to other non-federal public agencies for outdoor recreation purposes. These apportionments will remain available for qualifying projects through June 30, 1969.

TOKYO (AP) — The sloganeering campaign of Communist China's rampaging young "Red Guards" to change the name of Peking—"Northern Capital" to Tong Fang Hong "The East is Red"—apparently has made no initial progress. The official New China News Agency was still using the Peking dateline on dispatches.

Seven Die In Crash Of 2 Cars

PORT CHICAGO, Calif. (AP) — Seven persons were killed — four of them members of an Antioch family and the other three sailors — in a head-on collision Friday night.

Four children were injured.

The scene was such confusion that the dead were not identified until Saturday.

The highway patrol said three sailors, eastbound, pulled out to pass another vehicle and sideswiped it.

The sailors' car then plowed head on into a westbound car carrying Mr. and Mrs. Tony J. Davi and six children.

The dead:

Sailors Henry Breedings, 21, Phoenix, Ariz., Richard Baughns, 22, Memphis, Tenn., and Willie Carey Jr., 28, all of the ammountion ship Firedrake, docked at Mare Island.

Tony J. Davi, 35, an employe of the U.S. Steel Corp.; his wife Rita, and their youngest children, Pauline, 1½, and Nancy, 6 months.

Three other Davi children, Theresa, 9; Anthony 5, and Loraine, 3; and a neighbor Linda Augustine, 13, were injured.

The Davi family was driving to Kaiser Hospital in Walnut Creek to visit their eldest child, Sandy, 13, who is ill of infectious hepatitis.

7 In Family Uninjured In Accident

A family of seven escaped serious injury Saturday evening when the car in which they were traveling went off the highway and overturned, six miles west of West Monroe on I-20.

The seven were taken to Glenwood Hospital by a Kilpatrick Funeral Home ambulance where they were treated for various cuts and bruises and released.

The car was driven by Santiago L. Mamales of Seattle, Wash. With him were his wife, Leonarda, 37, and five children, ranging in ages from three to 11 years.

Reports of the state police show that the car was traveling west around 6 p.m. when a rear axle broke, causing Mamales to loose control of the vehicle.

While traffic was slowed on the highway to view the accident, another mishap occurred involving cars driven by John T. Cowsen, Arcadia, and Ely Nance Lemons, Copeville, Tex.

Reports show that the point of impact was the rear of the Cowsen vehicle and the front of the car driven by Lemons, who was charged with following too close.

WRECKAGE IN foreground, crunched into the shape of a dragon's snout, was a car in which a civilian died in a two-auto fatality near Laplace early Saturday. In the background is the other car in which five U.S. Marines died outright and a sixth Marine died in a hospital later. (AP Wirephoto)

Flier From Winnfield Gets 'Viet Nam Bird'

From World Wire Services

A 24-year-old lieutenant from Winnfield who is stationed in Viet Nam was recently flying his Army helicopter over the central highlands of the country when he heard a crack and felt a jolt against his leg.

Lt. George B. Harrison was sure he had been shot when he saw pieces of the chopper's plexiglass bubble on the floor and blood trickling down his leg.

Further investigation showed that he had not been hit by a bullet, but rather by a large bird. The fowl had been cut as it crashed through the plexiglass and bled on Harrison's leg.

Upon landing, Harrison admitted that he did not know what kind of bird it was but he felt that "it must have come from North Viet Nam."

Harrison, the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Harrison of Winnfield, graduated from Winnfield High School in 1959 and attended Northwest State College in Natchitoches. He received his B. S. from LSU in 1964 and was commissioned to the Air Force ROTC while at LSU.

He has been in Viet Nam since June 14 and expects to remain there for a year.

Louisiana Crash Kills Seven Men

The Navy identified the Marines as Pfc. Robert R. Muro, 20, San Leandro, Calif.; Pvt. George W. Fleming Jr., 22, Pittsburgh; Pvt. Greg N. Bardwell, 20, Santa Maria, Calif.; Pfc. Phillip S. McAfee, 20, Norwalk, Calif.; Pvt. Thomas F. Loy III, 19, Pittsburgh; and Pfc. Jorge Delacruz, 18, El Paso, Tex.

Delacruz died several hours after the crash in a hospital at New Orleans, some 20 miles to the south of Laplace. The others died in the wreckage.

The civilian, driver of the other car, who died in the crash, was William D. McIntyre, 21, of nearby Ponchatoula.

World War II Soviet Aces Train Viets

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet flying aces of World War II are training North Vietnamese pilots, Pravda reported Sunday.

The young Vietnamese officer-cadets are going through an extensive course at the oldest Soviet air force school.

"They are learning to pilot ultrasound interceptors, to strike the enemy at any altitude and in any weather," the Soviet Communist party newspaper said.

New Publishing Series Is Cited

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Librarian

One of the most worthwhile publishing ventures is that which Franklin Watts started a little more than a year ago. It is called the Keith Jenison series and it consists of reprinting important books in 18 point type to appeal to older readers and those whose eyesight is failing. We have a standing order with them for five copies of each book published. This gives us one copy for each branch and one for the Bookmobile collection. Last week we received nine new titles in this series. They are: "National Velvet" by Enid Bagnold, "Incredible Journey," by Sheila Burnford, "My Antonia" by Willa Cather, "Lord Hornblower" by C. S. Forester. "Mister Roberts" by Thomas Heggen, "A Bell for Adono" by John Hersey, "Cry the Beloved Country" by Alan Paton, "The Sea of Grass" by Conrad Richter and "The Sea Around Us" by Rachel Carson. Many of these titles appear on college preparatory reading lists and will be a boon to the students who have weak eyes.

There are several readable novels this week, although there is nothing outstanding. "Norwood" by Charles Portis is a humorous novel about a simple character named "Norwood Pratt." His adventures are almost unbelievable, but the book is an entertaining one. "The Secret of Santa Vittoria" by Robert Chruchton is a well-written story based on a true incident in World War II, when the villagers of a small Italian village outwitted the SS troops. Read it and enjoy good writing and humorous expression. "Statues in a Garden" by Isabel Colegate is a novel of manners in the summer of 1914. It is a slight book, but will appeal to many readers. There are three mystery stories available this week, "Panic in Box C" by John Dickson Carr, "Footsteps on the Stairs" by Jean Potts and "In Sickness and In Health" by Ruth Rendell.

There are a number of new books in the philosophy, religion and social science section. "The Complete Illustrated Book of Psychic Sciences" by Walter Gibson is very interesting. "The Corrupted Land" by Fred J. Cook is a study of social morality in modern America and is a must of the person disturbed about conditions in our times. "The Vulnerable Americans" by Curt Gentry is a discussion of business ethics and swindlers who prey on the unwary. "Encyclopedia of Bible Creatures" by Vilhelm Moller - Christenses is a very interesting book about the animals of the Bible. There are two new books by Paul Tillich, one of the greatest religious philosophers of our time. They are "On the Boundary" and "The Future of Religions." Leslie D. Weatherhead is the author of "The Christian Agnostic." He is one of the most popular writers in the religious field and his book will be widely read. "The God of the Beginnings" by Robert Aron is a discussion of the powers of God. Christopher F. Mooney is the author of "Teilhard De Chardin and the Mystery of Christ." It is a very well-written discussion. "God Speaks to Women Today" by Eugenia Price is an excellent book of self help. "A Religious History of America" by Edwin Gaustad is a splendid survey volume. "The Coming Water Faminc" by James C. Wright is a good discussion of the question of water poliution and water conservation. There are two new books about the Warren Commission reports on the death of President Kennedy. One is "Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein and the other is "Rush to Judgment" by Mark Lane. Both of these authors are not satisfied with the Warren Commission report. "Your Social Security and Medicare Guide" produced by the J. K. Lasser Institute contains the answers to many questions.

"Semantics and Common Sense" by Louis Bernard Salomon is a very fine book on the origin and study of languages. "A History of Genetics" by Alfred Sturdevant is most timely in these days when there is talk of breaking the genetic code. There is one addition to the genealogy collection this week. It is "Putnam County George Records" collected by Frances Wynd.

Veteran Director Looks To Future

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Movie director Lesley Selander is near completion of his 150th feature film, but says he's not considering retirement.

Selander, who began directing in 1936, has also directed several television series, including 46 episodes of "'Laramie" and 59 "Lassie" shows.

Producers Buy Adamson Books

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The makers of "Born Free" hope to repeat its boxoffice success twice.

Producers Sam Jaffee and Paul Radin have bought the movie rights to "Living Free" and "Forever Free," the second and third books on the adventures of Elsa the lioness by Joy Adamson.

Lunar Orbiter To Begin Tedious Job Of Transmitting 200 Pictures Back To Earth

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Lunar Orbiter, near the end of an exhaustive photo session with the moon, will begin Monday the tedious job of transmitting some 200 pictures back to earth.

The camera-carrying spacecraft will take final photos on orbit 54, at 11 p.m. today, and orbit 55, at 2 a.m. Monday.

"That will complete the planned photographic mission for Lunar Orbiter," a spokesman at Langley Research Center said Saturday. "Then begins a readout of all the photographs she has taken."

The readout, to begin as soon as possible after the final shots, will take until about Sept. 15, the spokesman said.

The long readout is necessary, the spokesman said, because only one frame of film can be transmitted back to earth within a 45-minute period during each orbit of the moon.

In the readout process, a beam of light will scan each frame, transmitting the scan signals back to receiving stations on earth where they are converted back to a picture, which is recorded on 35 mm film.

Pictures will be received at Goldstone, Calif., Woomera, Australia, and Madrid, Spain.

After Lunar Orbiter's photo mission is completed, the spokesman said, the spacecraft will conduct other experiments before crashing into the moon about six months hence.

Each orbit of the moon, during an elapsed time of 3:26.30, takes the spacecraft to within 25.6 miles of the planet and as far away as 1,317.7 miles.

Crash Kills Two

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—Two young Morgan City men died here early Saturday when their car crashed into an overpass pier on I-10.

The victims were identified as Kenneth Wayne Bourque, 19, and Charles L. Touchet, 21.

Police said their 1966 sedan, traveling west, failed to negotiate a curve, struck a curbing, skidded 150 feet down the shoulder and then struck a concrete pier supporting the U.S. 71 overpass.

How Safety Group Aids You

Just before the holiday, as usual, will come the dire predictions of auto deaths, but do they do any good. Yes, says the National Safety Council, whose business for 53 years has been safety at work, at home, at play, on the highway. Here's how the council works, and what it has achieved, to keep you alive.

By WILLIAM J. CONWAY

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the safer places to work is an office that occupies the fourth and fifth floors of a red brick, warehouse-type building at 425 N. Michigan Ave. in Chicago.

It's the GHQ of the National Safety Council. Its 375 employes once went 5½ years without a disabling injury — from March 17, 1958, to Sept. 23, 1963. The organization gave itself its own Award of Honor, a plaque signifying more than three million manhours without an accident that sent anybody home.

The marathon ended when somebody spilled coffee on the floor, a girl slipped on the wet spot and fell. The council, typically, arranged that thereafter coffee would be carried on a tray in a cup capped by a plastic cover.

This safety-conscious team usually is out of the mind of the general public except on holidays — such as the upcoming Labor Day weekend — for which it issues estimates on the number of Americans who will die in traffic accidents.

A few days in advance of such occasions H. Gene Miller, director of statistics, and his aides study trends in fatalities and travel, check recent holiday driver performance and come up with a probable range.

For the three-day July 4 holiday the estimate was 510 to 610. The Associated Press tally was 576, a record for any summer holiday period.

The council is a huge clearing house for information. It applies this accumulated knowledge to current and continuing problems. Much of it is day-in-day-out work. There also are special efforts, such as a recent campaign for seat belts and a forthcoming drive against drinking drivers.

It wasn't drinking drivers but the high loss of life in mills and factories that brought the council into being. The National Council for Industrial Safety, as it was known then, opened headquarters Oct. 13, 1913, in two small rooms in Chicago. It had a staff of two — William H. Cameron, managing director, and a $14 a-week secretary. It had in hand five checks for a total of $1,400. Cameron had a wife and four children.

"I went without salary for three months," he once said. "We lived on nickels and dimes."

The small change must have generated a high energy. The wiry Cameron rode the circuit, preaching the gospel of safety, signing members, raising cash.

Once, when the organization had attained size and solvency, he pinned this notice on the bulletin board:

"Worked all day yesterday. Six o'clock flew to St. Louis. Eight o'clock addressed a banquet. Eleven o'clock flew back to Chicago. In office again at eight. What a wonderful world we live in."

Cameron retired in 1942 after 29 years of lively life saving.

Council policy is set by a 200-member board of directors. Thirteen are employed directly by automobile manufacturers. But the big majority are in safety work, industry, insurance, the government, universities and the professions. Brooks McCormick, executive vice president of International Harvester Co., is chairman.

Howard Pyle, onetime assistant to President Dwight D. Eisenhower and two-term governor of Arizona, now is in his eighth year as president.

The council theorizes that 2.6 million lives have been saved by safety efforts in three of the four fields under the council's scruntiny — work, public and home accidents, the fourth field is motor vehicles accidents — since its founding. The figure represents the difference between the actual death total and the toll that would have been recorded if accident rates had stayed as high as they were in 1912.

Statistics-keeping was rather lax during the teens and early 20s, but solid comparisons are available for later years.

In 1928 deaths stacked up this way in totals and deaths per 100,000 population: work, 19,000 or 15.8; home 30,000 or 24.9; public, 21,000 or 17.4.

In 1965 they totaled 14,100 or 7.3 in the work category, 28,000 or 14.4 in homes; and 19,000 or 9.8 in public — a classification that includes recreation but excludes work and motor vehicle fatalities.

Traffic fatalities in 1928 added up to 28,000 or 23.4 deaths per 100,000 population. In 1965 they totaled 49,000 or 25.3.

But the council contends the number of motor vehicles and the miles they traveled should be taken into consideration. In the period 1928 through 1932 traffic deaths averaged 31,050. There were 38 million drivers and 25.7 million vehicles. They covered 199 billion miles per year. The death rate was 15.6 deaths per 100 million miles of travel.

In 1965 there were a record 49,000 traffic fatalities, 90 million vehicles and 100 million drivers. They traveled a total of 880 billion miles — four times as much mileage as in the earlier period — and the death rate was 5.6 per 100 million miles of travel.

Local and state safety councils number 300. The national council has 9,000 members — companies, organizations, individuals, civic and labor groups, schools and insurance firms. They pay dues on a sliding scale, depending on size. The spread is $5.50 to $2,200 — for a company employing more than 200,000 persons.

Dues, sale of services, publications and advertising, and contributions and grants bring in about $7 million a year. About $250,000 of that comes from automotive and related industries. The largest sources are corporations highly interested in safety.

Many Laws To Be Written Before Man Lands On Moon

The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed on a sort of informal Magna Carta for outer space, but there's still a lot of law to be written before man lands on the moon. Things like contamination, piracy, military uses and even the basic question, where does space begin?

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — As the space age nears the end of its first decade, the world's diplomats are still moving at a Model-T pace in writing laws to cover the many problems of this new frontier.

"The simple fact is," as Chief Justice of the United States Earl Warren put it, "that law has not kept abreast of science."

There have been points of friction between the United States and the Soviet Union, but up to now space has not been plagued with the lawlessness which followed men's exploration of new frontiers on earth.

This is partly due to the fact that the big powers have agreed on a number of basic principles which serve as a sort of informal Magna Carta for space and which may eventually be expanded into a binding legal code. Most legal authorities, including Andrew Haley, author of "Space Law and Government," believe there is still time to prevent a breakdown or order in space.

"There have been a few — if only a few — encouraging signs," he says, "that man will not wait for catastrophe to strike before applying the rule of law to outer space."

"We know that there must be a law of space if men are to fly to the moon and the planets," says Chief Justice Warren.

LEGAL QUESTIONS

Apart from this priority problem, there are many other legal questions which are becoming more pressing with each new space launching by the United States and the Soviet Union.

One of these is the regulation of traffic in the increasingly busy highways of space. This includes rules governing so-called space garbage that might eventually prove harmful to astronauts.

Legal authorities also have stressed the need for laws to prevent contamination of celestial bodies by either manned or unmanned space vehicles and, equally important, to make sure that returning space vehicles do not contaminate the earth.

Another major problem, which will become more acute with passing time, is the regulation of space communication. With the increasing use of space satellites for communications, lawyers see the possibility of jamming, pirating of broadcast materials or other injurious uses of space — such as interference with communications between an astronaut and ground control — unless international agreements provide for licensing and regulation.

Actually, there have been few events which brought complaints from either of the space powers. One of these, during the first Soviet Sputnik flights, concerned Sputnik broadcasts which interfered with the broadcast of time signals by the U.S. Bureau of Standards. Others involved some U.S. experiments which brought Soviet complaints. The so-called Argus project was a series of high-altitude nuclear detonations over the South Atlantic in the summer of 1958, designed to crease an artificial radiation belt.

TINY NEEDLES

The Westford Project in 1961 involved the release of 75 pounds of copper dipoles, or tiny needles, that were supposed to disperse into a narrow band for possible use in long-range radio communications.

The disagreements over the early incidents were not long lasting and have not been repeated.

More important to the future are a number of broad questions which have been widely discussed but not resolved:

—Should space vehicles be permitted to gather military intelligence data and what is meant by military use of space?

—Should private corporations be permitted to explore space?

—What is the demarcation line between air space and outer space?

Although these and many other important questions remain unanswered, the areas of agreement on space principles are surprisingly extensive in view of the East-West standstill on other earthly problems.

The bulk of the progress up to now has been in the law of accepted practice — common law — and in "soft" law based on U.N. resolutions and joint U.S.-Soviet declarations. One unwritten law, for example, began to take shape the very day Sputnik I was launched Oct. 4, 1957.

Arthur Larson, law professor and former aide to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, noted this in these words:

"The basis was laid for one of the most important principles of space law — that of freedom of space — when the first Russian satellite passed over the territories of all the nations of the world without protest."

Up to that time no one had known whether or not some countries would try to claim that the laws of air space applied as well to outer space and that any passage overhead was a violation of national territory. Legal authorities now consider that the right of free travel in space has been established by practice.

A major advance in space "soft" law was made in 1963 when the U.N. General Assembly adopted a declaration of legal principles on the exploration of space. These do not have the mandatory effect of a treaty, but they had the support of both big space powers as well as all other U.N. members and they have never been challenged.

Some of these principles are included in the draft treaty now being discussed involves the definition of "peaceful uses" of outer space. The Russians took the position that this means a ban on the use of space for military purposes. The United States, on the other hand, says there is nothing wrong with using space for military purposes as long as it is not used for aggressive action.

This embraces a number of specific issues, such as the right to use photo reconnaissance vehicles for military intelligence purposes and other spacecraft for early warning and other military functions.

While the principles approved so far stress the term "peaceful uses" rather than non-military uses, the United States and the Soviet Union both want to be more specific in the proposed treaty. Both would ban the establishment of military fortifications and the carrying out of military maneuvers on the moon or any other space body.

The two big powers are still far apart on the use of space vehicles for military intelligence. The Soviet Union has taken the position that, since it is wrong to spy from conventional aircraft over foreign territory, it is equally wrong to gather military information by space photos.

The United States contends that free

by the U. N. legal subcommittee on space in Geneva. One effect of the treaty, if approved and ratified, would be to formalize into statutory law principles already accepted universally.

One of these is that outer space and celestial bodies are free for exploration and use by all states on the basis of equality and in accordance with international law. Another is that space and the celestial bodies are not subject to national appropriation by claim of sovereignty or by other means.

Other principles agreed upon include the following:

OTHER PRINCIPLES

— Governments are liable for damages caused by space objects to property or individuals in a foreign country.

—Governments shall regard astronauts as envoys of mankind and shall render them any assistance possible in the event of an accident or an emergency landing on foreign territory.

There have been other international agreements of an even more binding nature. Under the 1963 nuclear test-ban treaty signed in Moscow by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, the testing of nuclear devices in space is prohibited. Red China and France, now nuclear powers, are not parties to this treaty, however.

In another step to restrict the use of space to peaceful purposes, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed in 1963 that weapons of mass destruction should be banned from outer space. The U. N. Assembly took note of this agreement in a resolution and both powers pledged their compliance. Both the United States and the Soviet Union now are urging the inclusion of this provision in the proposed treaty on space.

One question which has produced some controversy between the space powers space flights have outmoded the idea of a closed society and that reconnaissance photographs from space are neither illegal nor immoral.

QUESTION OF SPACE

The question of space espionage is complicated by two other factors: First, there is no agreed international definition as to where outer space begins; secondly, the development of new vehicles is making it more and more difficult to define the dividing line. There already are revolutionary craft that can fly in the atmosphere and can also penetrate into what has in the past been considered as outer space.

Not much can be done about military reconnaissance from space until this issue is resolved, and nobody seems to be pushing very hard for a definition. At the moment the United States and the Soviet Union have many vehicles in space not only capable of making detailed photographs of the earth's surface, but actually doing it.

Despite the apparent urgency of the legal problems, the consensus among legal authorities seems to favor a step by step approach rather than an attempt at a comprehensive codification. The current Geneva negotiations are limited to problems connected with the expected manned flights to the moon — and possibly to some other celestial bodies in the future. No one has proposed discussion of other pressing problems.

There is a substantial amount of activity among legal groups outside the United Nations as well as inside, but the signs mostly point to more delay and an even bigger gap between scientific advance and legal advance.

Trouble Starts For English Village After Winning Title Of 'Prettiest'

CASTLE COMBE, England (AP) — Four years ago, in a poll conducted by the British Travel Association, Castle Combe was voted the country's prettiest village. That's when the trouble began.

Came tourists, by the thousands, billboards, gifte shoppes, and, with prosperity, television aerials sprouting on the thatched roofs. Gone were the charm, the peace and the cleanliness that had won Castle Combe the title.

Finally came the movie company and, lo, Castle Combe is nearly back to what it once was.

Mrs. K. R. Thomas, who used to own the entire village, looks across this picturesque corner of Wiltshire, 90 miles northwest of London, and says: "Now, thanks to an American movie company, it's very beautiful again."

She means 20th Century-Fox, which came here in May to shoot a $13-million movie, "Dr. Dolittle," starring Rex Harrison, Samantha Eggar and Anthony Newly. To transform Castle Combe into the mythical seaport of Puddleby-on-the-Marsh, the company had to remove some of the billboards, dam the local stream, repair stone walls and — most essential — get rid of the television aerials. The latter was accomplished by a community antenna, hidden in a nearby wood, and underground cable television.

Feelings ran high for a time. The Royal Fine Arts Commission was roused to express regret that the film people had made alterations to a village that dates back to the Roman legions before the birth of Christ. One young blade, Sir Ranulph Twistleton — Sykeham-Fiennes, 22, and three friends made a night raid on a camera unit, planning to set off flares and bring out the fire brigade. Sir Ranulph, a lieutenant in the Royal Scots Greys, was quoted as saying he wanted to stop "mass entertainment riding roughshod over the feelings of the people."

But the feelings were obviously mixed. Mrs. Thomas, who still owns the manor house and six of the prettiest cottages, commented: "Only a very few complained. And some of these have now seen the light-now that the film people have finished their filming and gone."

Nan Tresilian, who runs an antique shop and complained at the arrival of the moviemen, said: "Well, I must admit it's better than we thought it would be. You know, it's a funny thing, but the people who expressed the most shock were American tourists."

In the midst of the controversy, the Wiltshire County Council told the Roy Fine Arts Commission it regretted that the commission "saw fit to publish opinions that were unjustified and particularly sensational." It said the removal of the aerials and billboards, and cleaning up of the stream would actually improve Castle Combe.

With a touch of sarcasm, the council added: "restoration by the movie company will not, however, include either romantic weeds or tumbled down river walls."

Now the movie company has gone, along with its 200 people and 1,500 animals — it seems that Dr. Dolittle loved animals and could even talk to them — and the calm of the ages is resettling over Castle Combe.

"We think," said a movie spokesman, "we've made most of the people happy."

Certainly the television watchers are happy. Reception is better than ever, and the company left a $10,000 fund to maintain the master aerial.

Sir Ranulph, presumably, is not happy. He and his friends must stand trial for that night raid.

THE LITTLE, ancient village, in England, of Castle Combe has been transformed into a movie set fishing town . . . to the dismay of the Royal Fine Arts Commission. For a 20th Century-Fox film production, "Dr. Dolittle" the tourist town is now Puddley-on-the-Marsh. It is hoped by some that when the filmmakers depart Castle Combo, they do NOT replace the weeds in the stream — the crumbling walls — and the unsightly TV antennas . . . they originally found there. Finally came the movie company and, lo, Castle Combe is nearly back to what it once was.

Mrs. K. R. Thomas, who used to own the entire village, looks across this picturesque corner of Wiltshire, 90 miles northwest of London, and says: "Now, thanks to an American movie company, it's very beautiful again."

She means 20th Century-Fox, which came here in May to shoot a $13-million movie, "Dr. Dolittle," starring Rex Harrison, Samantha Eggar and Anthony Newly. To transform Castle Combe into the mythical seaport of Puddleby-on-the-Marsh, the company had to remove some of the billboards, dam the local stream, repair stone walls and — most essential — get rid of the television aerials. The latter was accomplished by a community antenna, hidden in a nearby wood, and underground cable television.

Feelings ran high for a time. The Royal Fine Arts Commission was roused to express regret that the film people had made alterations to a village that dates back to the Roman legions before the birth of Christ. One young blade, Sir Ranulph Twistleton — Sykeham-Fiennes, 22, and three friends made a night raid on a camera unit, planning to set off flares and bring out the fire brigade. Sir Ranulph, a lieutenant in the Royal Scots Greys, was quoted as saying he wanted to stop "mass entertainment riding roughshod over the feelings of the people."

But the feelings were obvsiously mixed. Mrs. Thomas, who still owns the manor house and six of the prettiest cottages, commented: "Only a very few complained. And some of these have now seen the light-now that the film people have finished their filming and gone."

Nan Tresilian, who runs an antique shop and complained at the arrival of the moviemen, said: "Well, I must admit it's better than we thought it would be. You know, it's a funny thing, but the people who expressed the most shock were American tourists."

In the midst of the controversy, the Wiltshire County Council told the Roy Fine Arts Commission it regretted that the commission "saw fit to publish opinions that were unjustified and particularly sensational." It said the removal of the aerials and billboards, and cleaning up of the stream would actually improve Castle Combe.

With a touch of sarcasm, the council added: "restoration by the movie company will not, however, include either romantic weeds or tumbled down river walls."

Now the movie company has gone, along with its 200 people and 1,500 animals — it seems that Dr. Dolittle loved animals and could even talk to them — and the calm of the ages is resettling over Castle Combe.

"We think," said a movie spokesman, "we've made most of the people happy."

Certainly the television watchers are happy. Reception is better than ever, and the company left a $10,000 fund to maintain the master aerial.

Sir Ranulph, presumably, is not happy. He and his friends must stand trial for that night raid.

THE LITTLE, ancient village, in England, of Castle Combe has been transformed into a movie set fishing town . . . to the dismay of the Royal Fine Arts Commission. For a 20th Century-Fox film production, "Dr. Dolittle" the tourist town is now Puddlely-on-the-Marsh. It is hoped by some that when the filmmakers depart Castle Combo, they do NOT replace the weeds in the stream — the crumbling walls — and the unsightly TV antennas . . . they originally found there. # Many Laws To Be Written Before Man Lands On Moon

The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed on a sort of informal Magna Carta for outer space, but there's still a lot of law to be written before man lands on the moon. Things like contamination, piracy, military uses and even the basic question, where does space begin?

By MAX HARRELSON

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — As the space age nears the end of its first decade, the world's diplomats are still moving at a Model-T pace in writing laws to cover the many problems of this new frontier.

"The simple fact is," as Chief Justice of the United States Earl Warren put it, "that law has not kept abreast of science."

There have been points of friction between the United States and the Soviet Union, but up to now space has not been plagued with the lawlessness which followed men's exploration of new frontiers on earth.

This is partly due to the fact that the big powers have agreed on a number of basic principles which serve as a sort of informal Magna Carta for space and which may eventually be expanded into a binding legal code. Most legal authorities, including Andrew Haley, author of "Space Law and Government," believe there is still time to prevent a breakdown or order in space.

"There have been a few — if only a few — encouraging signs," he says, "that man will not wait for catastrophe to strike before applying the rule of law to outer space."

"We know that there must be a law of space if men are to fly to the moon and the planets," says Chief Justice Warren.

LEGAL QUESTIONS

Apart from this priority problem, there are many other legal questions which are becoming more pressing with each new space launching by the United States and the Soviet Union.

One of these is the regulation of traffic in the increasingly busy highways of space. This includes rules governing so-called space garbage that might eventually prove harmful to astronauts.

Legal authorities also have stressed the need for laws to prevent contamination of celestial bodies by either manned or unmanned space vehicles and, equally important, to make sure that returning space vehicles do not contaminate the earth.

Another major problem, which will become more acute with passing time, is the regulation of space communication. With the increasing use of space satellites for communications, lawyers see the possibility of jamming, pirating of broadcast materials or other injurious uses of space — such as interference with communications between an astronaut and ground control — unless international agreements provide for licensing and regulation.

Actually, there have been few events which brought complaints from either of the space powers. One of these, during the first Soviet Sputnik flights, concerned Sputnik broadcasts which interfered with the broadcast of time signals by the U.S. Bureau of Standards. Others involved some U.S. experiments which brought Soviet complaints. The so-called Argus project was a series of high-altitude nuclear detonations over the South Atlantic in the summer of 1958, designed to crease an artificial radiation belt.

TINY NEEDLES

The Westford Project in 1961 involved the release of 75 pounds of copper dipoles, or tiny needles, that were supposed to disperse into a narrow band for possible use in long-range radio communications.

The disagreements over the early incidents were not long lasting and have not been repeated.

More important to the future are a number of broad questions which have been widely discussed but not resolved:

—Should space vehicles be permitted to gather military intelligence data and what is meant by military use of space?

—Should private corporations be permitted to explore space?

—What is the demarcation line between air space and outer space?

Although these and many other important questions remain unanswered, the areas of agreement on space principles are surprisingly extensive in view of the East-West standstill on other earthly problems.

The bulk of the progress up to now has been in the law of accepted practice — common law — and in "soft" law based on U.N. resolutions and joint U.S.-Soviet declarations. One unwritten law, for example, began to take shape the very day Sputnik I was launched Oct. 4, 1957.

Arthur Larson, law professor and former aide to President Dwight D. Eisenhower, noted this in these words:

"The basis was laid for one of the most important principles of space law — that of freedom of space — when the first Russian satellite passed over the territories of all the nations of the world without protest."

Up to that time no one had known whether or not some countries would try to claim that the laws of air space applied as well to outer space and that any passage overhead was a violation of national territory. Legal authorities now consider that the right of free travel in space has been established by practice.

A major advance in space "soft" law was made in 1963 when the U.N. General Assembly adopted a declaration of legal principles on the exploration of space. These do not have the mandatory effect of a treaty, but they had the support of both big space powers as well as all other U.N. members and they have never been challenged.

Some of these principles are included in the draft treaty now being discussed involves the definition of "peaceful uses" of outer space. The Russians took the position that this means a ban on the use of space for military purposes. The United States, on the other hand, says there is nothing wrong with using space for military purposes as long as it is not used for aggressive action.

This embraces a number of specific issues, such as the right to use photo reconnaissance vehicles for military intelligence purposes and other spacecraft for early warning and other military functions.

While the principles approved so far stress the term "peaceful uses" rather than non-military uses, the United States and the Soviet Union both want to be more specific in the proposed treaty. Both would ban the establishment of military fortifications and the carrying out of military maneuvers on the moon or any other space body.

The two big powers are still far apart on the use of space vehicles for military intelligence. The Soviet Union has taken the position that, since it is wrong to spy from conventional aircraft over foreign territory, it is equally wrong to gather military information by space photos.

The United States contends that free

by the U. N. legal subcommittee on space in Geneva. One effect of the treaty, if approved and ratified, would be to formalize into statutory law principles already accepted universally.

One of these is that outer space and celestial bodies are free for exploration and use by all states on the basis of equality and in accordance with international law. Another is that space and the celestial bodies are not subject to national appropriation by claim of sovereignty or by other means.

Other principles agreed upon include the following:

OTHER PRINCIPLES

— Governments are liable for damages caused by space objects to property or individuals in a foreign country.

—Governments shall regard astronauts as envoys of mankind and shall render them any assistance possible in the event of an accident or an emergency landing on foreign territory.

There have been other international agreements of an even more binding nature. Under the 1963 nuclear test-ban treaty signed in Moscow by the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union, the testing of nuclear devices in space is prohibited. Red China and France, now nuclear powers, are not parties to this treaty, however.

In another step to restrict the use of space to peaceful purposes, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed in 1963 that weapons of mass destruction should be banned from outer space. The U. N. Assembly took note of this agreement in a resolution and both powers pledged their compliance. Both the United States and the Soviet Union now are urging the inclusion of this provision in the proposed treaty on space.

One question which has produced some controversy between the space powers space flights have outmoded the idea of a closed society and that reconnaissance photographs from space are neither illegal nor immoral.

QUESTION OF SPACE

The question of space espionage is complicated by two other factors: First, there is no agreed international definition as to where outer space begins; secondly, the development of new vehicles is making it more and more difficult to define the dividing line. There already are revolutionary craft that can fly in the atmosphere and can also penetrate into what has in the past been considered as outer space.

Not much can be done about military reconnaissance from space until this issue is resolved, and nobody seems to be pushing very hard for a definition. At the moment the United States and the Soviet Union have many vehicles in space not only capable of making detailed photographs of the earth's surface, but actually doing it.

Despite the apparent urgency of the legal problems, the consensus among legal authorities seems to favor a step by step approach rather than an attempt at a comprehensive codification. The current Geneva negotiations are limited to problems connected with the expected manned flights to the moon — and possibly to some other celestial bodies in the future. No one has proposed discussion of other pressing problems.

There is a substantial amount of activity among legal groups outside the United Nations as well as inside, but the signs mostly point to more delay and an even bigger gap between scientific advance and legal advance.

LBJ, Bobby And Hubert

Richard Nixon doubtless was merely trying to needle both President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey when he said that Mr. Johnson might dump Mr. Humphrey as his running mate in 1968 and choose Senator Robert F. Kennedy. If so, he succeeded, for the President quickly grabbed the bait with some sarcastic utterances about "advice from an ex-Vice President."

The presidential remarks simply served to increase discussion of the road Bobby Kennedy is following and where it is supposed to go; and they also opened the door for widespread utterances critical of the present administration from many sources, some partisan and some not.

Mr. Nixon probably got just about what he expected to get with his remark — new comment, bigger headlines, greater TV coverage; not as to himself, but on what already is about the most stirred up political hornets' nest in the nation today: What Washington and other commentators are calling the "drooping public image" of Mr. Johnson. Whether that image could be called "drooping", or to what extent, is not our point here. The point is that a lot of other things happened at about the same time and that they made Mr. Nixon's batting at the hornets' nest far more than a mischievous political jive.

Mr. Nixon, President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey all know that Mr. Johnson could dump Mr. Humphrey in 1968 if he wished, although it surely would cause him trouble politically. But if he did, he would not have the barest chance — as things stand now — to get Bobby Kennedy to run with him, even if he wanted Bobby.

For Bobby Kennedy is running for the presidency and has been since not long after the assassination of his brother. His objective has been, of course, 1972.

To become Vice President with Mr. Johnson as President in a 1968-1972 term would mean that Bobby for four years would have to stand by and for every Johnson policy, domestic or international. For him to do so unquestionably would tear to shreds the whole foundation he has built slowly and steadily for his 1972 presidential bid.

Further, while "Vice President" Kennedy would be silenced for four years except to praise Mr. Johnson, Mr. Humphrey would be mowing new hay in every political pasture in the nation, solidifying his own support generally, presenting himself as a man given a dirty deal by Mr. Johnson and Mr. Kennedy, and trying to regain such favor among super liberals as has left him because of Mr. Johnson and gone to Mr. Kennedy. After all, even those only slightly political-wise know that liberals who swung to Mr. Johnson in 1964 did so not because they wanted Mr. Johnson or even because of Mr. Humphrey, but because they hated Senator Goldwater — and this was, in many instances, real hate and not mere semantics.

So, Senator Kennedy plans — assuming renomination and probable re-election of a Johnson-Humphrey ticket — to go right along dissenting (but in an impersonal and not insulting way) with various Johnson policies and efforts, both domestic and foreign, building himself up as a man who was loyal to his party and did not actually undermine his President, but whose "conscience" forced him to speak out at times in disagreement with Mr. Johnson — as he has been doing for the past two years. At least that's the type of smoke signals Mr. Kennedy sends forth endlessly. And it is quite true that Senator Kennedy never has liked Mr. Johnson — not even in 1960.

But the biggest point in all of this right now is that all of a sudden Mr. Kennedy is being projected from many directions as a man who should challenge Mr. Johnson for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1968 without waiting for 1972. No politician of Senator Kennedy's political stature has sought such an objective in American history, although there has been token opposition many times in both parties for renomination of a President or Vice President.

Further, Mr. Johnson has the power and the ability and the desire to control the 1968 convention. Those who say, "Yeah, but a Kennedy might put it over — they never fail at politics," might well remember that a man as adept at political arm twisting as Mr. Johnson is quite adept also at arm breaking and even a Kennedy's bones may be brittle. Mr. Kennedy could kill his 1972 prospects by going too far in 1968.

The professional polls are what have stirred up the talk about Mr. Kennedy and 1968. We refer to them because Mr. Johnson puts so much faith in them rather than because of our own belief.

The past week's Gallup poll indicates that right now Mr. Kennedy would run ahead of Mr. Johnson — nationally — for the presidency among both Democrats and those who call themselves Independents. The national Gallup percentage today among Democrats is 38 per cent for Mr. Johnson, 40 per cent for Mr. Kennedy, the rest scattered. Independents favor Mr. Kennedy 38 per cent to 24 for Mr. Johnson.

The Des Moines Register Poll (a continuous professionally operated organization) found in its latest Iowa sampling that Mr. Kennedy would, at this time, get a clear majority of over 50 per cent against Mr. Johnson, Mr. Humphrey or Mr. Nixon — this in a once rock ribbed Republican state.

The Minneapolis Tribune Poll (also professionally operated week in and week out) found last week that Mr. Kennedy out-polled Mr. Humphrey by 60 per cent to 40 per cent for the vice presidency in 1968 — and Minnesota is Mr. Humphrey's home state, once sealed into his hip pocket politically.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has had twice as many requests for speeches by Mr. Kennedy in the coming offyear elections as for Mr. Humphrey.

Many Congressional District Democratic leaders are insisting that Mr. Humphrey keep out of their area and some don't want Mr. Johnson either for fall campaign speeches.

Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles, after beating Senator Kennedy down thoroughly before a Senate Committee in tongue-lashing discussion between the two over federal spending on Negro ghettos, said afterwards:

"I knew that Senator Kennedy was running for the presidency but I didn't know how fast. He's running on his brother's fame and his father's fortune."

All of the living children of Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., the father, received $10,000,000 trust funds from him years ago. Senator Kennedy said recently he had received three trust funds, but gave no amounts. Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr. was asked some years ago if $500,000,000 would be a fair estimate of his wealth. He answered affirmatively.

More On Constitution

Start, La.

To the Editor:

To you who read the forum in the Morning World, I would like to say that Mrs. Inez M. Kasiah has correctly put the straight edge on the interpretation of the Constitution which our forefathers wrote. However, she overlooked the fact that the Warren Court wrote a new constitution without consulting the people through an amendment. If I remember correctly, the only authority cited for this new Constitution was something written in a book which Earl Warren read that was authored by a Communist on the subject of how to raise children and as to the type of schools which they should have. The sad part and the fact is that the majority of Congress has upheld the Warren Constitution — that is — the Congressmen of northern states just as they did in Reconstruction days following the Civil War. Then, as now, the south was put in an unbearable situation under just such a Constitution until the people of the north realized that what effects the north also effects the south and visa versa.

I believe that it was Abe Lincoln who said that a nation cannot be half free and half slave. As he was speaking of the Constitution, we conclude that what he had in mind was that the north cannot have one Constitution and the south another. The south cannot be made a police state and the north go free. Thanks to MLK and his comrades you are seeing the insanity of communism fall by its own weight. Common sense and reason would teach that if the south is forced into complete integration, it will have to be by federal troops and marshals. The same will and must apply to the north.

For years the NAACP, CORE, and other communist fronts have been teaching the Negro that by block voting, they can rule the white race. One only has to study the polls in the last election to see where the Negro vote was heavy the effectiveness of the block vote. This proves two things 1. — That after nearly 100 years of education the Negro's thinking is unchangeable as is his color. 2. — That white scalawags who will and do use the Negro for political gain and sell the nation to a disgrace and abomination in the eyes of the God his principles has not changed either. Let me say to these scalawags of candidates who buy Negro votes with promise, money, whiskey and wine, that in the end, you will reap what you sow. You should read the handwriting on the wall in Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and the next governors race in Louisiana — watch it spread nationwide.

Wants Goldwater

Monroe, La.

Dear Mr. Goldwater,

I am asking that my letter to you be printed in my newspaper's Letters To the Editor column because, in a sense, I am really addressing it to my fellow conservative Americans. I am grateful that we now number in the millions.

I read your syndicated column in my daily newspaper, Monroe Morning World with relish and would like now to take this opportunity to thank this newspaper and its editors for the responsibility they have taken in publishing your views so that we, oppressed conservative Southern Americans might continue to be blessed and benefited to the degree that we allow ourselves to be by the wisdom contained therein. By doing this for us, this fine conservative newspaper is rendering we, the people, a very real service, and I thank them for it.

And I thank you, Mr. Goldwater, for your clear and courageous voice of reason and responsibility. Yours might be thought to be a voice crying in the wilderness of big, bewildering government. Your cause, a crusade for common sense and original Constitutional government. You have invited us like-minded Americans to come and follow you in this quest for conservative Americanism. Your clarion call has reached my ears and I willingly and eagerly join up with you here and now. I should say, continue with you, for I never left the ranks.

Your recent column in our newspaper, "Rioting Symbolizes Explosive Sickness", Monroe Morning World, July 28, 1966, makes the only real sense I have heard expressed in the land anywhere by anyone representing government, and though at this time you lamentably are not, it is my fervent wish that you will again one day. I quote two excerpts here, "We must stop the hallucinations now and come back to our own world, the real and wonderful world where only the strength of man's mind, his character, his arms can truly achieve anything. . ." "We now are either going to kneel to violence or raise our heads to rational responsibility."

What could make more sense than this? What more reasonable? What more wise? And all this coming from a man others have chosen to label a misguided American, a misfit to be President of the United States, an irresponsible radical. Can there be thought to be reason in these concepts and not in the man's words? In my heart I know you were right all the time and are so right now and I continue to think of you, Mr. Goldwater, as the greatest President America never had! May the chant, "We want Goldwater" again be heard in the land, and God willing may we get him!

Your decency, your dignity, your devotion to principle shine forth and light up this land where degeneracy and deterioration tend to hold sway. We need your light, your loyalty, the strength of your mind, and should be bereft without them. Please continue to serve us who desperately need you so. Begin your march again and you will find the puny number of twenty - seven million to have grown to many times that number, proving that all don't march with Martin Luther King but can be found side by side with a true stalwart American, that giant of a man, Barry Goldwater!

In closing I thank you, sir, for the splendidness that is in you, for all that you stand for, and for having kept the faith.

Drafting Is Highest Since War In Korea

WE NOW ARE IN the process of drafting more young men than at any time since the end of the Korean war. October's call will be a record 46,200. September is up from 31,300 to 37,300.

And while this is going on, Americans in general will be getting ready to vote. The two events are rightfully connected.

This administration should be called strictly to account for the two policies which make the draft calls so high and so persistent:

1—The growing land war in Viet Nam which, it is now estimated, will require a doubled force, perhaps 400,000 men, by year's end.

2—The shattered military morale and political sniping against adequate pay which makes the goal of a fully professional military force farther than ever from attainment.

ON THE MATTER of the land war in Southeast Asia, there is almost unanimous military, academic and general agreement that this is the last thing in the world in which we should engage. Asia has a way of swallowing land armies and even the most dense swivel chair soldier in this administration's high political command should know it.

Nevertheless, this administration has constantly resisted every advice to fight a modern war with modern weapons.

The tardiness of its decision to even move toward adequate use of our airpower is well known to all Americans. The long refusal to block Haiphong harbor, through which so much of the enemy's war material flows, also is well known — best of all to the enemy, of course.

Instead, the administration slogs straight ahead toward a massive land warfare involvement, ignoring even the broadest possibilities of utilizing the troops of our Asian allies for the ground engagement while we put the full weight of our modern technology into play in the skies and on the seas.

During the 1964 campaign, I pledged that I would do everything in my power to end the draft system altogether in favor of a fully professional military force. The administration came right along within a matter almost of hours and said that, by golly, they already had just that sort of action in mind.

It was good campaign strategy for them, I suppose. But it turned out to be one of their most blatantly broken campaign promises.

INSTEAD OF DOING anything to end the draft, this administration has done everything it could to make the draft not only necessary but larger. Assistant President (as Lyndon Johnson is said to regard him) Robert McNamara, wearing his second hat as secretary of defense, has battled every effort to raise military pay and benefits to levels that would attract and hold career volunteers. Moreover, he has so downgraded the military, so stultified military initiative, and so badly abused military morale that reenlistments fall off while resignations go up.

On top of that, the secretary of defense has even suggested using the draft for purely sociological purposes, taking unemployed young men and putting them in federal work camps under a distortion of the selective service law.

Perhaps this administration will not really be happy until it has the power and the excuse to draft everyone. Fortunately, before anything like that happens, the voters will have their turn to talk at the polls.

'Dump Humphrey' Idea Infuriating To Many

MINNEAPOLIS. — Here in Hubert H. Humphrey's home state his friends' anxiety about the forthcoming Congressional elections takes second place to their fury about the "dump Humphrey" talk regarding his 1968 renomination.

They insist none of this is coming from anyone close to President Johnson, and least of all from LBJ himself. But when the questioning turns to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy the lid blows off.

"He's no man to play the middle when two ends can be played against it," said an outraged Humphreyite. "And that is exactly what he's doing."

"Will the real Bobby Kennedy please stand up?" Said another.

They see a nearly incredible cynicism in his pretenses of shyness, detachment, etc., and cite his statement, pronounced as late as March 17, about his planning for the Presidency: "If I tried that I'd destroy myself as a Senator. I'd be a basket case in three months. Besides, it would be completely unnatural."

"UNNATURAL! Wow!" exploded this man.

The Humphreyites claim that, as usual in a Kennedy operation, Bobby's political solutions proceed at two levels — one strategic and one operational. In addition to making certain of his own elevation to the 1972 nomination after President Johnson's two terms, Bobby is also trying to make certain of his own nomination, instead of Humphrey's, in the event anything should happen to LBJ before then.

If President Johnson should not live until 1968 the Minnesotan would be President, and this could stop Bobby cold in his tracks. But if President Johnson lives the Humphreyites admit Humphrey has an occupational problem which Kennedy knows is unsolvable.

Not only doesn't a Vice-President run for the Vice-Presidency, but is impossible for him to effectively protect himself while in the Vice Presidency.

ALONG WITH Bobby's deftly planted rumors, the Humphrey supporters see him applying — step by step — the same techniques against Humphrey, who is tied to President Johnson's policies, that he engineered with such Neanderthal zest against Vice-President Richard Nixon when Nixon was on the Eisenhower team. They also see him updating to the present a series of diliberately phony or oversimplified issues ("We must talk peace in Viet Nam"), in the pattern of the phony "missile gap," "Soviet growth rate," etc., issues cynically contrived without regard for the truth or the bad effect abroad.

The Vice-President's friends agree that the Minnesotan's political future depends not only on President Johnson's life but also on Mr. Johnson's popularity. The less popular Mr. Johnson may become, with frequent pushes from Bobby, the harder it is for Humphrey to weather the Kennedy judo knockdown. Accordingly, some of the current polls especially dismay them as LBJ's popularity develops a leak or two below the waterline.

BEYOND THIS, these Humphreyites say Bobby keeps pitching to the far left in an opportunistic plan to box Humphrey's Presidential Chances by pre-empting some kind of a position on every issue. Name a far-left cliche, or a far-left gimmick, they say, and Bobby is systematically using it. As a further purpose of this they see his plan shrewdly designed to harness the image-making machine dominated by a bevy of our teaching-talking-writing clan.

Humphrey himself keeps a very proper silence for public consumption regarding the Kennedy manipulations. But as to the offset to these, and whether he's right or not, his chief reliance seems to be the conviction that Bobby will somehow outsmart himself as events develop.

After the Bay of Pigs our Army was sent to Viet Nam on the record, and with Robert Kennedy himself performing as practically a co-President. President Kennedy ordered our present war commitment there — not President Truman, Eisenhower or Johnson.

The blame would have gone to President Kennedy had he lived. Thus, from Humphrey's viewpoint he reportedly finds it utterly unconscionable that Bobby tries so unfairly to advance himself by distorting Viet Nam and the mounting draft and casualties into a political banana peel under the President and Vice-President alike.

The Minnesota Humphreyites find the over-all result as murderous as a flung knife. And both Humphrey and his White House boss are kept abominably busy taking it out of their backs all the time.

Nixon Looking Into Prospects Of GOP

DICK NIXON CAME to town on Tuesday, to talk some high politics up on the Hill and get the feel of Republican prospects. He spent most of the day in those deep machinations beloved of politicians everywhere, and then turned up at the Shoreham, once the sun was over the yardarm, to meet with about twenty young Conservatives.

The old fire-eater was just back from his Asian trip, and his time clock had not yet reset itself; he was groggy-tired, and looked it, but one of the many attractive things about Nixon is that he is a pro. He settled back in a chair and talked for two hours with clarity and candor of issues at home and abroad.

He began with a small poke at a couple of visiting correspondents: He hoped people still read newspapers, but he was inclined to believe they only watched TV. "That was where I came in." The familiar grin flashed from under that ski-jump nose. Then he was off, dead serious, on Viet Nam.

His first impression dealt with the unconscionable attitude of our European allies toward the U.S. struggle in Viet Nam. Publicly, European leaders continue polite support; privately, they are saying that the United States must find some way out of this stupid war. They are motivated by two fears — that continued U.S. involvement delays a solid detente with Russia, and that it carries a growing risk of war with China.

THESE ARE THE same Europeans, Nixon added grimly, whom we helped so much. Today they are not only not with us; in their covert trading operations, they are actively against us. Some effective diplomatic means must be found to convince them of freedom's common stake in Sotheast Asia, and to persuade them to halt the charter cargoes of oil to the Viet Cong.

The French and especially the British attitude struck Nixon as a melancholy commentary on the evils of isolationism. No nation, he remarked, can retain greatness when it looks inward instead of outward. A nation must believe in the credibility and viability of its own ideas, and in their export value. Britain once exported great ideas — the common law, the concept of parliament — but a watery socialism is worthless in the export trade of thought; and Britain now feeds on her past.

Turning directly to Viet Nam, Nixon remarked that this had been his fifth trip to Saigon in the past five years. He found prospects much improved.

In terms of domestic stability, General Ky has worked wonders. The general is skillful, strong, courageous, intelligent, yet he could not survive without U.S. support, and that support must continue unstintingly. He is the best we have. He has achieved greater stability than any leader since Diem, whose murder, in which we were co-conspirators, provided one of the blackest chapters in American diplomatic history.

THERE IS NO question that the military situation is better than it has been since the conflict began. The buildup is awesome; morale is high. Yet assuming no further major commitment of troops, beyond Korea's additional contribution of 25,000 men, victory is still far off. If present policies are continued, "my guess is five years."

But for many reasons, the war cannot be permitted to drag on that long. In five years, Red China will have increased her nuclear capability. American casualties will have become intolerable. It is vital that efforts be increased to win the war throughout South Viet Nam; and this means putting greater military pressure on North Viet Nam. Psychological pressures also must be increased. The proposed all-Asian peace conference could be a great help. Here at home, certain Democratic Senators, and certain editors and columnists, should be begged to reconsider the grave damage they are causing by the evidence they provide of American disunity.

LBJ, Bobby And Hubert

Richard Nixon doubtless was merely trying to needle both President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey when he said that Mr. Johnson might dump Mr. Humphrey as his running mate in 1968 and choose Senator Robert F. Kennedy. If so, he succeeded, for the President quickly grabbed the bait with some sarcastic utterances about "advice from an ex-Vice President."

The presidential remarks simply served to increase discussion of the road Bobby Kennedy is following and where it is supposed to go; and they also opened the door for widespread utterances critical of the present administration from many sources, some partisan and some not.

Mr. Nixon probably got just about what he expected to get with his remark — new comment, bigger headlines, greater TV coverage; not as to himself, but on what already is about the most stirred up political hornets' nest in the nation today: What Washington and other commentators are calling the "drooping public image" of Mr. Johnson. Whether that image could be called "drooping", or to what extent, is not our point here. The point is that a lot of other things happened at about the same time and that they made Mr. Nixon's batting at the hornets' nest far more than a mischievous political jive.

Mr. Nixon, President Johnson and Vice President Humphrey all know that Mr. Johnson could dump Mr. Humphrey in 1968 if he wished, although it surely would cause him trouble politically. But if he did, he would not have the barest chance — as things stand now — to get Bobby Kennedy to run with him, even if he wanted Bobby.

For Bobby Kennedy is running for the presidency and has been since not long after the assassination of his brother. His objective has been, of course, 1972.

To become Vice President with Mr. Johnson as President in a 1968-1972 term would mean that Bobby for four years would have to stand by and for every Johnson policy, domestic or international. For him to do so unquestionably would tear to shreds the whole foundation he has built slowly and steadily for his 1972 presidential bid.

Further, while "Vice President" Kennedy would be silenced for four years except to praise Mr. Johnson, Mr. Humphrey would be mowing new hay in every political pasture in the nation, solidifying his own support generally, presenting himself as a man given a dirty deal by Mr. Johnson and Mr. Kennedy, and trying to regain such favor among super liberals as has left him because of Mr. Johnson and gone to Mr. Kennedy. After all, even those only slightly political-wise know that liberals who swung to Mr. Johnson in 1964 did so not because they wanted Mr. Johnson or even because of Mr. Humphrey, but because they hated Senator Goldwater — and this was, in many instances, real hate and not mere semantics.

So, Senator Kennedy plans — assuming renomination and probable re-election of a Johnson-Humphrey ticket — to go right along dissenting (but in an impersonal and not insulting way) with various Johnson policies and efforts, both domestic and foreign, building himself up as a man who was loyal to his party and did not actually undermine his President, but whose "conscience" forced him to speak out at times in disagreement with Mr. Johnson — as he has been doing for the past two years. At least that's the type of smoke signals Mr. Kennedy sends forth endlessly. And it is quite true that Senator Kennedy never has liked Mr. Johnson — not even in 1960.

But the biggest point in all of this right now is that all of a sudden Mr. Kennedy is being projected from many directions as a man who should challenge Mr. Johnson for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1968 without waiting for 1972. No politician of Senator Kennedy's political stature has sought such an objective in American history, although there has been token opposition many times in both parties for renomination of a President or Vice President.

Further, Mr. Johnson has the power and the ability and the desire to control the 1968 convention. Those who say, "Yeah, but a Kennedy might put it over — they never fail at politics," might well remember that a man as adept at political arm twisting as Mr. Johnson is quite adept also at arm breaking and even a Kennedy's bones may be brittle. Mr. Kennedy could kill his 1972 prospects by going too far in 1968.

The professional polls are what have stirred up the talk about Mr. Kennedy and 1968. We refer to them because Mr. Johnson puts so much faith in them rather than because of our own belief.

The past week's Gallup poll indicates that right now Mr. Kennedy would run ahead of Mr. Johnson — nationally — for the presidency among both Democrats and those who call themselves Independents. The national Gallup percentage today among Democrats is 38 per cent for Mr. Johnson, 40 per cent for Mr. Kennedy, the rest scattered. Independents favor Mr. Kennedy 38 per cent to 24 for Mr. Johnson.

The Des Moines Register Poll (a continuous professionally operated organization) found in its latest Iowa sampling that Mr. Kennedy would, at this time, get a clear majority of over 50 per cent against Mr. Johnson, Mr. Humphrey or Mr. Nixon — this in a once rock ribbed Republican state.

The Minneapolis Tribune Poll (also professionally operated week in and week out) found last week that Mr. Kennedy out-polled Mr. Humphrey by 60 per cent to 40 per cent for the vice presidency in 1968 — and Minnesota is Mr. Humphrey's home state, once sealed into his hip pocket politically.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has had twice as many requests for speeches by Mr. Kennedy in the coming offyear elections as for Mr. Humphrey.

Many Congressional District Democratic leaders are insisting that Mr. Humphrey keep out of their area and some don't want Mr. Johnson either for fall campaign speeches.

Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles, after beating Senator Kennedy down thoroughly before a Senate Committee in tongue-lashing discussion between the two over federal spending on Negro ghettos, said afterwards:

"I knew that Senator Kennedy was running for the presidency but I didn't know how fast. He's running on his brother's fame and his father's fortune."

All of the living children of Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr., the father, received $10,000,000 trust funds from him years ago. Senator Kennedy said recently he had received three trust funds, but gave no amounts. Joseph P. Kennedy, Sr. was asked some years ago if $500,000,000 would be a fair estimate of his wealth. He answered affirmatively.

More On Constitution

Start, La.

To the Editor:

To you who read the forum in the Morning World, I would like to say that Mrs. Inez M. Kasiah has correctly put the straight edge on the interpretation of the Constitution which our forefathers wrote. However, she overlooked the fact that the Warren Court wrote a new constitution without consulting the people through an amendment. If I remember correctly, the only authority cited for this new Constitution was something written in a book which Earl Warren read that was authored by a Communist on the subject of how to raise children and as to the type of schools which they should have. The sad part and the fact is that the majority of Congress has upheld the Warren Constitution — that is — the Congressmen of northern states just as they did in Reconstruction days following the Civil War. Then, as now, the south was put in an unbearable situation under just such a Constitution until the people of the north realized that what effects the north also effects the south and visa versa.

I believe that it was Abe Lincoln who said that a nation cannot be half free and half slave. As he was speaking of the Constitution, we conclude that what he had in mind was that the north cannot have one Constitution and the south another. The south cannot be made a police state and the north go free. Thanks to MLK and his comrades you are seeing the insanity of communism fall by its own weight. Common sense and reason would teach that if the south is forced into complete integration, it will have to be by federal troops and marshals. The same will and must apply to the north.

For years the NAACP, CORE, and other communist fronts have been teaching the Negro that by block voting, they can rule the white race. One only has to study the polls in the last election to see where the Negro vote was heavy the effectiveness of the block vote. This proves two things 1. — That after nearly 100 years of education the Negro's thinking is unchangeable as is his color. 2. — That white scalawags who will and do use the Negro for political gain and sell the nation to a disgrace and abomination in the eyes of the God his principles has not changed either. Let me say to these scalawags of candidates who buy Negro votes with promise, money, whiskey and wine, that in the end, you will reap what you sow. You should read the handwriting on the wall in Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and the next governors race in Louisiana — watch it spread nationwide.

Wants Goldwater

Monroe, La.

Dear Mr. Goldwater,

I am asking that my letter to you be printed in my newspaper's Letters To the Editor column because, in a sense, I am really addressing it to my fellow conservative Americans. I am grateful that we now number in the millions.

I read your syndicated column in my daily newspaper, Monroe Morning World with relish and would like now to take this opportunity to thank this newspaper and its editors for the responsibility they have taken in publishing your views so that we, oppressed conservative Southern Americans might continue to be blessed and benefited to the degree that we allow ourselves to be by the wisdom contained therein. By doing this for us, this fine conservative newspaper is rendering we, the people, a very real service, and I thank them for it.

And I thank you, Mr. Goldwater, for your clear and courageous voice of reason and responsibility. Yours might be thought to be a voice crying in the wilderness of big, bewildering government. Your cause, a crusade for common sense and original Constitutional government. You have invited us like-minded Americans to come and follow you in this quest for conservative Americanism. Your clarion call has reached my ears and I willingly and eagerly join up with you here and now. I should say, continue with you, for I never left the ranks.

Your recent column in our newspaper, "Rioting Symbolizes Explosive Sickness", Monroe Morning World, July 28, 1966, makes the only real sense I have heard expressed in the land anywhere by anyone representing government, and though at this time you lamentably are not, it is my fervent wish that you will again one day. I quote two excerpts here, "We must stop the hallucinations now and come back to our own world, the real and wonderful world where only the strength of man's mind, his character, his arms can truly achieve anything. . ." "We now are either going to kneel to violence or raise our heads to rational responsibility."

What could make more sense than this? What more reasonable? What more wise? And all this coming from a man others have chosen to label a misguided American, a misfit to be President of the United States, an irresponsible radical. Can there be thought to be reason in these concepts and not in the man's words? In my heart I know you were right all the time and are so right now and I continue to think of you, Mr. Goldwater, as the greatest President America never had! May the chant, "We want Goldwater" again be heard in the land, and God willing may we get him!

Your decency, your dignity, your devotion to principle shine forth and light up this land where degeneracy and deterioration tend to hold sway. We need your light, your loyalty, the strength of your mind, and should be bereft without them. Please continue to serve us who desperately need you so. Begin your march again and you will find the puny number of twenty-seven million to have grown to many times that number, proving that all don't march with Martin Luther King but can be found side by side with a true stalwart American, that giant of a man, Barry Goldwater!

In closing I thank you, sir, for the splendidness that is in you, for all that you stand for, and for having kept the faith.

Drafting Is Highest Since War In Korea

WE NOW ARE IN the process of drafting more young men than at any time since the end of the Korean war. October's call will be a record 46,200. September is up from 31,300 to 37,300.

And while this is going on, Americans in general will be getting ready to vote. The two events are rightfully connected.

This administration should be called strictly to account for the two policies which make the draft calls so high and so persistent:

1—The growing land war in Viet Nam which, it is now estimated, will require a doubled force, perhaps 400,000 men, by year's end.

2—The shattered military morale and political sniping against adequate pay which makes the goal of a fully professional military force farther than ever from attainment.

ON THE MATTER of the land war in Southeast Asia, there is almost unanimous military, academic and general agreement that this is the last thing in the world in which we should engage. Asia has a way of swallowing land armies and even the most dense swivel chair soldier in this administration's high political command should know it.

Nevertheless, this administration has constantly resisted every advice to fight a modern war with modern weapons.

The tardiness of its decision to even move toward adequate use of our airpower is well known to all Americans. The long refusal to block Haiphong harbor, through which so much of the enemy's war material flows, also is well known — best of all to the enemy, of course.

Instead, the administration slogs straight ahead toward a massive land warfare involvement, ignoring even the broadest possibilities of utilizing the troops of our Asian allies for the ground engagement while we put the full weight of our modern technology into play in the skies and on the seas.

During the 1964 campaign, I pledged that I would do everything in my power to end the draft system altogether in favor of a fully professional military force. The administration came right along within a matter almost of hours and said that, by golly, they already had just that sort of action in mind.

It was good campaign strategy for them, I suppose. But it turned out to be one of their most blatantly broken campaign promises.

INSTEAD OF DOING anything to end the draft, this administration has done everything it could to make the draft not only necessary but larger. Assistant President (as Lyndon Johnson is said to regard him) Robert McNamara, wearing his second hat as secretary of defense, has battled every effort to raise military pay and benefits to levels that would attract and hold career volunteers. Moreover, he has so downgraded the military, so stultified military initiative, and so badly abused military morale that reenlistments fall off while resignations go up.

On top of that, the secretary of defense has even suggested using the draft for purely sociological purposes, taking unemployed young men and putting them in federal work camps under a distortion of the selective service law.

Perhaps this administration will not really be happy until it has the power and the excuse to draft everyone. Fortunately, before anything like that happens, the voters will have their turn to talk at the polls.

'Dump Humphrey' Idea Infuriating To Many

MINNEAPOLIS. — Here in Hubert H. Humphrey's home state his friends' anxiety about the forthcoming Congressional elections takes second place to their fury about the "dump Humphrey" talk regarding his 1968 renomination.

They insist none of this is coming from anyone close to President Johnson, and least of all from LBJ himself. But when the questioning turns to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy the lid blows off.

"He's no man to play the middle when two ends can be played against it," said an outraged Humphreyite. "And that is exactly what he's doing."

"Will the real Bobby Kennedy please stand up?" Said another.

They see a nearly incredible cynicism in his pretenses of shyness, detachment, etc., and cite his statement, pronounced as late as March 17, about his planning for the Presidency: "If I tried that I'd destroy myself as a Senator. I'd be a basket case in three months. Besides. it would be completely unnatural."

"UNNATURAL! Wow!" exploded this man.

The Humphreyites claim that, as usual in a Kennedy operation, Bobby's political solutions proceed at two levels — one strategic and one operational. In addition to making certain of his own elevation to the 1972 nomination after President Johnson's two terms, Bobby is also trying to make certain of his own nomination, instead of Humphrey's, in the event anything should happen to LBJ before then.

If President Johnson should not live until 1968 the Minnesotan would be President, and this could stop Bobby cold in his tracks. But if President Johnson lives the Humphreyites admit Humphrey has an occupational problem which Kennedy knows is unsolvable.

Not only doesn't a Vice-President run for the Vice-Presidency, but is impossible for him to effectively protect himself while in the Vice-Presidency.

ALONG WITH Bobby's deftly planted rumors, the Humphrey supporters see him applying — step by step — the same techniques against Humphrey, who is tied to President Johnson's policies, that he engineered with such Neanderthal zest against Vice-President Richard Nixon when Nixon was on the Eisenhower team. They also see him updating to the present a series of diliberately phony or oversimplified issues ("We must talk peace in Viet Nam"), in the pattern of the phony "missile gap," "Soviet growth rate," etc., issues cynically contrived without regard for the truth or the bad effect abroad.

The Vice-President's friends agree that the Minnesotan's political future depends not only on President Johnson's life but also on Mr. Johnson's popularity. The less popular Mr. Johnson may become, with frequent pushes from Bobby, the harder it is for Humphrey to weather the Kennedy judo knockdown. Accordingly, some of the current polls especially dismay them as LBJ's popularity develops a leak or two below the waterline.

BEYOND THIS, these Humphreyites say Bobby keeps pitching to the far left in an opportunistic plan to box Humphrey's Presidential Chances by pre-empting some kind of a position on every issue. Name a far-left cliche, or a far-left gimmick, they say, and Bobby is systematically using it. As a further purpose of this they see his plan shrewdly designed to harness the image-making machine dominated by a bevy of our teaching-talking-writing clan.

Humphrey himself keeps a very proper silence for public consumption regarding the Kennedy manipulations. But as to the offset to these, and whether he's right or not, his chief reliance seems to be the conviction that Bobby will somehow outsmart himself as events develop.

After the Bay of Pigs our Army was sent to Viet Nam on the record, and with Robert Kennedy himself performing as practically a co-President, President Kennedy ordered our present war commitment there — not President Truman, Eisenhower or Johnson.

The blame would have gone to President Kennedy had he lived. Thus, from Humphrey's viewpoint he reportedly finds it utterly unconscionable that Bobby tries so unfairly to advance himself by distorting Viet Nam and the mounting draft and casualties into a political banana peel under the President and Vice-President alike.

The Minnesota Humphreyites find the over-all result as murderous as a flung knife. And both Humphrey and his White House boss are kept abominably busy taking it out of their backs all the time.

Nixon Looking Into Prospects Of GOP

DICK NIXON CAME to town on Tuesday, to talk some high politics up on the Hill and get the feel of Republican prospects. He spent most of the day in those deep machinations beloved of politicians everywhere, and then turned up at the Shoreham, once the sun was over the yardarm, to meet with about twenty young Conservatives.

The old fire-eater was just back from his Asian trip, and his time clock had not yet reset itself; he was groggy-tired, and looked it, but one of the many attractive things about Nixon is that he is a pro. He settled back in a chair and talked for two hours with clarity and candor of issues at home and abroad.

He began with a small poke at a couple of visiting correspondents: He hoped people still read newspapers, but he was inclined to believe they only watched TV. "That was where I came in." The familiar grin flashed from under that ski-jump nose. Then he was off, dead serious, on Viet Nam.

His first impression dealt with the unconscionable attitude of our European allies toward the U.S. struggle in Viet Nam. Publicly, European leaders continue polite support; privately, they are saying that the United States must find some way out of this stupid war. They are motivated by two fears — that continued U.S. involvement delays a solid detente with Russia, and that it carries a growing risk of war with China.

THESE ARE THE same Europeans, Nixon added grimly, whom we helped so much. Today they are not only not with us; in their covert trading operations, they are actively against us. Some effective diplomatic means must be found to convince them of freedom's common stake in Sotheast Asia, and to persuade them to halt the charter cargoes of oil to the Viet Cong.

The French and especially the British attitude struck Nixon as a melancholy commentary on the evils of isolationism. No nation, he remarked, can retain greatness when it looks inward instead of outward. A nation must believe in the credibility and viability of its own ideas, and in their export value. Britain once exported great ideas — the common law, the concept of parliament — but a watery socialism is worthless in the export trade of thought; and Britain now feeds on her past.

Turning directly to Viet Nam, Nixon remarked that this had been his fifth trip to Saigon in the past five years. He found prospects much improved.

In terms of domestic stability, General Ky has worked wonders. The general is skillful, strong, courageous, intelligent; yet he could not survive without U.S. support, and that support must continue unstintingly. He is the best we have. He has achieved greater stability than any leader since Diem, whose murder, in which we were co-conspirators, provided one of the blackest chapters in American diplomatic history.

On Working Hours

Over in Germany a new system is being tried — and some say successfully. Quite a few employers are allowing their workers to set their own hours, and it is said the German worker likes the new plan fine. They work when they feel like it. They not only set their own hours, but if they work more in a month than the norm they lay off that many hours next month. If they work less, they are supposed to catch up next month. Workers at tasks where machinery requires an operator's presence must see to it that some other qualified person mans the machine during his absence, of course.

Most workers, it is reported, prefer the new freedom to choose their own hours to a pay raise. And they no longer claim sick when they are not.

Best of all, the staggering of hours under this system has eased the rush-hour traffic problem.

Really, though the Great Society maybe ahead of this plan. A number of programs in the United States pays a worker not to even show up on his job.

HOW TRUE — In Ceylon, 16 members of parliament walked out in protest when the finance minister began presenting the budget in English rather than in Tamil. We thought that was very interesting, inasmuch as we ourselves have never heard a budget presented in English.

DID YOU KNOW that the "average" United States woman speaks 4,800 words a day and is on the telephone one year in her lifetime?

We Need General

This may be insulting to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, but there can be made some useful comparisons between Lincoln and Lyndon Johnson.

Abraham Lincoln changed from general to general in the first years of the Civil War. He used a performance standard, and he fired the generals who failed.

HONEST Abe did not pretend to be a general, but he figured he knew the difference between winning and losing. Finally he brought Grant from the West, and then he knew he had a winner.

The Lincoln experience demonstrated what few people realize — that most generals are of severely limited competence. The inferior Union generals, despite their superior forces, could not cope with the genius of Robert E. Lee. The talent demonstrated by Lee and MacArthur is a rare flower.

Lyndon Johnson is, unfortunately, his own general. He has not entrusted the course of battle to anyone else but is managing it himself. The Communist generals have now raised him to 500,000 men and he really doesn't know how to keep from going on to 1,000,000.

PRESIDENT Johnson doesn't really fancy himself to be a compent general. He just doesn't really think of it that way. He has been led into this operating error by the false representations of Secretary McNamara about the responsibilities of the president. This is the same false conception of presidential responsibility which led President Kennedy into the Bay of Pigs disaster.

Secretary McNamara, who is indefensibly ignorant of war, has persuaded himself and Mr. Johnson that the danger of a world holocaust is so great that every decision on the scale of conflict must be made by the President personally. So it came to pass that the President could boast to visiting clergymen that not a chicken coop was bombed in North Viet Nam without his permission. In consequence, we have Lyndon Johnson making the military decisions, Secretary McNamara as his chief of staff, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff somewhere on the outer fringes as advisers.

THE PERNICIOUS effect of this system is that there is no one to fire! President Johnson can't fire Secretary McNamara because the Secretary has left all the decisions to the President. President Johnson should fire himself, but that is not likely.

The President should command by establishing policy and setting goals for his subordinates to achieve. He should demand results and get rid of men who cannot produce them. When he makes the military decisions, he abandons his proper role as president and undermines his Defense organization.

Instead of standing like Abraham Lincoln as a judge of whether we are winning or losing, Lyndon Johnson has committed himself to the losing policies. It is as if President Lincoln had become so attached to General McClellan that he just could not get rid of the man. The war might have lasted ten years, or have been lost.

A good general should be able to tell the President just what is required to stop the Communist aggression in Viet Nam, and he should then be able to fulfill his promises. If he fails, he should be fired.

All President Johnson has to do is to find the right general and give him the job — as Abraham Lincoln did.

Pressure For Red Trade

For reasons that escape us, President Johnson persists in his efforts to expand trade with Communist countries. In South Viet Nam, we are warring with the Communists, and the enemy is being supported by Communists everywhere. But we are not at war with them. Perhaps that delicate distinction is the reason.

In any event, despite Congressional rebuffs, the President is still trying to push through a bill which would make it easier to deal with Communist countries, and the administration is said to be planning other trade missions like those that visited Poland and Hungary last fall. These trade missions would be made up of hundreds of American businessmen, escorted by retinues of Washington bureaucrats. The President is said to be offering legislators an inducement that is usually attractive to junketeers — assurance that the Commerce Department will pick up the tab for the monthlong trips.

It's impossible to tell precisely where the pressure is coming from to permit American firms to deal with an avowed enemy. No doubt some American businessmen want such trade, just as certain American companies had no compunction about selling scrap iron to the Japanese in the months before Pearl Harbor. The British and other wheeler-dealer nations would like to see the U. S. take a more tolerant view of East-West trade.

Of one thing there can be no doubt: most of the pressure for trade with the Communists comes from the same element that constantly strives to build up the Reds at the expense of the Red, White and Blue. And this should be the tipoff, and the best reason for opposing such trade.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, (Democrat from Arkansas) Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is obviously conscious of this fact. He has made it plain that he's opposed to sending trade missions to such contries as Bulgaria and Hungary because they are shipping arms to North Viet Nam. In his book that constitutes trading with the enemy, regardless of what the President thinks.

We think he's right. And we think it is asinine to "build bridges" to Red regimes when those regimes use those bridges to send supplies to Communists who are killing American GI's.

Is it too much to ask that our leaders be as anti-Communist as those GI's?

All-Asian Conference For Viet Peace Is Sought

Thailand suggested it, President Johnson was for it, seven Asian countries backed it, even the Republicans were in favor.

"It" was an all-Asian conference to try to end the war in Viet Nam. There were a couple of vetoes — North Viet Nam and Red China. Said the Communists: a Johnson plot.

Record Sorties

Meantime, American forces passed the 300,000 mark in South Viet Nam, the air war moved to record sorties, napalm fell by mistake on American forces, and the Viet Cong sank an American freighter in the Saigon River.

At home, Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the Senate the United States was ready to defend peace anywhere in the world; Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said U. S. military strength was gaining steadily, and President Lyndon B. Johnson held a news conference and then went flying off to the West, with stops at Arco, Idaho; Denver, Colo., and Pryor, Okla.

His theme: the United States at home is a great, liberal, progressive democracy and is the same beyond the borders. He appealed for orderly elections in South Viet Nam, and for widened cooperation with the Soviet Union in lessening the threat of nuclear war. In his news conference the President defended his record in urban aid and appealed to both labor and business for restraint on the wage-price line.

He said his administration had increased spending on urban programs a third more than the previous administration, which was John F. Kennedy's. Some said that was a crack at Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, whose increasing barbs at Democrats and Republicans alike were stirring talk of the 1968 campaign.

De Gaulle's Trip

French President Charles de Gaulle, starting a round-the-world trip, flew into Djibouti Thursday night and was greeted by rioters seeking independence for French Somaliland. Friday the riots were worse and De Gaulle was forced to cancel a speech in a public square. Many people were hurt, and some killed, as police charged the crowds with clubs, tear gas and concussion grenades. The tiny colony between the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden is the last French territory in Africa.

Rail service throughout Canada ceased at noon Friday as unions struck to enforce wage demands. The unions, rejecting an 18 per cent wage increase offer, were holding out for 40 per cent over two years. Prospects for settlement were dim, and Parliament is expected to consider back-to-work legislation next week.

Moon Pictures

America's Lunar Orbiter sent back a "beautiful" picture of the earth, taken from a few miles outside the moon. Then the satellite was commanded to move in to 25 miles from the moon's surface, take pictures of the moon itself, looking for likely places for Americans to land.

The Soviet Union launched Luna 11, a 3,608-pound satellite, to go to the moon and do research for the Russians.

The Apollo moonship, which will carry three men to the moon, took its first flight from Cape Kennedy Thursday. It flew three-quarters of the way around the world, dropped near Wake Island, and was picked up by the carrier Hornet. Seemed like a perfect test.

A Titan 3 rocket blew up Friday 80 seconds after leaving Cape Kennedy, sent fiery debris showering into the Atlantic. It was supposed to have dropped eight communications satellites into orbit around the world for use as a military network. The Titan 3, the Air Force's largest, instead turned into a $20 million roman candle.

A new fever was sweeping Red China. In all major cities, bands of teen-agers known as the Red Guard roamed the streets inveighing against symbols of the old order — foreign churches, the elderly, those who had salvaged any wealth from the Communist takeover, those who employed servants. The intent of the campaign was not yet clear, but Red China is a country where nothing happens by chance. In Peiping, the Red Guard swarmed into the Convent of the Sacred Heart, a Roman Catholic convent run by French nuns as a school for the children of foreign diplomats. Statutes of Christ and the Virgin Mary were smashed, signs denouncing religion and "foreign devils" were plastered on walls, and the nuns disappeared.

In other cities, Chinese regarded as bourgeois or upper class were terrorized by the youth bands, who beat them on the street, broke into homes and took money and jewels, and stopped buses to harangue the passengers on the "cultural revolution."

German Generals

Down went the German generals — one, two, three — and West Germany was thrown into political turmoil. Defense Minister Kai-Uwe von Hassel fired Lt. Gen. Werner Panitski on Monday for publicly criticizing the ministry. The next day Gen. Heinz Trettner quit in protest over Panitski's suspension, and on Wednesday Maj. Gen. Gunther Pape resigned in sympathy with his two colleagues. For awhile Von Hassel's ministry teetered in the political balance, then Chancellor Ludwig Erhard hurried home from vacation, strongly backed Von Hassel and the immediate crisis seemed over. The main issue seemed to be civilian control over the military, a battle long familiar in Germany.

Death of the Week:

Francis X. Bushman, 83, screen idol of the silent era, veteran of more than 400 movies and once termed "the handsomest man in the world," died Tuesday of a heart condition at his home in suburban Los Angeles.

Quote of the Week:

"One mishap — one innocent civilian killed, one civilian wounded or one dwelling needlessly destroyed — is too many." Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

Gas — A dirty word in the lexicon of modern war — could make American efforts in Viet Nam far more effective and humane, according to a former chemical warfare expert.

Advocating the use of mustard gas to neutralized underground tunnel networks used by the Viet Cong is retired Brig. Gen. J. H. Pothschild, chief chemical advisor for the United Nations forces during the Korean conflict.

"Actually, gas used properly is much more effective in disabling the enemy — without killing or permanently maiming them — than are bombs, guns, grenades, or other accepted weapons," said the general in an interview.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Johnson leave the White House to board a helicopter for a flight to Andrews Air Force Base for a one-day speaking tour in Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma. After visiting the three states, they went to their Texas ranch for the weekend. Their first stop was Pocatello, Idaho. (AP Wirephoto)

Forthschild is former assistant professor of chemistry at West Point, former commander of the U.S. Army Chemical Corps Research and Development Command, and, since his retirement in 1957, an official of a major peace organization, United World Federalists.

"Myths are built up about the use of gases in a war," the general said. "There is a fear of the unknown. And the government doesn't even allow dissemination of information on gas.

From a military point of view, Rothschild said, it is clear that American forces must "drive the Viet Cong out of the area.

"But as long as they have such an effective tunnel system, complete with underground conference rooms, storage space, hospitals, escape channels, and other facilities, our current methods are not effective enough."

Bullets of liquid mustard gas, considered "king of the gases" could be shot into entrances of VC tunnels, the general theorized.

"It would slowly vaporize and would permeate the entire tunnel area, neutralizing blocks of the tunnels for years."

The gas, which gets its name from its mustard or garlic oil smell, initially irritates the eyes, lungs and burns the skin. With long-time and intense exposure it can cause permanent damages to the eyes, and creates a severe burn—like a sunburn — sometimes raising blisters.

Can Delay Effects

Effects of the gas can be delayed four to six hours. Healing takes a long time — but is not too painful.

"However, once you've encountered mustard gas — you don't want to again," Rothschild said. Another advantage of its use would be to increase the run on VC medical facilities for periods of time.

A third advantage could be psychological effects, similar to results of recent U.S. forces' use of anti-crop agents.

"The Viet Cong spread the word we were using poison gas. But it backfired on them. All the people cleared out of those areas — even though all we used was something like a weed killer."

Warning signs could be placed near tunnel entrances to keep citizens and VC out, he said.

"People who claim the use of gas is inhumane leave me cold," the general said.

"Mustard gas could have saved many lives in American invasions of the Japanese islands during World War II. We could have dropped mustard gas, incapitating the people, and then walked ashore with no resistance.

"Instead — since gas was a dirty word —we went ashore throwing phosphorous grenades to drive them out of their holes. And then we shot them."

Political Campaign

At this last weekend in August, with election campaigns already in full swing in some places, there are still 20 states where party slates are yet to be completed for the Nov. 8 general elections.

In the late schedule adopted by so many states, Sept. 13 will be the biggest primary day of the year. Eleven states will hold primaries that day, including such larger ones as New Jersey, Massachusetts, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But first Delaware Republicans and both parties in New York will hold nominating conventions and Iowa, Nevada and North Dakota will have their primaries.

Delaware Republicans are set to renominate Sen. J. Caleb Boggs next Tuesday. The state does not elect a governor this year.

GOV. Nelson A. Rockefeller is the assured Republican nominee for a third term in New York, and unless some unforeseen element enters the Democratic situation that party's nominee against him probably will be Frank D. O'Connor, now president of the New York City Council. The party conventions are Sept. 7-8.

Aug. 30: Delaware Republican convention, senator, 1 representative. Sept. 6: Iowa-Senator, 7 representatives, governor. Nevada — 1 representative, governor. North Dakota — 2 representatives.

Sept. 7-8: New York nominating conventions both parties, governor.

SEPT. 13: Arizona — 3 represntatives, governor. Maryland — 8 representatives, governor. Massachusetts — Senator, 12 representatives, governor. Minnesota — Senator, 8 representatives, governor. New Hampshire — Senator, 2 representatives, governor. New Jersey — Senator, 15 representatives. Rhode Island — Senator, 2 representatives, governor. Utah — 2 representative, governor. Wisconsin — 10 representives, governor.

Sept. 14: Georgia-Senator, 10 representatives, governor.

Sept. 17: Louisiana runoff.

Sept. 20: Washington — 7 representatives.

Sept. 28: Georgia runoff if necessary.

Oct 1: Hawaii — 2 representatives, governor.

Nov. 8: General elections.

As President Johnson's 58th birthday, was observed this weekend, it might be a good time to look at the brighter side of his life. There is, after all, a tendency in some quarters to talk about how burdensome his job is, what horrible decisions he faces from moment to moment and how the poor man never has a minute to himself.

FOR ONE thing, a President never has to go to the barber shop. The barber comes to him.

He never has to worry about setting the alarm clock, sending out his laundry or getting the oil changed in the car.

If a President feels like it, he can travel all over the world without carrying a cent of cash. Someone else handles all bills. A trusted secretary takes care of his checkbook.

A doctor is in attendance at all times, although this is not necessarily a blessing. There have been White House occupants who turned into virtual hypochondriacs simply in the knowledge that medical care was available constantly and why waste it.

A swimming pool, a gymnasium and a steam room are available to the President day and night, as are a man to take care of his dogs, expert gardeners and a 24-hour supply of chauffeurs seven days a week.

THESE are the more opulent blessings, but the small things make the job more luxurious than outsiders may realize. For one thing, a President can go for a walk or a trip to Australia without carrying anything in his pockets, except for a handkerchief and a fountain pen.

He has no need for keys, loose change, wallet or cigarette lighter he doesn't smoke. He never has to wait for a plane or train. His transportation moves at his wish and not a schedule.

He never has to go to a supermarket or drug store. If he needs new shirts, they are sent to him. He does not have to worry about having the lawn mowed. If he wants to bowl, there's an alley not far from his swimming pool. If he wants to see the latest movie, he has a theater in the basement.

He can have the Tijuana Brass play for a private party simply by expressing a wish. This happened last week and the musicians were delighted.

And for all this, he is paid well and has an expense account for travel and entertainment.

The prequisites are plentiful, but Johnson probably would be happy to trade them all for preventing one city slum riot or saving one casualty in Viet Nam.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By VERNON GUIDRY

World Staff Writer

Gov. John J. McKeithen flew into Monroe Thursday to address a joint meeting of civic clubs, while former Congressman Gillis Long was calling a press conference in New Orleans. These ingredients turned out the week's top news stories.

While McKeithen was telling his Monroe audience that he was going to make the state the "first in the South," Long was predicting that the gubernatorial succession would fail at the polls in November.

Long said his remarks were an answer to the "governor's unprovoked and unwarranted attack on me" at a press conference a day earlier. McKeithen had said there was a conspiracy to defeat the two-term proposal. He did mention Long by name, but made it clear he referred to the Alexandria attorney.

Long said McKeithen's remarks "were premediated on his part because he has never succeeded at being for anything. Any election he ever won, anything he's ever been involved in, he won it by dragging out a phony issue and merely attacking that phony issue."

"Now to keep from having to defend his grab for power — and that's what it is — he has gone out looking for someone else to attack."

MENTIONS VETO

He said he could understand "why the heat is getting the governor." He mentioned McKeithen's veto of an appropriation to provide pay raises to school lunchroom workers and bus drivers plus the increase in insurance rates as well as legislative reapportionment.

"We have had three years to do something about it (reapportionment) and now he says we can do it all in 15 days," Long said.

Federal courts have ordered the Legislature reapportioned by Jan. 1. The governor says he will call a general election after the Nov. 8 general election.

McKeithen answered in kind, calling Long the "poverty man" assistant of Sargent Shriver and charging that he had been campaigning "all over the state with Washington money," when contacted by the Morning World in Columbia after his speaking engagement here.

"I am glad to see that the poverty man who has only been in this state a very few months and has once again returned from Washington, has finally started speaking for himself publicly instead of through hirelings such as Buster Coleman," McKeithen said.

"It is common knowledge in Central Louisana," the governor said, "That Buster Coleman was Gillis Long's candidate for the Public Service Commission and that he wrote Buster's attack on me, my father, my brother, and Judge Carlos Spaht and others. This was the tactic that we knew peculiar to Gillis Long when we ran against him for governor three years ago."

McKeithen said he wondered if Long would be a candidate for governor.

Asked the same question at his press conference, Long said he was not in a position to say one way or the other.

McKeithen's Monroe address was made to some 300 Twin City civic leaders and was sponsored by the Downtown Monroe Lions, Downtown Monroe Kiwanis and the Monroe Rotary clubs.

The governor told his Monroe listeners "this is where I got my start, in the piney woods along the Ouachita River. It is proper and fitting that I should come back here and make an informal report on what we have accomplished and what we are trying to do for our state."

"We are moving now," he said. "Louisiana is now first in the South in industrial expansion and personal income has increased 50 per cent above the rest of the nation."

"Louisianans have demonstrated time after time that when they are given equal opportunity, they always excel."

North Louisiana was saddened by the loss of Benjamin C. Dawkins, long a leading figure in the state's judiciary. He died at his Monroe home Monday after a long illness. He was 85.

Judge Dawkins was a native of Ouachita City in Union Parish. From 1906 to 1912, he practiced law in Monroe, and was elected judge of the Fourth Judicial District in 1912. In 1918, he was elected to the Supreme Court as an associate justice. He served in this capacity until 1924, when he was appointed as judge of U.S. District Court for the western district of Louisiana. He served in that capacity until 1953 when he retired. His son, Ben C. Dawkins Jr. now holds the same federal judgeship.

SHERIFFS MEET

The Louisiana Sheriff's Association held its annual convention in Bastrop. Sheriff Jerry Wattigny of Iberia Parish was elected president for the coming year. Sheriff Bailey Grant was relected secretary - treasurer. Other officers were Sheriff C. E. Hester, Madison Parish, first vice president; and B. F. Bergeron, West Baton Rouge Parish, second vice president.

Fourth District Judge Mack E. Barham, a resident and former city judge of Bastrop, told convention delegates that the state's pardon and parole system needs an overhaul. He said the work of the judiciary and law enforcement agencies was often overturned by unqualified and incompetent members of parole boards and staffs. Barham also took up recent landmark decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court affecting the rights of the individual. The jurist said they had swung too far away from the obligation of protecting society.

The Ouachita Parish Police Jury, in its second attempt, received apparently acceptable bids on renovation and expansion of the courthouse. Ward 10 Juror Robert Downing, chairman of the jury's courthouse committee, said the bids were just about "on the money." The apparent low bidder was Jesse F. Heard & Son, Inc. with the offer of $1,567,000 with a time for construction of 500 calendar days. The bids were referred to Downing's committee for study. Three bids received earlier came in over the $1.7 million bond issue voted for the improvement. The plans were pared down to come within the budget.

Glenwood Hospital was also having building problems. Officials announced that expansion plans are being curtailed due to loss of federal funds. The funds were dropped because of integration requirements. The plans will have to be cut down to fit the $870,000 bond issue approved by West Monroe voters in 1964. Bids on the work will be received next month.

AGAINST ODOR

Monroe's Mayor W. L. Howard came out against odor and home discoloration and called on those responsible to take appropriate action. While not naming the culprit in the much studied and discussed problem, Howard said the problem had its source on the west side of the river. "We know where the trouble lies," he added.

Monroe City School System teachers were informed that they would lose about $200 this year. A "cost of living" supplement to teachers pay is being cut because of a shrinking surplus in the system budget. Board President W. S. Gannaway said the move was a financial necessity. "We just ran out of money," he said. The cut has yet to be taken up at a board meeting.

A pay incentive plan to encourage men with college educations into police work was adopted for the Monroe police department. The plan offers increased salaries to policemen for every complete year of college, up to a master's degree, with a maximum of $200 per month over regular salary.

"The profession of police work is requiring a progressively higher educational background," Chief James C. Kelly Jr. said. "We need to hire and keep good, professional men in the Monroe police department. This is the first step in that direction."

The deadline for calling the Fifth District sales passed with no action by the Ouachita Parish School Board, as was its intention. The deadline marked the demise of the much amended tax bill authored by Rep. Lantz Womack of Franklin Parish. Hope for implementation of teacher salary hikes hinged on a reworked tax bill to be taken up at a special session of the legislature in November.

Joy Woods, the reigning Miss Louisiana, was in Monroe during the week for final touches on her wardrobe for the Miss America competition next month. The 20-year-old New Orleans girl represented Northeast Louisiana State College in the state contest here.

A march by Negroes to promote voter registration in four North Louisiana parishes — despite the fact that registration rolls had closed Wednesday as per state law — looked less and less like a march as it progressed. After a two-day stay in the Claiborne Parish jail, the marchers took to automobiles and are scheduled to wind up in Jonesboro this afternoon. The march is being sponsored by the Great Society Christian Organization of Grambling.

Children and parents alike were caught up in the rush to get ready for the first day of school. Monroe schools announced doors would open on Sept. 1 with a half-day schedule until Friday, Sept. 9.

Increased enrollment was predicted for Northeast Louisiana State College this fall. Registration for classes will be held Sept. 14-15 with classes to begin Sept. 16.

There was a question during the week on what kind of sea wall Monroe would have to keep the Ouachita River in its place. The Monroe City Council backed a Tensas Basin Levee Board plan that would be more costly than others, but would stay closer to the river, thus taking less of the city's real estate. The U.S. Corps of Engineers favor a bulkier but less expensive form of protection to be installed between Bry and Grammont Streets. The engineers have promised to listen to the city proposal.

TRAFFIC DEATH

A traffic fatality claimed the life of a 53-year-old Winn Parish woman near Tullos. Mrs. Alma J. Cockerham of Joyce apparently fell asleep at the wheel of her car and crashed into a bridge abutment.

Highway Commissioner James Moore, in speaking to the Monroe Chapter of the Society of Residential Appraisers, called the Louisiana Highway Department the "biggest real estate dealer" in the state. Moore said right of way purchases have totaled $90 million in the last six years.

Rounding out a sometimes hectic week in Twin Cities news, the Ouachita Parish School Board Saturday dismissed Mrs. Cecile Burkett, principal of Drew Elementary School. Acting after hearing eight hours of testimony from 18 witnesses, the board voted unanimously, though four of its members were absent.

Mrs. Burkett was charged with incompetence by reason of her "failure and inability" to maintain harmony with the faculty and staff of the school, parents and community, or school-related organizations and activities.

On Working Hours

Over in Germany a new system is being tried — and some say successfully. Quite a few employers are allowing their workers to set their own hours, and it is said the German worker likes the new plan fine. They work when they feel like it. They not only set their own hours, but if they work more in a month than the norm they lay off that many hours next month. If they work less, they are supposed to catch up next month. Workers at tasks where machinery requires an operator's presence must see to it that some other qualified person mans the machine during his absence, of course.

Most workers, it is reported, prefer the new freedom to choose their own hours to a pay raise. And they no longer claim sick when they are not.

Best of all, the staggering of hours under this system has eased the rush-hour traffic problem.

Really, though the Great Society maybe ahead of this plan. A number of programs in the United States pays a worker not to even show up on his job.

HOW TRUE — In Ceylon, 16 members of parliament walked out in protest when the finance minister began presenting the budget in English rather than in Tamil. We thought that was very interesting, inasmuch as we ourselves have never heard a budget presented in English.

DID YOU KNOW that the "average" United States woman speaks 4,800 words a day and is on the telephone one year in her lifetime?

We Need General

This may be insulting to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, but there can be made some useful comparisons between Lincoln and Lyndon Johnson.

Abraham Lincoln changed from general to general in the first years of the Civil War. He used a performance standard, and he fired the generals who failed.

HONEST Abe did not pretend to be a general, but he figured he knew the difference between winning and losing. Finally he brought Grant from the West, and then he knew he had a winner.

The Lincoln experience demonstrated what few people realize — that most generals are of severely limited competence. The inferior Union generals, despite their superior forces, could not cope with the genius of Robert E. Lee. The talent demonstrated by Lee and MacArthur is a rare flower.

Lyndon Johnson is, unfortunately, his own general. He has not entrusted the course of battle to anyone else but is managing it himself. The Communist generals have now raised him to 500,000 men and he really doesn't know how to keep from going on to 1,000,000.

PRESIDENT Johnson doesn't really fancy himself to be a compent general. He just doesn't really think of it that way. He has been led into this operating error by the false representations of Secretary McNamara about the responsibilities of the president. This is the same false conception of presidential responsibility which led President Kennedy into the Bay of Pigs disaster.

Secretary McNamara, who is indefensibly ignorant of war, has persuaded himself and Mr. Johnson that the danger of a world holocaust is so great that every decision on the scale of conflict must be made by the President personally. So it came to pass that the President could boast to visiting clergymen that not a chicken coop was bombed in North Viet Nam without his permission. In consequence, we have Lyndon Johnson making the military decisions, Secretary McNamara as his chief of staff, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff somewhere on the outer fringes as advisers.

THE PERNICIOUS effect of this system is that there is no one to fire! President Johnson can't fire Secretary McNamara because the Secretary has left all the decisions to the President. President Johnson should fire himself, but that is not likely.

The President should command by establishing policy and setting goals for his subordinates to achieve. He should demand results and get rid of men who cannot produce them. When he makes the military decisions, he abandons his proper role as president and undermines his Defense organization.

Instead of standing like Abraham Lincoln as a judge of whether we are winning or losing, Lyndon Johnson has committed himself to the losing policies. It is as if President Lincoln had become so attached to General McClellan that he just could not get rid of the man. The war might have lasted ten years, or have been lost.

A good general should be able to tell the President just what is required to stop the Communist aggression in Viet Nam, and he should then be able to fulfill his promises. If he fails, he should be fired.

All President Johnson has to do is to find the right general and give him the job — as Abraham Lincoln did.

Pressure For Red Trade

For reasons that escape us, President Johnson persists in his efforts to expand trade with Communist countries. In South Viet Nam, we are warring with the Communists, and the enemy is being supported by Communists everywhere. But we are not at war with them. Perhaps that delicate distinction is the reason.

In any event, despite Congressional rebuffs, the President is still trying to push through a bill which would make it easier to deal with Communist countries, and the administration is said to be planning other trade missions like those that visited Poland and Hungary last fall. These trade missions would be made up of hundreds of American businessmen, escorted by retinues of Washington bureaucrats. The President is said to be offering legislators an inducement that is usually attractive to junketeers — assurance that the Commerce Department will pick up the tab for the monthlong trips.

It's impossible to tell precisely where the pressure is coming from to permit American firms to deal with an avowed enemy. No doubt some American businessmen want such trade, just as certain American companies had no compunction about selling scrap iron to the Japanese in the months before Pearl Harbor. The British and other wheeler-dealer nations would like to see the U. S. take a more tolerant view of East-West trade.

Of one thing there can be no doubt: most of the pressure for trade with the Communists comes from the same element that constantly strives to build up the Reds at the expense of the Red, White and Blue. And this should be the tipoff, and the best reason for opposing such trade.

Rep. Wilbur Mills, (Democrat from Arkansas) Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is obviously conscious of this fact. He has made it plain that he's opposed to sending trade missions to such contries as Bulgaria and Hungary because they are shipping arms to North Viet Nam. In his book that constitutes trading with the enemy, regardless of what the President thinks.

We think he's right. And we think it is asinine to "build bridges" to Red regimes when those regimes use those bridges to send supplies to Communists who are killing American GI's.

Is it too much to ask that our leaders be as anti-Communist as those GI's?

All-Asian Conference For Viet Peace Is Sought

Thailand suggested it, President Johnson was for it, seven Asian countries backed it, even the Republicans were in favor.

"It" was an all-Asian conference to try to end the war in Viet Nam. There were a couple of vetoes — North Viet Nam and Red China. Said the Communists: a Johnson plot.

Record Sorties

Meantime, American forces passed the 300,000 mark in South Viet Nam, the air war moved to record sorties, napalm fell by mistake on American forces, and the Viet Cong sank an American freighter in the Saigon River.

At home, Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the Senate the United States was ready to defend peace anywhere in the world; Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said U. S. military strength was gaining steadily, and President Lyndon B. Johnson held a news conference and then went flying off to the West, with stops at Arco, Idaho; Denver, Colo., and Pryor, Okla.

His theme: the United States at home is a great, liberal, progressive democracy and is the same beyond the borders. He appealed for orderly elections in South Viet Nam, and for widened cooperation with the Soviet Union in lessening the threat of nuclear war. In his news conference the President defended his record in urban aid and appealed to both labor and business for restraint on the wage-price line.

He said his administration had increased spending on urban programs a third more than the previous administration, which was John F. Kennedy's. Some said that was a crack at Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, whose increasing barbs at Democrats and Republicans alike were stirring talk of the 1968 campaign.

De Gaulle's Trip

French President Charles de Gaulle, starting a round-the-world trip, flew into Djibouti Thursday night and was greeted by rioters seeking independence for French Somaliland. Friday the riots were worse and De Gaulle was forced to cancel a speech in a public square. Many people were hurt, and some killed, as police charged the crowds with clubs, tear gas and concussion grenades. The tiny colony between the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden is the last French territory in Africa.

Rail service throughout Canada ceased at noon Friday as unions struck to enforce wage demands. The unions, rejecting an 18 per cent wage increase offer, were holding out for 40 per cent over two years. Prospects for settlement were dim, and Parliament is expected to consider back-to-work legislation next week.

Moon Pictures

America's Lunar Orbiter sent back a "beautiful" picture of the earth, taken from a few miles outside the moon. Then the satellite was commanded to move in to 25 miles from the moon's surface, take pictures of the moon itself, looking for likely places for Americans to land.

The Soviet Union launched Luna 11, a 3,608-pound satellite, to go to the moon and do research for the Russians.

The Apollo moonship, which will carry three men to the moon, took its first flight from Cape Kennedy Thursday. It flew three-quarters of the way around the world, dropped near Wake Island, and was picked up by the carrier Hornet. Seemed like a perfect test.

A Titan 3 rocket blew up Friday 80 seconds after leaving Cape Kennedy, sent fiery debris showering into the Atlantic. It was supposed to have dropped eight communications satellites into orbit around the world for use as a military network. The Titan 3, the Air Force's largest, instead turned into a $20 million roman candle.

A new fever was sweeping Red China. In all major cities, bands of teen-agers known as the Red Guard roamed the streets inveighing against symbols of the old order — foreign churches, the elderly, those who had salvaged any wealth from the Communist takeover, those who employed servants. The intent of the campaign was not yet clear, but Red China is a country where nothing happens by chance. In Peiping, the Red Guard swarmed into the Convent of the Sacred Heart, a Roman Catholic convent run by French nuns as a school for the children of foreign diplomats. Statutes of Christ and the Virgin Mary were smashed, signs denouncing religion and "foreign devils" were plastered on walls, and the nuns disappeared.

In other cities, Chinese regarded as bourgeois or upper class were terrorized by the youth bands, who beat them on the street, broke into homes and took money and jewels, and stopped buses to harangue the passengers on the "cultural revolution."

German Generals

Down went the German generals — one, two, three — and West Germany was thrown into political turmoil. Defense Minister Kai-Uwe von Hassel fired Lt. Gen. Werner Panitski on Monday for publicly criticizing the ministry. The next day Gen. Heinz Trettner quit in protest over Panitski's suspension, and on Wednesday Maj. Gen. Gunther Pape resigned in sympathy with his two colleagues. For awhile Von Hassel's ministry teetered in the political balance, then Chancellor Ludwig Erhard hurried home from vacation, strongly backed Von Hassel and the immediate crisis seemed over. The main issue seemed to be civilian control over the military, a battle long familiar in Germany.

Quote of the Week:

"One mishap — one innocent civilian killed, one civilian wounded or one dwelling needlessly destroyed — is too many." Gen. William C. Westmoreland.

Gas — A dirty word in the lexicon of modern war — could make American efforts in Viet Nam far more effective and humane, according to a former chemical warfare expert.

Advocating the use of mustard gas to neutralized underground tunnel networks used by the Viet Cong is retired Brig. Gen. J. H. Pothschild, chief chemical advisor for the United Nations forces during the Korean conflict.

"Actually, gas used properly is much more effective in disabling the enemy — without killing or permanently maiming them — than are bombs, guns, grenades, or other accepted weapons," said the general in an interview.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Johnson leave the White House to board a helicopter for a flight to Andrews Air Force Base for a one-day speaking tour in Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma. Forthschild is former assistant professor of chemistry at West Point, former commander of the U.S. Army Chemical Corps Research and Development Command, and, since his retirement in 1957, an official of a major peace organization, United World Federalists.

"Myths are built up about the use of gases in a war," the general said. "There is a fear of the unknown. And the government doesn't even allow dissemination of information on gas.

From a military point of view, Rothschild said, it is clear that American forces must "drive the Viet Cong out of the area.

"But as long as they have such an effective tunnel system, complete with underground conference rooms, storage space, hospitals, escape channels, and other facilities, our current methods are not effective enough."

Bullets of liquid mustard gas, considered "king of the gases" could be shot into entrances of VC tunnels, the general theorized.

"It would slowly vaporize and would permeate the entire tunnel area, neutralizing blocks of the tunnels for years."

The gas, which gets its name from its mustard or garlic oil smell, initially irritates the eyes, lungs and burns the skin. With long-time and intense exposure it can cause permanent damages to the eyes, and creates a severe burn—like a sunburn — sometimes raising blisters.

Can Delay Effects

Effects of the gas can be delayed four to six hours. Healing takes a long time — but is not too painful.

"However, once you've encountered mustard gas — you don't want to again," Rothschild said. Another advantage of its use would be to increase the run on VC medical facilities for periods of time.

A third advantage could be psychological effects, similar to results of recent U.S. forces' use of anti-crop agents.

"The Viet Cong spread the word we were using poison gas. But it backfired on them. All the people cleared out of those areas — even though all we used was something like a weed killer."

Warning signs could be placed near tunnel entrances to keep citizens and VC out, he said.

"People who claim the use of gas is inhumane leave me cold," the general said.

"Mustard gas could have saved many lives in American invasions of the Japanese islands during World War II. We could have dropped mustard gas, incapitating the people, and then walked ashore with no resistance.

"Instead — since gas was a dirty word —we went ashore throwing phosphorous grenades to drive them out of their holes. And then we shot them."

Political Campaign

At this last weekend in August, with election campaigns already in full swing in some places, there are still 20 states where party slates are yet to be completed for the Nov. 8 general elections.

In the late schedule adopted by so many states, Sept. 13 will be the biggest primary day of the year. Eleven states will hold primaries that day, including such larger ones as New Jersey, Massachusetts, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

But first Delaware Republicans and both parties in New York will hold nominating conventions and Iowa, Nevada and North Dakota will have their primaries.

Delaware Republicans are set to renominate Sen. J. Caleb Boggs next Tuesday. The state does not elect a governor this year.

GOV. Nelson A. Rockefeller is the assured Republican nominee for a third term in New York, and unless some unforeseen element enters the Democratic situation that party's nominee against him probably will be Frank D. O'Connor, now president of the New York City Council. The party conventions are Sept. 7-8.

Aug. 30: Delaware Republican convention, senator, 1 representative. Sept. 6: Iowa-Senator, 7 representatives, governor. Nevada — 1 representative, governor. North Dakota — 2 representatives.

Sept. 7-8: New York nominating conventions both parties, governor.

SEPT. 13: Arizona — 3 represntatives, governor. Maryland — 8 representatives, governor. Massachusetts — Senator, 12 representatives, governor. Minnesota — Senator, 8 representatives, governor. New Hampshire — Senator, 2 representatives, governor. New Jersey — Senator, 15 representatives. Rhode Island — Senator, 2 representatives, governor. Utah — 2 representative, governor. Wisconsin — 10 representives, governor.

Sept. 14: Georgia-Senator, 10 representatives, governor.

Sept. 17: Louisiana runoff.

Sept. 20: Washington — 7 representatives.

Sept. 28: Georgia runoff if necessary.

Oct 1: Hawaii — 2 representatives, governor.

Nov. 8: General elections.

As President Johnson's 58th birthday, was observed this weekend, it might be a good time to look at the brighter side of his life. There is, after all, a tendency in some quarters to talk about how burdensome his job is, what horrible decisions he faces from moment to moment and how the poor man never has a minute to himself.

FOR ONE thing, a President never has to go to the barber shop. The barber comes to him.

He never has to worry about setting the alarm clock, sending out his laundry or getting the oil changed in the car.

If a President feels like it, he can travel all over the world without carrying a cent of cash. Someone else handles all bills. A trusted secretary takes care of his checkbook.

A doctor is in attendance at all times, although this is not necessarily a blessing. There have been White House occupants who turned into virtual hypochondriacs simply in the knowledge that medical care was available constantly and why waste it.

A swimming pool, a gymnasium and a steam room are available to the President day and night, as are a man to take care of his dogs, expert gardeners and a 24-hour supply of chauffeurs seven days a week.

THESE are the more opulent blessings, but the small things make the job more luxurious than outsiders may realize. For one thing, a President can go for a walk or a trip to Australia without carrying anything in his pockets, except for a handkerchief and a fountain pen.

He has no need for keys, loose change, wallet or cigarette lighter he doesn't smoke. He never has to wait for a plane or train. His transportation moves at his wish and not a schedule.

He never has to go to a supermarket or drug store. If he needs new shirts, they are sent to him. He does not have to worry about having the lawn mowed. If he wants to bowl, there's an alley not far from his swimming pool. If he wants to see the latest movie, he has a theater in the basement.

He can have the Tijuana Brass play for a private party simply by expressing a wish. This happened last week and the musicians were delighted.

And for all this, he is paid well and has an expense account for travel and entertainment.

The prequisites are plentiful, but Johnson probably would be happy to trade them all for preventing one city slum riot or saving one casualty in Viet Nam.

The Week's Twin Cities-Area News In Review

By VERNON GUIDRY

World Staff Writer

Gov. John J. McKeithen flew into Monroe Thursday to address a joint meeting of civic clubs, while former Congressman Gillis Long was calling a press conference in New Orleans. These ingredients turned out the week's top news stories.

While McKeithen was telling his Monroe audience that he was going to make the state the "first in the South," Long was predicting that the gubernatorial succession would fail at the polls in November.

Long said his remarks were an answer to the "governor's unprovoked and unwarranted attack on me" at a press conference a day earlier. McKeithen had said there was a conspiracy to defeat the two-term proposal. He did mention Long by name, but made it clear he referred to the Alexandria attorney.

Long said McKeithen's remarks "were premediated on his part because he has never succeeded at being for anything. Any election he ever won, anything he's ever been involved in, he won it by dragging out a phony issue and merely attacking that phony issue."

"Now to keep from having to defend his grab for power — and that's what it is — he has gone out looking for someone else to attack."

MENTIONS VETO

He said he could understand "why the heat is getting the governor." He mentioned McKeithen's veto of an appropriation to provide pay raises to school lunchroom workers and bus drivers plus the increase in insurance rates as well as legislative reapportionment.

"We have had three years to do something about it (reapportionment) and now he says we can do it all in 15 days," Long said.

Federal courts have ordered the Legislature reapportioned by Jan. 1. The governor says he will call a general election after the Nov. 8 general election.

McKeithen answered in kind, calling Long the "poverty man" assistant of Sargent Shriver and charging that he had been campaigning "all over the state with Washington money," when contacted by the Morning World in Columbia after his speaking engagement here.

"I am glad to see that the poverty man who has only been in this state a very few months and has once again returned from Washington, has finally started speaking for himself publicly instead of through hirelings such as Buster Coleman," McKeithen said.

"It is common knowledge in Central Louisana," the governor said, "That Buster Coleman was Gillis Long's candidate for the Public Service Commission and that he wrote Buster's attack on me, my father, my brother, and Judge Carlos Spaht and others. This was the tactic that we knew peculiar to Gillis Long when we ran against him for governor three years ago."

McKeithen said he wondered if Long would be a candidate for governor.

Asked the same question at his press conference, Long said he was not in a position to say one way or the other.

McKeithen's Monroe address was made to some 300 Twin City civic leaders and was sponsored by the Downtown Monroe Lions, Downtown Monroe Kiwanis and the Monroe Rotary clubs.

The governor told his Monroe listeners "this is where I got my start, in the piney woods along the Ouachita River. It is proper and fitting that I should come back here and make an informal report on what we have accomplished and what we are trying to do for our state."

"We are moving now," he said. "Louisiana is now first in the South in industrial expansion and personal income has increased 50 per cent above the rest of the nation."

"Louisianans have demonstrated time after time that when they are given equal opportunity, they always excel."

North Louisiana was saddened by the loss of Benjamin C. Dawkins, long a leading figure in the state's judiciary. He died at his Monroe home Monday after a long illness. He was 85.

Judge Dawkins was a native of Ouachita City in Union Parish. From 1906 to 1912, he practiced law in Monroe, and was elected judge of the Fourth Judicial District in 1912. In 1918, he was elected to the Supreme Court as an associate justice. He served in this capacity until 1924, when he was appointed as judge of U.S. District Court for the western district of Louisiana. He served in that capacity until 1953 when he retired. His son, Ben C. Dawkins Jr. now holds the same federal judgeship.

SHERIFFS MEET

The Louisiana Sheriff's Association held its annual convention in Bastrop. Sheriff Jerry Wattigny of Iberia Parish was elected president for the coming year. Sheriff Bailey Grant was relected secretary - treasurer. Other officers were Sheriff C. E. Hester, Madison Parish, first vice president; and B. F. Bergeron, West Baton Rouge Parish, second vice president.

Fourth District Judge Mack E. Barham, a resident and former city judge of Bastrop, told convention delegates that the state's pardon and parole system needs an overhaul. He said the work of the judiciary and law enforcement agencies was often overturned by unqualified and incompetent members of parole boards and staffs. Barham also took up recent landmark decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court affecting the rights of the individual. The jurist said they had swung too far away from the obligation of protecting society.

The Ouachita Parish Police Jury, in its second attempt, received apparently acceptable bids on renovation and expansion of the courthouse. Ward 10 Juror Robert Downing, chairman of the jury's courthouse committee, said the bids were just about "on the money." The apparent low bidder was Jesse F. Heard & Son, Inc. with the offer of $1,567,000 with a time for construction of 500 calendar days. The bids were referred to Downing's committee for study. Three bids received earlier came in over the $1.7 million bond issue voted for the improvement. The plans were pared down to come within the budget.

Glenwood Hospital was also having building problems. Officials announced that expansion plans are being curtailed due to loss of federal funds. The funds were dropped because of integration requirements. The plans will have to be cut down to fit the $870,000 bond issue approved by West Monroe voters in 1964. Bids on the work will be received next month.

AGAINST ODOR

Monroe's Mayor W. L. Howard came out against odor and home discoloration and called on those responsible to take appropriate action. While not naming the culprit in the much studied and discussed problem, Howard said the problem had its source on the west side of the river. "We know where the trouble lies," he added.

Monroe City School System teachers were informed that they would lose about $200 this year. A "cost of living" supplement to teachers pay is being cut because of a shrinking surplus in the system budget. Board President W. S. Gannaway said the move was a financial necessity. "We just ran out of money," he said. The cut has yet to be taken up at a board meeting.

A pay incentive plan to encourage men with college educations into police work was adopted for the Monroe police department. The plan offers increased salaries to policemen for every complete year of college, up to a master's degree, with a maximum of $200 per month over regular salary.

"The profession of police work is requiring a progressively higher educational background," Chief James C. Kelly Jr. said. "We need to hire and keep good, professional men in the Monroe police department. This is the first step in that direction."

The deadline for calling the Fifth District sales passed with no action by the Ouachita Parish School Board, as was its intention. The deadline marked the demise of the much amended tax bill authored by Rep. Lantz Womack of Franklin Parish. Hope for implementation of teacher salary hikes hinged on a reworked tax bill to be taken up at a special session of the legislature in November.

Joy Woods, the reigning Miss Louisiana, was in Monroe during the week for final touches on her wardrobe for the Miss America competition next month. The 20-year-old New Orleans girl represented Northeast Louisiana State College in the state contest here.

A march by Negroes to promote voter registration in four North Louisiana parishes — despite the fact that registration rolls had closed Wednesday as per state law — looked less and less like a march as it progressed. After a two-day stay in the Claiborne Parish jail, the marchers took to automobiles and are scheduled to wind up in Jonesboro this afternoon. The march is being sponsored by the Great Society Christian Organization of Grambling.

Children and parents alike were caught up in the rush to get ready for the first day of school. Monroe schools announced doors would open on Sept. 1 with a half-day schedule until Friday, Sept. 9.

Increased enrollment was predicted for Northeast Louisiana State College this fall. Registration for classes will be held Sept. 14-15 with classes to begin Sept. 16.

There was a question during the week on what kind of sea wall Monroe would have to keep the Ouachita River in its place. The Monroe City Council backed a Tensas Basin Levee Board plan that would be more costly than others, but would stay closer to the river, thus taking less of the city's real estate. The U.S. Corps of Engineers favor a bulkier but less expensive form of protection to be installed between Bry and Grammont Streets. The engineers have promised to listen to the city proposal.

TRAFFIC DEATH

A traffic fatality claimed the life of a 53-year-old Winn Parish woman near Tullos. Mrs. Alma J. Cockerham of Joyce apparently fell asleep at the wheel of her car and crashed into a bridge abutment.

Highway Commissioner James Moore, in speaking to the Monroe Chapter of the Society of Residential Appraisers, called the Louisiana Highway Department the "biggest real estate dealer" in the state. Moore said right of way purchases have totaled $90 million in the last six years.

Rounding out a sometimes hectic week in Twin Cities news, the Ouachita Parish School Board Saturday dismissed Mrs. Cecile Burkett, principal of Drew Elementary School. Acting after hearing eight hours of testimony from 18 witnesses, the board voted unanimously, though four of its members were absent.

Mrs. Burkett was charged with incompetence by reason of her "failure and inability" to maintain harmony with the faculty and staff of the school, parents and community, or school-related organizations and activities.

Poisoned Air Now Big Problem For Entire Nation

Dirty air can kill you, and Americans are pouring 130 million tons of pollution into the sky every year. The nation's cities, say the experts, are ripe for disaster, yet control is costly, inefficient and low. The auto and the smokestack are the villians, but curbs are coming.

By JOHN BARBOUR
Associated Press Writer

The left-overs of yesterday's living become a rusty, funeral canopy in today's sky — hanging on a whim of the air.

The acrid gas rises and falls like a malevolent ghost, and plagues the eyes, the noses, throats and lungs of a city. How many of its creators it kills, and how many it only sickens, no one knows.

In Chicago alone, a million automobiles and 50,000 troublesome smokestacks manufacture their own ghost, puff by noxious puff. In Los Angeles, despite stringent controls, 3½ million cars burn seven million gallons of gasoline a day, and push more than 10,000 tons of exhaust gases into the air.

But air pollution is a broad-shouldered horror, and it extends potentially over every town in America. It is already in some unlikely places.

It rolls across high valleys in Montana, over a sunshine city in Arizona, along a river plain in Kansas, over the mile-high plateau of Denver, down into the crevices of New York's tight little island, through the narrow streets of New Orleans, and even in Chicago, a supposedly windy city on Lake Michigan.

BORN OF NEED

It is born of the American people's great modern need for energy to do what have become superhuman tasks: an automobile to travel 15 miles to work and back, electricity to run a world on, heat in winter, cool air in summer, a thousand circling industries to produce goods near enough to be cheap enough to buy, and the inevitable garbage truck to take away the containers this modern world comes in.

And all of it takes fuel. And fuel makes smoke. And smoke is the name of the air pollution game — smoke and its silent competitor, weather, one natural force man can't control.

London, England, gave smog its name from the smoke of coal fires and fog. Smog paid brief visits to the United States, to steel-making Pittsburgh, and to St. Louis when coal fires in winter clogged the air.

But smog found its American home in the least likely of places — a white, sparkling, wideopen city on the West Coast. Los Angeles had small hints before, but on Sept. 8, 1943, it got its first real taste of the haze that was to make it the smog capital of the world.

The Los Angeles basin was filling with war industry and new people. Then suddenly came the gray cloud, and everyone was coughing, sneezing, crying and choking within it. The moment had come. The aerial trash, and a weather condition that hadn't mattered much before, combined to choke the city.

Yet few people then could guess that the pall would spread across the nation.

Few would have predicted that 22 years later the President of the United States would label air pollution a major problem costing the nation $1 billion a month that Congress would pass a Clean Air Act, that the auto industry would be ordered to equip all new models with exhaust control devises.

The problem — born of prosperity — has come to pass. The question now is, how far will he go?

HEAD START

Air pollution has such a head start that it is hard to catch up with it.

A mayor of Pittsburg remembers that in 1940 his city had a dust-fall of 60 tons a square mile. By 1960, controls had cut it to 35 tons. By 1970, it should be down to 20 tons. Progress? Yes. But the best that could be done in the Steel City over 24 years was to cut the dust fall by two-thirds. And what of other pollution problems — hydrocarbons, sulfur dioxide and other noxious chemicals.

By best estimates, the United States pollutes its one quadrillion tons of air with over 130 million tons of smokey chemicals each year.

What does it do to the nation's health? Perhaps no one can say for sure. But there is a sudden increase in asthma cases at major New York City hospitals in the month of September, coincident with cold weather and home heating.

There is a rash of asthma cases in New Orleans when winds bring in the smoke from trash burning outside the city. And some experts point to the London smog attacks of 1952 and 1962, the first claiming in part some 4,000 lives, the second some 400.

And there was the Pennsylvanian town of Donora, where thousands became ill and 17 died in the smoke from industry that weather bottled up in the valley.

Indeed, without those classic cases, there is mounting evidence that air pollution can be deadly, especially to those whose respiratory tracts are already stricken with disease.

By far the worst offender, by its sheer numbers, is the automobile. It accounts for 50 to 65 per cent of all air pollution, and its biggest contribution is the poisonous gas, carbon monoxide.

Some experts think that the concentration of carbon monoxide around highways is so heavy at times that it actually causes accidents, drugging drivers into making mistakes.

But the automobile also adds sooty hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen into the air, and these are transformed by ultraviolet light from the sun into ultraviolent gases that irritate the eyes and bedevil the nose and throat. They call it Los Angeles-type smog.

OWN RECIPE

Yet each city, each state, has its own air pollution recipe, determined not only by how many smokestacks, but by how much of different kinds of fuels are burned.

In Chicago, some nine million tons of coal are burned each year, most of it for residential heating and for electricity production. Yet the coal fires produce 88 per cent of the sulfur dioxide and nearly 98 per cent of the dust the city sends into the sky each year.

On the other hand, the city uses nearly 176 billion cubic feet of natural gas. This produces only 69 tons of sulfur dioxide, and no dust at all.

Los Angeles, considered to have the best air pollution control program in the nation, has eliminated coal burning as a pollution problem, and would like to reduce pollution from oil burning still farther. It wants to burn more natural gas. But, sadly, there isn't enough natural gas to go around.

A spokesman for Consolidated Edison, which produces electricity for New York City, estimated his firm consumes about half the fuel burnt in the city, not counting cars. Half of this is coal, a quarter of it fuel oil, and a quarter, natural gas.

One of the least likely places you would expect to find smog problems is in the grandeur of the Rocky Mountains. Yet the city of Denver is going through the painful realization that a booming population, more cars, and more industry means more smoke.

At times, the smog ceiling settles so low that the tops of the city's skyscrapers rise like the nearby Rockies out of dismal pools of smoke.

Denver owes its bad fortune to the fact that, like Los Angeles, its growth got ahead of its local weather and its local topography. It lies in the shelter of the Rockies.

Smog's meteorological accomplice is called a temperature inversion. Normally the air decreases in temperature and density with altitude. Smoke normally rides its warm air upwards, dissipating in the atmosphere and being blown away. But not in a temperature inversion.

In this weather phenomenon, a layer of warm air intrudes over lower cold air and acts as a lid, keeping the air beneath more or less stagnant. Meanwhile the city below adds minute by minute more trash into the sky, and it all comes right back down again about its shoulders.

Temperature inversions generally happen two ways. Sometimes a warm front moves in over static cooler air. Sometimes, on a quiet, clear fall night, the ground radiates its heat skyward and cools the air at a low level, while warm air prevails above.

FEW IMMUNE

Whichever the case, few places are immune.

Some have suggested, only some in jest, that big blowers be built to shove the smog out of the Los Angeles basin. But air pollution control chief S. Smith Griswold says it would take the power of five Boulder Dams to move the air just one mile in one hour, "and if the good Lord wants to move it in the other direction, you have a losing game on your hands."

One element that frightens city planners most is that the population is still booming, and so is its way of life, and its demands on fuel. That can only mean more air pollution.

Some cities, despite the warning of Los Angeles, are getting a belated start. Federal experts say that if Los Angeles had not begun its control program when it did, and if it didn't have today's ordinances and rules, no one would be able to live there.

Other cities are benefiting from the experience of Los Angeles.

Montana has found air pollution in its cities that belies the fact that the state is mostly "wide open spaces." Stagnant air conditions that trap the smoke from smelting, foundry and other industrial sources mean the state has to act now to save its air, a report said. Despite Montana's broad horizons, wind speeds in many cities are light, industry heavy, and smog conditions right.

Booming St. Louis is erupting in citizen discontent over pollution conditions, and other areas from Kansas City to Tucson, Ariz., are ripening for air pollution action. A survey of Colorado showed two-thirds of the communities felt they had some air pollution problems.

But if air pollution is a national problem, it is one with only local manifestations, local solutions. One of the most effective city programs being developed is Chicago's — 110 people and a computer in a systematic attack on pollution problems.

REMOTE CONTROL

The city has devised new ideas to spy on its immediate sky. Unmanned, automated stations — like a flock of urban satellites — sit atop city buildings and beep back to air pollution control headquarters readings on the city's air. The city is putting remote control television cameras at vantage points to keep an aerial view on the city's smokestacks

The computer records all this, and keeps tabs on reports from men in the field, making annual inspections and reporting violations of a tight city pollution control code.

But the aim is not penalties and fines. The aim is compliance. And largely, from industry, the city is getting compliance. The tall smokestacks of four major steel companies on the South Side are being tamed at the cost of $50 million. They once produced 40 per cent of the 420 tons of dust that falls on Chicago each year.

But even with industry cooperation, and an increase in staff, the most hopeful estimate is that no more than 50 per cent of the troublesome industrial sources will be controlled by 1970.

If the control of pollution is becoming more sophisticated, its causes are often primitive.

NEW YORK CITY'S towering skyscrapers jut up and out of a dense, irritant-loaded fog, as though reaching up for a breath of fresh air. A panel studying the city's air pollution reported that it is ripe for a pollution disaster like those that struck London and Donora, Pa., taking thousands of lives. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

LOS ANGELES showed a weepy face to the world in 1955 during the worst smog attack on record to that time. The ozone reading hit a high of .90 part per million parts of air. It's a scene that has been repeated since then, not only in Los Angeles but in other cities of the world, as the gray, eye-stinging stuff called smog settles in. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

RECENT SPOT CHECKS of some of Tokyo's school children show two or three times the normal incidence of respiratory ailments among them. Smog is blamed. The local board of education has passed out yellow masks to the youngsters in a feeble attempt to fight the problem. In the meantime, smog-causing smoke continues to pour from smokestacks in the Tokyo area like the one in the background, the exhaust fumes of autos add their share to the dilemma, and local authorities try to find some way to put teeth into smog control regulations. ACROSS THE COUNTRY, industries are major sources of air pollution in both large cities and smaller communities. This smoke - spouting plant is the Bethlehen Steel Company in Jonhstown, Pa. The photo was made in 1963. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Industrial Growth Causes Smog In Japan

East meets West in the smog cloud; even Tokyo suffers like Los Angeles. The story is the same much talk, some action.

By STUART GRIFFIN

TOKYO (AP) — The pine trees are dying around the Imperial Palace. Polar bears in Ueno Zoo are no longer white. Chimpanzees grow nose hairs for protection. Even the cherry trees are wilting.

Newspapers declaim against "our poisoned atmosphere," saying the capital city, home of 11 million, is strangling under a smog blanket with a rising total of respiratory, nasal and throat ailments.

Spot checks in some areas show two or three times the normal incidence of respiratory ailments among school dhildren.

The primary sources of the sickening contamination are all too evident. Smoke billows from the stacks of many of the 3,105 factories in and around Tokyo. Cooking and heating stoves in homes contribute their share. Automobiles and trucks, many using propane gas, add pungent fumes.

WARNING SYSTEM

Officials have set up a smog warning system using a special measuring device, and the government officially broadcasts warnings by radio when too dense a smog-pall curtains the city. One warning came after visibility had been cut to less than two miles. But the official warnings require no action, and factory owners are free to ignore them.

The metropolis almost daily experiences an average of 0.2 ppm — parts per million — of sulfurous gas content in its air. The number of days when smog besieged Tokyo last winter rose 1.6 times over a year ago.

The Health and Welfare Ministry discovered that carbon monoxide content in the atmosphere at busy street corners far exceeds normally tolerable dosages for human health. Traffic police must wear gas masks at busy crossroads.

At one intersection where 100,000 vehicles pass every day contamination reached as high as 55 ppm, soaring even to 110 ppm at worst times. The normal tolerable dosage for human health maintenance is 30 ppm continued for eight hours or longer. Sulfuric gas, nitrogen monoxide and floating dust present other menaces to human health.

What are Tokyo authorities doing about this? They hope the poisonous smog-cloud will disperse when promised government regulations go into effect late this yeyar.

An anti-public nuisance measures liaision council has debated the question of restrictions on soot and industrial smoke. It has elected to institute 'strong administrative guidance" — in the absence of foolproof purifying devices and equipment — to force factories to build high chimneys.

Japanese automakers, faced with a U.S. move to ban import of cars not fitted with exhaust fume controls, are seeking to perfect "clean exhaust" engines. They have been asked to keep carbon monoxide content of exhaust gas to 3 per cent, from the previous 6 to 7 per cent limit, on all cars starting with 1967 models.

CONTROLS

Such controls have shown promising results in California. The State Motor Vehicle Pollution Control Board reports that experiments with 800,000 cars this year have reduced crankcase fumes by 70 per cent. Starting with the 1968 models, all American cars must be equipped with fume suppressors.

One problem in Tokyo is that there are no smog control regulations with teeth in them. Government requests for cooperation often fall on deaf ears. What regulations exist are skimpy and rarely enforced. Penalties, when imposed, are limited.

Tokyo authorities insist, however, that they are finally on the move. They pled full-scale smog counter-measures. Warnings henceforth will be backed by action and stiffened penalties, they say.

BORN OF NEED

It is born of the American people's great modern need for energy to do what have become superhuman tasks: an automobile to travel 15 miles to work and back, electricity to run a world on, heat in winter, cool air in summer, a thousand circling industries to produce goods near enough to be cheap enough to buy, and the inevitable garbage truck to take away the containers this modern world comes in.

And all of it takes fuel. And fuel makes smoke. And smoke is the name of the air pollution game — smoke and its silent competitor, weather, one natural force man can't control.

London, England, gave smog its name from the smoke of coal fires and fog. Smog paid brief visits to the United States, to steel-making Pittsburgh, and to St. Louis when coal fires in winter clogged the air.

But smog found its American home in the least likely of places — a white, sparkling, wideopen city on the West Coast. Los Angeles had small hints before, but on Sept. 8, 1943, it got its first real taste of the haze that was to make it the smog capital of the world.

The Los Angeles basin was filling with war industry and new people. Then suddenly came the gray cloud, and everyone was coughing, sneezing, crying and choking within it. The moment had come. The aerial trash, and a weather condition that hadn't mattered much before, combined to choke the city.

Yet few people then could guess that the pall would spread across the nation.

Few would have predicted that 22 years later the President of the United States would label air pollution a major problem costing the nation $1 billion a month that Congress would pass a Clean Air Act, that the auto industry would be ordered to equip all new models with exhaust control devises.

The problem — born of prosperity — has come to pass. The question now is, how far will he go?

HEAD START

Air pollution has such a head start that it is hard to catch up with it.

A mayor of Pittsburg remembers that in 1940 his city had a dust-fall of 60 tons a square mile. By 1960, controls had cut it to 35 tons. By 1970, it should be down to 20 tons. Progress? Yes. But the best that could be done in the Steel City over 24 years was to cut the dust fall by two-thirds. And what of other pollution problems — hydrocarbons, sulfur dioxide and other noxious chemicals.

By best estimates, the United States pollutes its one quadrillion tons of air with over 130 million tons of smokey chemicals each year.

What does it do to the nation's health? Perhaps no one can say for sure. But there is a sudden increase in asthma cases at major New York City hospitals in the month of September, coincident with cold weather and home heating.

There is a rash of asthma cases in New Orleans when winds bring in the smoke from trash burning outside the city. And some experts point to the London smog attacks of 1952 and 1962, the first claiming in part some 4,000 lives, the second some 400.

And there was the Pennsylvanian town of Donora, where thousands became ill and 17 died in the smoke from industry that weather bottled up in the valley.

Indeed, without those classic cases, there is mounting evidence that air pollution can be deadly, especially to those whose respiratory tracts are already stricken with disease.

By far the worst offender, by its sheer numbers, is the automobile. It accounts for 50 to 65 per cent of all air pollution, and its biggest contribution is the poisonous gas, carbon monoxide.

Some experts think that the concentration of carbon monoxide around highways is so heavy at times that it actually causes accidents, drugging drivers into making mistakes.

But the automobile also adds sooty hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen into the air, and these are transformed by ultraviolet light from the sun into ultraviolent gases that irritate the eyes and bedevil the nose and throat. They call it Los Angeles-type smog.

OWN RECIPE

Yet each city, each state, has its own air pollution recipe, determined not only by how many smokestacks, but by how much of different kinds of fuels are burned.

In Chicago, some nine million tons of coal are burned each year, most of it for residential heating and for electricity production. Yet the coal fires produce 88 per cent of the sulfur dioxide and nearly 98 per cent of the dust the city sends into the sky each year.

On the other hand, the city uses nearly 176 billion cubic feet of natural gas. This produces only 69 tons of sulfur dioxide, and no dust at all.

Los Angeles, considered to have the best air pollution control program in the nation, has eliminated coal burning as a pollution problem, and would like to reduce pollution from oil burning still farther. It wants to burn more natural gas. But, sadly, there isn't enough natural gas to go around.

A spokesman for Consolidated Edison, which produces electricity for New York City, estimated his firm consumes about half the fuel burnt in the city, not counting cars. Half of this is coal, a quarter of it fuel oil, and a quarter, natural gas.

One of the least likely places you would expect to find smog problems is in the grandeur of the Rocky Mountains. Yet the city of Denver is going through the painful realization that a booming population, more cars, and more industry means more smoke.

At times, the smog ceiling settles so low that the tops of the city's skyscrapers rise like the nearby Rockies out of dismal pools of smoke.

Denver owes its bad fortune to the fact that, like Los Angeles, its growth got ahead of its local weather and its local topography. It lies in the shelter of the Rockies.

Smog's meteorological accomplice is called a temperature inversion. Normally the air decreases in temperature and density with altitude. Smoke normally rides its warm air upwards, dissipating in the atmosphere and being blown away. But not in a temperature inversion.

In this weather phenomenon, a layer of warm air intrudes over lower cold air and acts as a lid, keeping the air beneath more or less stagnant. Meanwhile the city below adds minute by minute more trash into the sky, and it all comes right back down again about its shoulders.

Temperature inversions generally happen two ways. Sometimes a warm front moves in over static cooler air. Sometimes, on a quiet, clear fall night, the ground radiates its heat skyward and cools the air at a low level, while warm air prevails above.

FEW IMMUNE

Whichever the case, few places are immune.

Some have suggested, only some in jest, that big blowers be built to shove the smog out of the Los Angeles basin. But air pollution control chief S. Smith Griswold says it would take the power of five Boulder Dams to move the air just one mile in one hour, "and if the good Lord wants to move it in the other direction, you have a losing game on your hands."

One element that frightens city planners most is that the population is still booming, and so is its way of life, and its demands on fuel. That can only mean more air pollution.

Some cities, despite the warning of Los Angeles, are getting a belated start. Federal experts say that if Los Angeles had not begun its control program when it did, and if it didn't have today's ordinances and rules, no one would be able to live there.

Other cities are benefiting from the experience of Los Angeles.

Montana has found air pollution in its cities that belies the fact that the state is mostly "wide open spaces." Stagnant air conditions that trap the smoke from smelting, foundry and other industrial sources mean the state has to act now to save its air, a report said. Despite Montana's broad horizons, wind speeds in many cities are light, industry heavy, and smog conditions right.

Booming St. Louis is erupting in citizen discontent over pollution conditions, and other areas from Kansas City to Tucson, Ariz., are ripening for air pollution action. A survey of Colorado showed two-thirds of the communities felt they had some air pollution problems.

But if air pollution is a national problem, it is one with only local manifestations, local solutions. One of the most effective city programs being developed is Chicago's — 110 people and a computer in a systematic attack on pollution problems.

REMOTE CONTROL

The city has devised new ideas to spy on its immediate sky. Unmanned, automated stations — like a flock of urban satellites — sit atop city buildings and beep back to air pollution control headquarters readings on the city's air. The city is putting remote control television cameras at vantage points to keep an aerial view on the city's smokestacks.

The computer records all this, and keeps tabs on reports from men in the field, making annual inspections and reporting violations of a tight city pollution control code.

But the aim is not penalties and fines. The aim is compliance. And largely, from industry, the city is getting compliance. The tall smokestacks of four major steel companies on the South Side are being tamed at the cost of $50 million. They once produced 40 per cent of the 420 tons of dust that falls on Chicago each year.

But even with industry cooperation, and an increase in staff, the most hopeful estimate is that no more than 50 per cent of the troublesome industrial sources will be controlled by 1970.

If the control of pollution is becoming more sophisticated, its causes are often primitive.

NEW YORK CITY'S towering skyscrapers jut up and out of a dense, irritant-loaded fog, as though reaching up for a breath of fresh air. A panel studying the city's air pollution reported that it is ripe for a pollution disaster like those that struck London and Donora, Pa., taking thousands of lives. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

LOS ANGELES showed a weepy face to the world in 1955 during the worst smog attack on record to that time. The ozone reading hit a high of .90 part per million parts of air. It's a scene that has been repeated since then, not only in Los Angeles but in other cities of the world, as the gray, eye-stinging stuff called smog settles in. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

RECENT SPOT CHECKS of some of Tokyo's school children show two or three times the normal incidence of respiratory ailments among them. Smog is blamed. The local board of education has passed out yellow masks to the youngsters in a feeble attempt to fight the problem. In the meantime, smog-causing smoke continues to pour from smokestacks in the Tokyo area like the one in the background, the exhaust fumes of autos add their share to the dilemma, and local authorities try to find some way to put teeth into smog control regulations. ACROSS THE COUNTRY, industries are major sources of air pollution in both large cities and smaller communities. This smoke - spouting plant is the Bethlehen Steel Company in Jonhstown, Pa. The photo was made in 1963. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

Industrial Growth Causes Smog In Japan

By STUART GRIFFIN

TOKYO (AP) — The pine trees are dying around the Imperial Palace. Polar bears in Ueno Zoo are no longer white. Chimpanzees grow nose hairs for protection. Even the cherry trees are wilting.

Newspapers declaim against "our poisoned atmosphere," saying the capital city, home of 11 million, is strangling under a smog blanket with a rising total of respiratory, nasal and throat ailments.

Spot checks in some areas show two or three times the normal incidence of respiratory ailments among school dhildren.

The primary sources of the sickening contamination are all too evident. Smoke billows from the stacks of many of the 3,105 factories in and around Tokyo. Cooking and heating stoves in homes contribute their share. Automobiles and trucks, many using propane gas, add pungent fumes.

WARNING SYSTEM

Officials have set up a smog warning system using a special measuring device, and the government officially broadcasts warnings by radio when too dense a smog-pall curtains the city. One warning came after visibility had been cut to less than two miles. But the official warnings require no action, and factory owners are free to ignore them.

The metropolis almost daily experiences an average of 0.2 ppm — parts per million — of sulfurous gas content in its air. The number of days when smog besieged Tokyo last winter rose 1.6 times over a year ago.

The Health and Welfare Ministry discovered that carbon monoxide content in the atmosphere at busy street corners far exceeds normally tolerable dosages for human health. Traffic police must wear gas masks at busy crossroads.

At one intersection where 100,000 vehicles pass every day contamination reached as high as 55 ppm, soaring even to 110 ppm at worst times. The normal tolerable dosage for human health maintenance is 30 ppm continued for eight hours or longer. Sulfuric gas, nitrogen monoxide and floating dust present other menaces to human health.

What are Tokyo authorities doing about this? They hope the poisonous smog-cloud will disperse when promised government regulations go into effect late this yeyar.

An anti-public nuisance measures liaision council has debated the question of restrictions on soot and industrial smoke. It has elected to institute 'strong administrative guidance" — in the absence of foolproof purifying devices and equipment — to force factories to build high chimneys.

Japanese automakers, faced with a U.S. move to ban import of cars not fitted with exhaust fume controls, are seeking to perfect "clean exhaust" engines. They have been asked to keep carbon monoxide content of exhaust gas to 3 per cent, from the previous 6 to 7 per cent limit, on all cars starting with 1967 models.

CONTROLS

Such controls have shown promising results in California. The State Motor Vehicle Pollution Control Board reports that experiments with 800,000 cars this year have reduced crankcase fumes by 70 per cent. Starting with the 1968 models, all American cars must be equipped with fume suppressors.

One problem in Tokyo is that there are no smog control regulations with teeth in them. Government requests for cooperation often fall on deaf ears. What regulations exist are skimpy and rarely enforced. Penalties, when imposed, are limited.

Tokyo authorities insist, however, that they are finally on the move. They pled full-scale smog counter-measures. Warnings henceforth will be backed by action and stiffened penalties, they say.

THE LARGEST boat landing on D'Arbonne Bayou was at Mosley Bluff, where residents from such neighboring communities as Downsville and Holmesville brought cotton and lumber to be shipped downstream to Monroe and on to New Orleans. Farmerville had a landing, but did not have the amount of loading as the Mosley Bluff, according to old timers. Pictured is the warehouse serving the landing. Merchandise was brought to the warehouse by oxen and mule-drawn wagons. Picture, belonging to Benton Terral of West Monroe, was taken about 1906.

Canada Planning Strike-Break Bid

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson's government shaped up legislation Saturday aimed at ending Canada's paralyzing rail strike. A Canadian National Railways ferry was blocked by about 500 strikers at its Newfoundland port, but otherwise the labor scene was calm.

The nation was marking time in the crucial strike situation until Monday, when Parliament will convene in special session to consider government legislation to start the trains rolling.

The strike was called by four unions representing 118,000 employes of eight railroads seeking wage increases averaging 30 per cent. The average hourly wage now is $2.23 an hour. The unions have rejected a wage settlement providing an 18 per cent hike over two years.

Presumably the legislation to end the strike would order the men back with some wage increase, and also give the railroads some leeway in setting freight rates to take care of additional expenses.

Freight rates have been frozen since 1959.

The strikers threw up a barricade of railway ties at Port a ux Basques, Nfld., to prevent more than 200 passengers in 71 vehicles from leaving the ferry William Carson, after it arrived across Cabot Strait from North Sydney, N.S.

Aftre some hours they permitted the arrivals to leave, but formed up the picket lines again and reconstructed a barrier to prevent more than 50 cars from entering the terminal area for the return trip to North Sydney.

Only a four-man detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was on hand at Port aux Basques, and a spokesman said there were no orders from superiors to attempt to disperse the strikers.

An official of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union said locals on Prince Edward Island had been instructed to abide by a special agreement with Canadian National Railways to maintain ferry service to the island province during the strike.

Premier Alex Cambell of Prince Edward Island Province has declared a state of emergency because of the strike situation.

Youth Killed In Accident

CROSSETT, Ark. (Special) — An 18-year-old West Crossett Negro youth, Levelle Edwards, was killed about 8 p.m. Friday after he was struck by an auto.

Ashley County Sheriff B. A. Courson said that James Burgess of Strong, Ark., was driving on U.S. Hwy. 82 when he felt his car hit something. Burgess stopped and walked back and found Edwards dead on the highway.

Courson said that the youth apparently was walking in the right lane of the highway. No charges had been filed Saturday.

Business Bureau Adds 59 Members

Fifty - nine additional new members have been added to the rolls of the Better Business Bureau of Ouachita Parish during the past few weeks, it was disclosed Saturday by Bernard Biedenharn, chairman of the group.

The new additions brings the total membership of the Ouachita BBB to 190.

A drive for new members was launched June 20 and since that date a total of 160 have been signed up.

"We are pleased with our progress," Biedenharn said, and "we feel that we shall make our goal."

He urged businessmen wishing to join the organization to call the Ouachita BBB number, 325-7103 and give the necessary information.

Soviet Still Toward Fate Of Satellite

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union was silent Saturday on the fate of the unmanned spaceship Luna 11 which had been expected to go into orbit around the moon Saturday.

The official silence prompted speculation that Luna 11 may have crashed into the moon or overshot it.

At Jodrell Bank, England, Sir Bernard Lovell, director of the tracking station there said, "I virtually dismissed the possibility of a controlled landing on the moon."

He said signals from Luna stopped at 5:45 p.m. Saturday, about four minutes after it fired its retrorockets to swing it into a lunar orbit.

The spaceship was launched on Wednesday amid speculation that it carried camera equipment to match the feat of the U.S. Lunar Orbiter, which has sent back to earth pictures of possible manned landing sites.

Ellender Supporting Program

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., said today he is supporting a billion-dollar program for city improvement because it will benefit the thousands of farm people who move to town and find conditions substandard.

He said in a radio interview that many rural dwellers move into cities in the belief they can find improved conditions but instead discover "there is not sufficient housing, transportation is insufficient, and little or no work can be found." "What we are trying to do now," he said, "what should have done a long time ago. That is, to keep developing our large cities so as to provide adequate transportation, adequate housing for people, recreation centers and facilities to meet other pressing needs."

The bill which cleared the Senate provides for an extended period of studies to find cures for urban ills and in selected cities to build new facilities. The program is intended to help stimulate cities to develop their own improvement programs, using the selected communities as examples.

Ellender said he believes the kind of improvements contemplated by the bill will have a strong effect in reducing crime rates in cities and halting rioting that has plagued most of the largest cities in recent years.

THE LARGEST boat landing on D'Arbonne Bayou was at Mosley Bluff, where residents from such neighboring communities as Downsville and Holmesville brought cotton and lumber to be shipped downstream to Monroe and on to New Orleans. Farmerville had a landing, but did not have the amount of loading as the Mosley Bluff, according to old timers. Pictured is the warehouse serving the landing. Merchandise was brought to the warehouse by oxen and mule-drawn wagons. Picture, belonging to Benton Terral of West Monroe, was taken about 1906.

Canada Planning Strike-Break Bid

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson's government shaped up legislation Saturday aimed at ending Canada's paralyzing rail strike. A Canadian National Railways ferry was blocked by about 500 strikers at its Newfoundland port, but otherwise the labor scene was calm.

The nation was marking time in the crucial strike situation until Monday, when Parliament will convene in special session to consider government legislation to start the trains rolling.

The strike was called by four unions representing 118,000 employes of eight railroads seeking wage increases averaging 30 per cent. The average hourly wage now is $2.23 an hour. The unions have rejected a wage settlement providing an 18 per cent hike over two years.

Presumably the legislation to end the strike would order the men back with some wage increase, and also give the railroads some leeway in setting freight rates to take care of additional expenses.

Freight rates have been frozen since 1959.

The strikers threw up a barricade of railway ties at Port a ux Basques, Nfld., to prevent more than 200 passengers in 71 vehicles from leaving the ferry William Carson, after it arrived across Cabot Strait from North Sydney, N.S.

Aftre some hours they permitted the arrivals to leave, but formed up the picket lines again and reconstructed a barrier to prevent more than 50 cars from entering the terminal area for the return trip to North Sydney.

Only a four-man detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police was on hand at Port aux Basques, and a spokesman said there were no orders from superiors to attempt to disperse the strikers.

An official of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers Union said locals on Prince Edward Island had been instructed to abide by a special agreement with Canadian National Railways to maintain ferry service to the island province during the strike.

Premier Alex Cambell of Prince Edward Island Province has declared a state of emergency because of the strike situation.

Youth Killed In Accident

CROSSETT, Ark. (Special) — An 18-year-old West Crossett Negro youth, Levelle Edwards, was killed about 8 p.m. Friday after he was struck by an auto.

Ashley County Sheriff B. A. Courson said that James Burgess of Strong, Ark., was driving on U.S. Hwy. 82 when he felt his car hit something. Burgess stopped and walked back and found Edwards dead on the highway.

Courson said that the youth apparently was walking in the right lane of the highway. No charges had been filed Saturday.

DON JANUARY, passes his putter and glove to a caddie and Arnold Palmer tips his cap to acknowledge applause following the finish of the third round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic. January and Palmer finished in a tie with 207 totals with the final round scheduled today at Whitemarsh. (AP Wirephoto)

Palmer Shoots 65, Gets Tie For Lead

WHITEMARSH, Pa. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, who a year ago quit after two rounds and went home in disgust, charged to a seven-under-par 65 Saturday and tied Don January for the third round lead in the $110,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

Palmer, who will be 37 in two weeks, unleashed one of his famed charges, ramming home seven birdie putts of from 2 to 25 feet.

January shot a 69 for a share of the lead at 207.

Canadian George Knudson fired a 69 for a 54-hole total of 208. Knudson blew a four-foot putt on the 18th green that would have tied him with the leaders. He had five birds and two bogeys.

Cheered on by the majority of the 13,650 spectators who jammed the 6,708-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course, Palmer played what he described as "my best golf in a year." He was four strokes off the pace at the start of the third round.

January, playing behind Palmer and quite aware of what was going on ahead of him, refused to let the cheering bother him. He came in with a three-under-par 69 to hold onto a part of the lead he shared Friday with Dave Marr and Bill Martindale. Marr shot a 72, leaving him three strokes off the pace at 210, while Martindale faded with a 76 for 214.

January, who hasn't won a pro tour tournament in more than three years, continued his sensational golf in which he has gone over par on only two holes in three rounds. He had four birdies and one bogey Saturday.

Palmer, who is quitting the tour for a five-week vacation after this tournament, said he felt no pain in a bursitus-ridden shoulder.

The Latrobe, Pa., belter rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the first hole, and an eight-footer that sent him two under on the second.

He chipped to within two feet of the cup on the 475-yard fifth hole and turned for home in three-under-par 33.

On the back nine, Palmer rammed home a 15-footer on the 10th, played par to the 15th where he tapped in a two-footer for a bird to go five under for the day.

The gallery kept filling as word spread that Palmer was charging. And he didn't disappoint them, holing out a birdie on the 17th with a curling 25-footer, and doffing his cap after a three-footer for a bird on the final green.

Ralston, Graebner Down Mexican Pair

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Dennis Ralston and Clark Graebner, American's No. 1 tandem, overcome the scrambling tactics of Mexican crowd pleasers Marcelo Lara and Jacquin Loyo-Mayo for a 13-11, 13-11, 6-4 quarter-final victory Saturday in the 86th U. S. National Doubles Tennis Championships.

Australians Tony Roche and John Newcombe advanced to a semifinal showdown with Ralston and Graebner by overpowering Californians Stan Smith of Pasadena and Bob Lutz of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-4, 11-9.

Ralston and Graebner, seeded second behind Australian aces Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle, were hard-pressed to pull out a victory over the unheralded Mexicans, who were cheered continually by a crowd of 4,800 at Longwood's sun baked grass courts.

The experience and hardhitting of the American team offset the speed, acrobatics and tactics of Lara, 18, and Loyo-Mayo, 21, who upset fifth-seeded Manuel Santana of Spain and Luis Garcia of Mexico in a four-hour marathon in the third round.

Ralston had 15 aces, one more than Graebner, as they smashed their way to victory.

Emerson and Stolle will meet America's No. 2 doubles pair, Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., today in semi-finals of the rain-delayed tournament.

Top-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil and Nancy Richey of Farmers Branch, Tex., and second-seeded Billie Jean Moffitt King of Long Beach, Calif., and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco led the way into the women's semi-finals.

Miss Bueno and Miss Richey eliminated Stephanie DeFina of Hollywood, Fla., and Tory Fretz of Los Angeles, 11-9, 6-3.

Mrs. King and Miss Casals rallied to defeat Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego, Calif., and Lynne Abbes of Orinda, Calif., 7-9, 6-2, 8-6.

Ortega Hurls Washington By Cleveland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phil Ortega pitched a three-hitter in leading Washington to a 3-1 victor over Cleveland Saturday for the Senators' fourth straight victory.

Vic Davalillo's pinch-hit homer in the eighth gave Cleveland its only run and broke an Indian scoreless-inning streak at 23.

Ortega, 10-11, struck out 10 and gave up two singles to Chuck Hinton for the only other Indian hits.

Fred Valentine doubled to open the Senators' fifth inning and Frank Howard followed with a run-scoring double. Howard went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Larry Brown's error of Ken Harrelson's grounder.

Chargers Romp By Pats, 31-13

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Leslie Duncan returned a punt 63 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter Saturday night to ignite the San Diego Chargers' 31-13 exhibition win over the Boston Patriots before 11,894.

Duncan, the American Football League's top punt returner last season, gave the Chargers a 24-13 lead as time ran out in the period.

The defense also set up San Diego's go-ahead score earlier in the quarter as Kenny Grahn intercepted a John Huarte pass on the Patriot 26 and brought it to the San Diego 15.

Three plays later, quarterback Steve Tensi threw 10 yards

Marichal Continues Mastery, Wins 19th

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Juan Marichal maintained his mastery over Los Angeles Saturday by hurling San Francisco to a 4-2 victory for his 19th triumph of the season.

The Giants' victory, coupled with Pittsburgh's 5-1 defeat by St. Louis, put San Francisco into first place by one-half game over the Pirates.

The victory, sparked by homers by Jim Hart and Willie Mays and a double by Willie McCovey, brought the Dominican pitcher his third triumph over Los Angeles this season, each of them at the expense of Don Drysdale, now 9-14.

A crowd of 41,1876 saw the Giants go ahead for the first time in the sixth inning after a solo homer by Willie Davis sent the Dodgers into a 2-1 advantage in the top of the frame.

Hart homered in the third, his 29th, and Mays hit his 33rd of the season in the eighth.

Falcons Win First Game, Drop 49ers

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP) — Rookie Randy Johnson passed the Atlanta Falcons to their first victory Saturday night as the newest team in the National Football League defeated San Francisco in an exhibition game, 24-17.

The TexasA and I quarterback clinched the contest with a 35-yard touchdown toss to flanker Alex Hawkins late in the final period.

His passing moved Atlanta on 77, 87 and 79 yard scoring marches and set up Tommy Moore's 21-yard field goal in the second period.

San Francisco, now 0-4 in exhibition games, opened with George Mira at quarterback. He guided the 49ers to a touchdown and a brief first period lead.

John Brodie took over in the third period and directed the 49ers into range for a 36-yard field goal by Tommy Davis.

Bill Kilmer finished up and his five yard pass to end Bernie Casey climaxed a 53-yard drive in the waning seconds.

Mira threw only once in his team's opening 82-yard drive, completing a toss of nine yards to end Dave Parks. Dick Kopay raced 20 yards for the touchdown on a pitchout.

On Atlanta's first period scoring drive Johnson completed passes of 18 yards to end Billy Martin, 20 yards to halfback Ernie Wheelwright and 10 yards to Angelo Coia. Wheelwright scored from one-yard out.

The Falcons moved 64 yards the next time they got the ball, a 39-yard pass from Johnson to Coia helping out. Moore kicked a 21-yard field goal.

Beebe Fails To Place In National Try

DENVER, Colo. (Special) — Louisiana failed to pick up any points in the National Junior Chamber of Commerce Track and Field Championships Saturday as both Larry Beebe of West Monroe and Owen Self of Shreveport finished far down the list in their specialties.

Both were 10th in a field of 12, Beebe in the 880 yard run and Self in the mile.

Friday Louisiana's other entry, Larry Ashley of West Monroe, failed to reach the finals in the pole vault.

Beebe was running second in the 880 when he broke for the pole after the first 200 yards and was in the top four at the end of the first lap.

However, he dropped behind quickly in the last lap and, as he said, "I died in the last 220." No time was available on him although it was reportedly approximately the same as his 1:59.8 of Friday.

The 880 winner was John Lilly of St. Carlos, Calif., with a time of 1:53.2, a new meet record. The old mark was 1:55.1 set by Steve Gerkin of Siox Falls, Iowa, in 1965.

Marion Pittman of Detroit, Mich., was second in 1:55.4 and Richard Messmer of Spokane, Wash., third in 1:55.5.

California's athletes won the team title, scoring 71 points. They won four first and placed in all but three of the 13 events. Michigan was second with 57 and Washington third with 50 1-3.

Seven meet marks were set and another was tied in Friday's preliminaries and Saturday's finals.

Savage's Double Caps Rally That Knocks Bucs From Lead

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Savage, inserted into the line-up for the slumping Mike Shannon, capped a three-run breakaway in the seventh inning with a two-run double Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1.

The loss dropped the Pirates out of first place in the National League, putting them one-half game behind the San Francisco Giants who defeated Los Angeles 4-2.

The Cardinals held a 2-1 lead on a pair of unearned runs against Steve Blass going into the seventh.

Then they lumped Julian Javier's one-out double, a run-scoring single by Dal Maxvill, a pickoff error, an intentional walk and Savage's two-out double for the big frame against reliever Pete Mikkelsen.

Bob Gibson, within reach of becoming the first Cardinal pitcher to gain consecutive 20-victory seasons since Dizzy Dean, gained his 17th victory.

He had the Pirates shut out until alead off single by Bob Bailey, Blass' sacrifice and Matty Alou's single tied the score at 1-1 in the fifth.

Jets Romp By Buffalo

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The New York Jets turned two pass interceptions and a fumble into touchdowns Saturday night and defeated the defending American Football League champion Buffalo Bills 34-17 for their third straight exhibition.

On the next play from scrimmage, Gerry Philbin fell on a Buffalo fumble at the Bills' 30, and Emerson Boozer went the final three yards through right tackle.

Larry Grantham intercepted a pass at the Buffalo 26 and ran to the end zone for the third New York touchdown of the period and a 31-3 lead.

Rookie Blanks New York, 3-0

ATLANTA (AP) — Rookie Dick Kelley pitched a two-hitter as the Atlanta Braves defeated the New York Mets 3-0 Saturday night.

Kelley retired the first nine Mets he faced. Then Ron Hunt singled off Eddie Mathews' glove between third and short, and he reached third on a pair of errors by Kelley on Ed Bressoud's bunt. But Cleon Jones grounded back to Mathews, and Hunt was thrown out at the plate.

Giants Top Dodgers To Regain First

DON JANUARY, passes his putter and glove to a caddie and Arnold Palmer tips his cap to acknowledge applause following the finish of the third round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic. ## Palmer Shoots 65, Gets Tie For Lead

WHITEMARSH, Pa. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, who a year ago quit after two rounds and went home in disgust, charged to a seven-under-par 65 Saturday and tied Don January for the third round lead in the $110,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

Palmer, who will be 37 in two weeks, unleashed one of his famed charges, ramming home seven birdie putts of from 2 to 25 feet.

January shot a 69 for a share of the lead at 207.

Canadian George Knudson fired a 69 for a 54-hole total of 208. Knudson blew a four-foot putt on the 18th green that would have tied him with the leaders. He had five birds and two bogeys.

Cheered on by the majority of the 13,650 spectators who jammed the 6,708-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course, Palmer played what he described as "my best golf in a year." He was four strokes off the pace at the start of the third round.

January, playing behind Palmer and quite aware of what was going on ahead of him, refused to let the cheering bother him. He came in with a three-under-par 69 to hold onto a part of the lead he shared Friday with Dave Marr and Bill Martindale. Marr shot a 72, leaving him three strokes off the pace at 210, while Martindale faded with a 76 for 214.

January, who hasn't won a pro tour tournament in more than three years, continued his sensational golf in which he has gone over par on only two holes in three rounds. He had four birdies and one bogey Saturday.

Palmer, who is quitting the tour for a five-week vacation after this tournament, said he felt no pain in a bursitus-ridden shoulder.

The Latrobe, Pa., belter rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the first hole, and an eight-footer that sent him two under on the second.

He chipped to within two feet of the cup on the 475-yard fifth hole and turned for home in three-under-par 33.

On the back nine, Palmer rammed home a 15-footer on the 10th, played par to the 15th where he tapped in a two-footer for a bird to go five under for the day.

The gallery kept filling as word spread that Palmer was charging. And he didn't disappoint them, holing out a birdie on the 17th with a curling 25-footer, and doffing his cap after a three-footer for a bird on the final green.

Ralston, Graebner Down Mexican Pair

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Dennis Ralston and Clark Graebner, American's No. 1 tandem, overcome the scrambling tactics of Mexican crowd pleasers Marcelo Lara and Jacquin Loyo-Mayo for a 13-11, 13-11, 6-4 quarter-final victory Saturday in the 86th U. S. National Doubles Tennis Championships.

Australians Tony Roche and John Newcombe advanced to a semifinal showdown with Ralston and Graebner by overpowering Californians Stan Smith of Pasadena and Bob Lutz of Los Angeles, 6-3, 6-4, 11-9.

Ralston and Graebner, seeded second behind Austrialian aces Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle, were hard-pressed to pull out a victory over the unheralded Mexicans, who were cheered continually by a crowd of 4,800 at Longwood's sun-baked grass courts.

The experience and hardhitting of the American team offset the speed, acrobatics and tactics of Lara, 18, and Loyo-Mayo, 21, who upset fifth-seeded Manuel Santana of Spain and Luis Garcia of Mexico in a four-hour marathon in the third round.

Ralston had 15 aces, one more than Graebner, as they smashed their way to victory.

Top-seeded Maria Bueno of Brazil and Nancy Richey of Farmers Branch, Tex., and second-seeded Billie Jean Moffitt King of Long Beach, Calif., and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco led the way into the women's semi-finals.

Miss Bueno and Miss Richey eliminated Stephanie DeFina of Hollywood, Fla., and Tory Fretz of Los Angeles, 11-9, 6-3.

Mrs. King and Miss Casals rallied to defeat Valerie Ziegenfuss of San Diego, Calif., and Lynne Abbes of Orinda, Calif., 7-9, 6-2, 8-6.

Ortega Hurls Washington By Cleveland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Phil Ortega pitched a three-hitter in leading Washington to a 3-1 victor over Cleveland Saturday for the Senators' fourth straight victory.

Vic Davalillo's pinch-hit homer in the eighth gave Cleveland its only run and broke an Indian scoreless-inning streak at 23.

Ortega, 10-11, struck out 10 and gave up two singles to Chuck Hinton for the only other Indian hits.

Fred Valentine doubled to open the Senators' fifth inning and Frank Howard followed with a run-scoring double. Howard went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Larry Brown's error of Ken Harrelson's grounder.

Harrelson batted in a second run in the seventh with a single.

Marichal Continues Mastery, Wins 19th

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Juan Marichal maintained his mastery over Los Angeles Saturday by hurling San Francisco to a 4-2 victory for his 19th triumph of the season.

The Giants' victory, coupled with Pittsburgh's 5-1 defeat by St. Louis, put San Francisco into first place by one-half game over the Pirates.

The victory, sparked by homers by Jim Hart and Willie Mays and a double by Willie McCovey, brought the Dominican pitcher his third triumph over Los Angeles this season, each of them at the expense of Don Drysdale, now 9-14.

A crowd of 41,1876 saw the Giants go ahead for the first time in the sixth inning after a solo homer by Willie Davis sent the Dodgers into a 2-1 advantage in the top of the frame.

Hart homered in the third, his 29th, and Mays hit his 33rd of the season in the eighth.

Falcons Win First Game, Drop 49ers

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP) — Rookie Randy Johnson passed the Atlanta Falcons to their first victory Saturday night as the newest team in the National Football League defeated San Francisco in an exhibition game, 24-17.

The TexasA and I quarterback clinched the contest with a 35-yard touchdown toss to flanker Alex Hawkins late in the final period.

His passing moved Atlanta on 77, 87 and 79 yard scoring marches and set up Tommy Moore's 21-yard field goal in the second period.

San Francisco, now 0-4 in exhibition games, opened with George Mira at quarterback. He guided the 49ers to a touchdown and a brief first period lead.

John Brodie took over in the third period and directed the 49ers into range for a 36-yard field goal by Tommy Davis.

Bill Kilmer finished up and his five yard pass to end Bernie Casey climaxed a 53-yard drive in the waning seconds.

Mira threw only once in his team's opening 82-yard drive, completing a toss of nine yards to end Dave Parks. Dick Kopay raced 20 yards for the touchdown on a pitchout.

On Atlanta's first period scoring drive Johnson completed passes of 18 yards to end Billy Martin, 20 yards to halfback Ernie Wheelwright and 10 yards to Angelo Coia. Wheelwright scored from one-yard out.

The Falcons moved 64 yards the next time they got the ball, a 39-yard pass from Johnson to Coia helping out. Moore kicked a 21-yard field goal.

Chargers Romp By Pats, 31-13

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Leslie Duncan returned a punt 63 yards for a touchdown in the third quarter Saturday night to ignite the San Diego Chargers' 31-13 exhibition win over the Boston Patriots before 11,894.

Duncan, the American Football League's top punt returner last season, gave the Chargers a 24-13 lead as time ran out in the period.

The defense also set up San Diego's go-ahead score earlier in the quarter as Kenny Grahn intercepted a John Huarte pass on the Patriot 26 and brought it to the San Diego 15.

Three plays later, quarterback Steve Tensi threw 10 yards to end Don Norton for six points and the Chargers' first lead, 17-13.

Savage's Double Caps Rally That Knocks Bucs From Lead

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ted Savage, inserted into the line-up for the slumping Mike Shannon, capped a three-run breakaway in the seventh inning with a two-run double Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1.

The loss dropped the Pirates out of first place in the National League, putting them one-half game behind the San Francisco Giants who defeated Los Angeles 4-2.

The Cardinals held a 2-1 lead on a pair of unearned runs against Steve Blass going into the seventh.

Then they lumped Julian Javier's one-out double, a run-scoring single by Dal Maxvill, a pickoff error, an intentional walk and Savage's two-out double for the big frame against reliever Pete Mikkelsen.

Bob Gibson, within reach of becoming the first Cardinal pitcher to gain consecutive 20-victory seasons since Dizzy Dean, gained his 17th victory.

He had the Pirates shut out until alead off single by Bob Bailey, Blass' sacrifice and Matty Alou's single tied the score at 1-1 in the fifth.

Jets Romp By Buffalo

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — The New York Jets turned two pass interceptions and a fumble into touchdowns Saturday night and defeated the defending American Football League champion Buffalo Bills 34-17 for their third straight exhibition.

On the next play from scrimmage, Gerry Philbin fell on a Buffalo fumble at the Bills' 30, and Emerson Boozer went the final three yards through right tackle.

Larry Grantham intercepted a pass at the Buffalo 26 and ran to the end zone for the third New York touchdown of the period and a 31-3 lead.

Rookie Blanks New York, 3-0

Kelley retired the first nine Mets he faced. Then Ron Hunt singled off Eddie Mathews' glove between third and short, and he reached third on a pair of errors by Kelley on Ed Bressoud's bunt. But Cleon Jones grounded back to Mathews, and Hunt was thrown out at the plate.

Jones Boys Face Football Tests

By JIM MATHIS, World Sports Writer

There used to be a sign down at the state university that said "LSU Proving Grounds."

The sign is not there anymore, but there's still a whole lotta proving being done on those grounds. The Tigers have proved a lot to their coaches on that practice field. Then they'd move across to LSU Stadium and prove the same things and more to opponents.

That's the way it was a few years ago and it's still that way now. Big time college football, accompanied by all the hoop-la and glory any boy could ask. Any boy that is who's willing to pay the admission price of work and more work.

Two West Monroe brothers are among the many caught up in the future football fortunes down in Baton Rouge.

Two boys who have been willing to pay the price.

Richard and David Jones, graduates of West Monroe High School in 1963 and 1964 respectively, won athletic scholarships to LSU and now both are playing on the varsity squad.

Richard, who is known locally as "Bubba", played on the freshmen team his first year and then was understudy to All-SEC Doug Moreau last year.

David also played with the frosh, then spent last year (his second at LSU) as a redshirt. This past spring, he worked in the defensive backfield.

The Jones brothers' story starts in high school, or actually before that because both boys are natural football players. Both played end in high school. Both were standouts on offense and defense. But neither's full potential was tapped at the prep level.

LSU scouts, who have kept a close eye on West Monroe since they found a gold mine there in the person of All-American Jerry Stovall in 1959, noted the Joneses' untapped potential and apparently decided it was time to start tapping on the two.

But LSU wasn't the only college that noticed the performances and promise of the two gridders. Between 40 and 50 colleges talked to both boys. The list of offers included almost every major college in the South and Southwest. It seemed that the teams most interested in the Joneses were teams with winning ways which was what they were seeking in their recruits. Both Joneses have that indescribable quality about them that radiates a winning attitude.

David explains, "I wanted to know if I could play major college ball. I knew the competition was higher there and I knew that if I didn't give my best at LSU, I wouldn't make it."

But he did make it, just as his brother did before him. Both have obstacles remaining in front of them though and the Joneses have not let down with the mere making of a major college football team.

Just playing with a team that is accustomed to getting bowl bids every year would be enough for many boys. Just to walk with All-Americans such as LSU produces is the dream of many boys from youth.

But not the Joneses. They have a quality that is almost innate among people who are successful. Its a kind of concentration that allows them to focus on a goal and then live their daily lives so that everything they do is related to that goal—is aimed to the final achievement.

Now the Joneses may or may not become All-American football players, but you can bet that they'll play up to their ultimate potential. That's an accomplishment that will please any coach.

But, as the 1966 college football season draws near, both boys have tremendous obstacles to overcome. Both Joneses have recognized these obstacles and have accepted the challenge they present. Both will report for action Tuesday at LSU.

Bubba's hurdle is physical, which seems almost ironic for he stands nearly 6-4 and weighs 220 pounds and the first thing you think when you see him is, "He must be a football player."

But Bubba has a scriggly patchwork of stitches and scars covering his body. The scars are from injuries received on the field.

Bubba has had both shoulders dislocated and ligaments and cartilege torn in both. Half moon shaped scars near each of his shoulders testify to operations.

As if having both shoulders injured wasn't bad enough for a receiver, Bubba has had operations on both knees. It's knee problems that end the career of many football players.

Nobody knows how Bubba's injuries will hold up under the pressure of full-blast, big time football, but Bubba plans to find out soon.

David's obstacle is not quite as obvious as Bubba's although just as large. David has to make the first string so that he can play. And, if he stays in the defensive backfield, that will probably be exceptionally hard for him to do as a sophomore.

Coaches prefer to have boys with game experience to play in the vital defensive backfield positions. With strong-armed quarterbacks apparently here to stay in college football, the deep backs have a bigger burden than ever.

Both the boys know what lies ahead and both are ready.

List Of Former Cotton States Golfers Now Pro Impressive

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

A list of current golf professionals who have played in the Cotton States tournament at Bayou DeSiard is impressive. The total comes to 25.

Of the total 12 are touring professionals and 13 are club pros, including some who play the winter tours.

The 18th Annual Cotton States Invitational Golf Tournament comes up again Friday and runs through Labor Day. Again the tournament will draw top amateurs, with some of them also destined for the professional ranks.

The most well known Cotton States performer who has turned is Homero Blancas, of Houston, Tex. The former University of Houston linksman won the Monroe tournament three times (1962-1964) and is the only amateur with three Cotton States trophies.

Blancas was awarded Rookie-of-the-Year honors by the professional golf association in 1965.

Don January, who is in the limelight today as he enters the final round of the Philadelphia Golf Classic in a tie with Arnold Palmer, won the Cotton States in 1951 and was runner up to Bennie Castloo in 1952.

Another current touring pro, Jackie Cupit, was runner-up in 1955 and won in 1960 while Fred Marti, also on tour, was runner up to Blancas his first year to win. Sonny Methvin was runner up in 1958.

Other touring professionals who have played in the Cotton States include: Tommy Aaron, Don Cherry, Howie Johnson, Butch Baird, Jimmy Powell, Ted Hale and Joe Conrad.

The best remembered of the current club professionals is probably Ham Carruthers, the 1954 champion while Wally Bradley and Roy Pace were runners-up in 1954 and 1953 respectively.

Others now in club professional positions are: Monte Bradley, Pete Hessemer, Burt Burdick, Larry Campbell, Monte Sanders, Richard Dickson, Jack Doss, Bobby Ledbetter, Dickie Myer and Rayburn Doege.

Young amateurs who hope to sharpen their professional chances by playing in the Cotton States are expected to begin arriving in Monroe Wednesday for practice rounds.

The club will be closed for repairs and preparations Monday.

Championship qualifying only will be held Friday with only players with a handicap of four or less eligible to compete for one of the 30 available championship flight berths.

DeSiard professional Winnie Cole said the tournament is full and a waiting list has been created.

Clayton Cole is the defending champion. He defeated Bob Hartquist, also of Monroe, four and three last year. Both will be exempt from qualifying this year.

As usual several top golfing-minded Colleges and Universities will be represented in the tournament, from NCAA champion Houston to Gulf States Conference champion USL.

Norm Snead Hurls Eagles Past Giants

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Norm Snead threw two touchdown passes within 25 seconds, the last with 48 seconds left following an onside kick, that lifted the Philadelphia Eagles to a 24-23 victory over the New York Giants Saturday in a National Football League exhibition game.

Sam Baker provided the key onside kick, as well as the winning conversion point, wiping out 23-10 lead the Giants had built with 12 minutes left.

All three Philadelphia touchdowns came after Giant fumbles as the New Yorkers suffered their first setback in four pre season contests. Philadelphia also has a 3-1 record.

The Eagles closed to 23-17 as Snead passed 11 yards to Israel Lang, climaxing a 40-yard march.

Baker booted the ensuing kickoff into the midsection of Mike Ciccolella, a rookie linebacker, who fumbled and Ron Medved, recovered on the Giant 46. Snead missed rookie flanker Ben Hawkins with one pass but then lofted a long pass over defender Dick Lynch which Hawkins grabbed as he crossed the goal line.

Morrall threw 65 yards to Homer Jones and 70 yards to Aaron Thomas for the two Giant touchdowns.

Traweek Action

The usual fine show will be held today at Traweek Raceway in West Monroe.

Both stock and coupe races will be held.

La. Tech Footballers Arrive Tuesday

RUSTON (Special) — The annual picture-taking ceremonies will open Louisiana Tech's 1966 fall football activities next Wednesday, and the Bulldogs had better get their fill of such leisurely doings while the getting is good.

There'll be precious little leisure thereafter, as Coach Joe Aillet's athletes will have just a little over two weeks in which to prepare for their horrendous opening hurdles — Southern Miss. at Hattiesburg on September 17 and mighty Alabama at Birmingham on September 24.

Squad members are scheduled to begin reporting to the campus on Tuesday, August 30, with half the squad slated to undergo physical exams at 4:45 on that date.

On Wednesday, August 31, the morning hours will be devoted to shooting of squad, group and individual pictures in game uniform, and the afternoon will be given over to "dress-up" photos for program purposes, along with physical exams for the remaining half of the squad. Measurements for travel uniforms will close out the day.

The Bulldogs will hit the two-a-day drill schedule early on September 1 and continue until school actually opens and class schedules restrict practice to the afternoons.

Brittenum's Shoulder Is A-OK

"Jon tells me his right arm is stronger than it's ever been," Coach Frank Broyles said.

"In fact, he thinks his ball probably has more zip with less effort. He lifted weights all summer to strengthen his arm."

Brittenum, a 180 pound senior who thrived on pressure last fall, is one of 27 lettermen on the Razorback squad. He will be the key man in Broyles' wide open "I" formation attack.

"Jon's the most accurate passer and has the best arm of any quarterback I've had," Broyles said. "He's quick and he can really scramble back there."

Brittenum, an all-Southwest Conference selection, injured his right shoulder in the Cotton Bowl game when Louisiana State beat the Porkers 14-7, snapping Arkansas' winning streak at 22 games—then the longest in the nation among major colleges.

He underwent surgery in January and, as a safety precaution, did not participate in spring practice.

Traweek Action

The usual fine show will be held today at Traweek Raceway in West Monroe.

Both stock and coupe races will be held.

La. Tech Footballers Arrive Tuesday

RUSTON (Special) — The annual picture-taking ceremonies will open Louisiana Tech's 1966 fall football activities next Wednesday, and the Bulldogs had better get their fill of such leisurely doings while the getting is good.

There'll be precious little leisure thereafter, as Coach Joe Aillet's athletes will have just a little over two weeks in which to prepare for their horrendous opening hurdles — Southern Miss. at Hattiesburg on September 17 and mighty Alabama at Birmingham on September 24.

Squad members are scheduled to begin reporting to the campus on Tuesday, August 30, with half the squad slated to undergo physical exams at 4:45 on that date.

On Wednesday, August 31, the morning hours will be devoted to shooting of squad, group and individual pictures in game uniform, and the afternoon will be given over to "dress-up" photos for program purposes, along with physical exams for the remaining half of the squad. Measurements for travel uniforms will close out the day.

The Bulldogs will hit the two-a-day drill schedule early on September 1 and continue until school actually opens and class schedules restrict practice to the afternoons.

Brittenum's Shoulder Is A-OK

"Jon tells me his right arm is stronger than it's ever been," Coach Frank Broyles said.

"In fact, he thinks his ball probably has more zip with less effort. He lifted weights all summer to strengthen his arm."

Brittenum, a 180 pound senior who thrived on pressure last fall, is one of 27 lettermen on the Razorback squad. He will be the key man in Broyles' wide open "I" formation attack.

"Jon's the most accurate passer and has the best arm of any quarterback I've had," Broyles said. "He's quick and he can really scramble back there."

Brittenum, an all-Southwest Conference selection, injured his right shoulder in the Cotton Bowl game when Louisiana State beat the Porkers 14-7, snapping Arkansas' winning streak at 22 games—then the longest in the nation among major colleges.

He underwent surgery in January and, as a safety precaution, did not participate in spring practice.

Dove Season Nears Start

With Paul Martin

The 1966-67 hunting season gets its official start at noon Saturday with doves the legal game for 16 half-days of afternoon shooting only through Sunday, September 18. The dove season's three-way split will allow other sessions for October 5 - November 6 and finally December 16 - January 15.

Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, reminds hunters that this season opening comes on the Labor Day holiday with an expected heavy rush for hunting licenses.

These licenses have been on sale at sheriff's offices and many sporting goods establishments for nearly a month and hunters should make an effort to get theirs as soon as possible to avoid Labor Day difficulties, especially if your favorite sporting goods dealer exhausts his supply and the sheriff's office is closed.

The bag limit for doves is 12 daily and 24 in possession after the first day.

The Waterfowl Season

Louisiana's waterfowl hunting dates and limits were officially announced this week.

The regular duck and coot season runs 5 days from November 18 through January 1.

There's a 70-day goose season, November 7 through January 15, but the season is still closed on Canada geese, the hunter being allowed to take a daily bag of five of other kinds but to include not more than two white-fronted geese.

The special teal season for permit holders had earlier been fixed as September 17-25.

The daily bag limits for ducks during the regular season is still four, but you will be allowed two mallards this year instead of the one that prevailed last season. Four pintails may be taken for the full bag. You'll be permitted to include only two woodducks or just two canvasbacks in the daily limit of four.

There are bonus ducks of two scaup or ringneck daily but you have to be south of U.S. highway 90 in the coastal area to share this harvest.

The coot season runs concurrent with the regular duck season with a daily bag of 10.

You're permitted double the daily bag in possession limits after the first day for all waterfowl. The rule applies for all resident game except deer and turkey. Deer allowables will be one a day, three for the season. Turkey will be just one gobbler for the season.

Snap Shots Of Interest

Grand prize winners in the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's fishing contest will be rewarded Tuesday night at a meeting scheduled for the Ouachita Parish Agricultural Building, West Monroe. First Jim Packer, contest chairman (you'll read where he's catching fish, too) passes out prizes for big catches during the month ending August 15. Then comes the big awards for the biggest fish in bass, crappie and bream categories for the full summer.

Dick Yancey, assistant LWLFC director, Allen Ensminger, in charge of the state's wildlife refuges, and Jimmy Thompson, chairman of the LWLFC, have been invited to appear on the Ouachita unit's program Tuesday. "We'll have a good program if only two of them are able to attend," unit president John Ensminger said. "It will be really fine if all three can come." The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

Cheniere lake developments continue. Boat lanes have been cut from the spillway along the old channel to Puckett Lake with a run from Area 4 to the channel and cleaning especially noticeable at Area 4. Lots of fresh water is entering Cheniere from its "seven runs" but the drawdown level is being maintained. The bass are fat.

Commercial fishermen working Cheniere must have a permit, obtainable from Jesse Brantley, lake superintendent. The fishing is supervised. Brantley said four commercial operations already going on in the lake are "taking an awful lot of turtles."

Bayou DeSiard commercial fishing will be permitted, beginning Sept. 15 and running through May 15. Permits will be needed from Miss Nell Cheek, secretary-treasurer of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury.

"Andy" Anders, past president of the OWU and straunch supporter of Ducks Unlimited, has placed containers at places where hunting licenses are sold. His idea is for you to drop last season's duck stamp into the container when you're purchasing your new basic license and disposing of the billfold. Andy collects these stamps for DU which in turn sells them to stamp collectors, using the revenue for pot-hole development in the Canadian waterfowl breeding grounds.

Tupawek Bowmen conduct an all-day 56-target classified shoot today, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, at its range off the Arkansas road about three miles from the West Monroe city limits.

Lafourche Bowmen have a 28-target ribbon event for broadhead shooters this afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, at their range just east of Monroe off U.S. Highway 80.

The trapping seasons will be Nov. 20-Feb. 28 for nutria; Nov. 20-Jan. 10 for mink; Dec. 1-Feb. 28 for muskrat and beaver, except in hurricane-damaged St. Bernard and part of Plaquemines for which seasons will probably be determined next month.

Rice Inks Pact With Miami 11

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP)—Ken Rice, badly needed offensive tackle and guard, signed a contract with the Miami Dolphins Saturday.

Rice, who played with the Oakland Raiders last year, is the 28th of the 32 players drafted in the American Football League expansion draft to sign with the new team.

In workouts, the Dolphins drilled on passing, both offensive and defensive. Coach George Wilson said there would be only one practice tomorrow.

Dove Season Nears Start

With Paul Martin

The 1966-67 hunting season gets its official start at noon Saturday with doves the legal game for 16 half-days of afternoon shooting only through Sunday, September 18. The dove season's three-way split will allow other sessions for October 5 - November 6 and finally December 16 - January 15.

Leslie L. Glasgow, director of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission, reminds hunters that this season opening comes on the Labor Day holiday with an expected heavy rush for hunting licenses.

These licenses have been on sale at sheriff's offices and many sporting goods establishments for nearly a month and hunters should make an effort to get theirs as soon as possible to avoid Labor Day difficulties, especially if your favorite sporting goods dealer exhausts his supply and the sheriff's office is closed.

The bag limit for doves is 12 daily and 24 in possession after the first day.

The Waterfowl Season

Louisiana's waterfowl hunting dates and limits were officially announced this week.

The regular duck and coot season runs 5 days from November 18 through January 1.

There's a 70-day goose season, November 7 through January 15, but the season is still closed on Canada geese, the hunter being allowed to take a daily bag of five of other kinds but to include not more than two white-fronted geese.

The special teal season for permit holders had earlier been fixed as September 17-25.

The daily bag limits for ducks during the regular season is still four, but you will be allowed two mallards this year instead of the one that prevailed last season.

Four pintails may be taken for the full bag. You'll be permitted to include only two woodducks or just two canvasbacks in the daily limit of four.

There are bonus ducks of two scaup or ringneck daily but you have to be south of U.S. highway 90 in the coastal area to share this harvest.

The coot season runs concurrent with the regular duck season with a daily bag of 10.

You're permitted double the daily bag in possession limits after the first day for all waterfowl. The rule applies for all resident game except deer and turkey. Deer allowables will be one a day, three for the season. Turkey will be just one gobbler for the season.

Snap Shots Of Interest

Grand prize winners in the Ouachita Wildlife Unit's fishing contest will be rewarded Tuesday night at a meeting scheduled for the Ouachita Parish Agricultural Building, West Monroe. First Jim Packer, contest chairman (you'll read where he's catching fish, too) passes out prizes for big catches during the month ending August 15. Then comes the big awards for the biggest fish in bass, crappie and bream categories for the full summer.

Dick Yancey, assistant LWLFC director, Allen Ensminger, in charge of the state's wildlife refuges, and Jimmy Thompson, chairman of the LWLFC, have been invited to appear on the Ouachita unit's program Tuesday. "We'll have a good program if only two of them are able to attend," unit president John Ensminger said. "It will be really fine if all three can come." The meeting starts at 7:30 p.m.

Cheniere lake developments continue. Boat lanes have been cut from the spillway along the old channel to Puckett Lake with a run from Area 4 to the channel and cleaning especially noticeable at Area 4. Lots of fresh water is entering Cheniere from its "seven runs" but the drawdown level is being maintained. The bass are fat.

Commercial fishermen working Cheniere must have a permit, obtainable from Jesse Brantley, lake superintendent. The fishing is supervised. Brantley said four commercial operations already going on in the lake are "taking an awful lot of turtles."

Bayou DeSiard commercial fishing will be permitted, beginning Sept. 15 and running through May 15. Permits will be needed from Miss Nell Cheek, secretary-treasurer of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury.

"Andy" Anders, past president of the OWU and straunch supporter of Ducks Unlimited, has placed containers at places where hunting licenses are sold. His idea is for you to drop last season's duck stamp into the container when you're purchasing your new basic license and disposing of the billfold. Andy collects these stamps for DU which in turn sells them to stamp collectors, using the revenue for pot-hole development in the Canadian waterfowl breeding grounds.

Tupawek Bowmen conduct an all-day 56-target classified shoot today, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, at its range off the Arkansas road about three miles from the West Monroe city limits.

Lafourche Bowmen have a 28-target ribbon event for broadhead shooters this afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, at their range just east of Monroe off U.S. Highway 80.

The trapping seasons will be Nov. 20-Feb. 28 for nutria; Nov. 20-Jan. 10 for mink; Dec. 1-Feb. 28 for muskrat and beaver, except in hurricane-damaged St. Bernard and part of Plaquemines for which seasons will probably be determined next month.

Rice Inks Pact With Miami 11

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP)—Ken Rice, badly needed offensive tackle and guard, signed a contract with the Miami Dolphins Saturday.

Rice, who played with the Oakland Raiders last year, is the 28th of the 32 players drafted in the American Football League expansion draft to sign with the new team.

In workouts, the Dolphins drilled on passing, both offensive and defensive. Coach George Wilson said there would be only one practice tomorrow.

Baltimore's Rally In 9th Falls Short

BALTIMORE (AP) — Reliever Don McMahon pitched out of a ninth-inning jam Saturday night, preserving a 3-2 victory for Boston over American League-leading Baltimore.

McMahon relieved Billy Short in the ninth after Larry Haney walked with one out and Paul Blair singled. Luis Aparicio singled for one run, and Russ Snyder hit a sacrifice fly for another, but McMahon ended the rally and the game by striking out Frank Robinson.

Short had come on in the previous inning, replacing starter Jim Lonborg and getting out of another jam.

Lonborg and Eddie Kasko walked in the fifth inning, and both scored on Joe Foy's double.

Lonborg was in the middle of a throwing controversy.

Frank Robinson went to the ground on two consecutive pitches in the third inning, and Brooks Robinson hit the dirt to avoid an inside pitch in the fourth.

When Lonborg came to bat in the fifth, a pitch from Frank Bertaina went behind the Boston hurler's head and sailed all the way to the backstop.

Yanks Romp To Easy Win Over Detroit

NEW YORK (AP) — Clete Boyer's double and Jim Bouton's single each drove in two runs in a six-run sixth inning that sparked the New York Yankees to an 11-1 victory over Detroit Saturday night.

Bouton, 2-6, pitching his second complete-game of the season, limited the Tigers to seven hits, one of them Dick McAuliffe's 17th home run of the season.

Steve Whitaker, hit his second major-league homer in the second, a long fly to right-center that got past the outfielders and went for an inside-the-park homer. He doubled in another run in the seventh.

Boyer's double in the sixth scored Tom Tresh and Whitaker, and Bouton's ground-rule single scored Boyer and Elston Howard. An error by shortstop McAuliffe let in the other two runs of the inning.

Screwdrivers, Mowers & Football

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

An arsenal of tools, from screwdrivers to mowing machines, partially manned by members of the Northeast coaching staff has been shoved into motion in an effort to make ready for the opening of fall football drills.

The task of preparation has been doubled this year with the transplanting of the athletic facilities — lock, stock and all — from the main campus area to a section across Bayou DeSiard off Peyton Drive.

The Indians begin two-a-day workouts Thursday but most of the squad is scheduled to arrive for the evening meal Tuesday. Wednesday will be devoted to physical examinations and picture taking.

For assistants Ralph Lane and Bill Dotson there was the job of rearranging equipment and finding slots for loose ends.

On the new practice area, coaches Wallace Hargon and Lynn LeBlanc were busy cutting grass and marking off the two fields. One field will be used for offensive players and the other for the defensive group.

Trainer Charlie Martin planned his temporary hospital in the former barracks which will serve as dressing room for the Indians until the reconstructed Brown Stadium is completed.

The old Army-constructed building, formerly used as a men's dormitory and as the college's ROTC headquarters, was located at the north end of the old stadium. Both the stadium and barracks were moved to make room for a new science building.

When the stadium was first being torn down, the building was used as a warehouse for athletic equipment. Now the building is being rearranged to accomodate some 70 football players.

Coach White sees some benefits in the new location. "Actually we have more room here than we ever had," he says. Dressing facilities were previously located underneath the stadium, and were rather cramped."

Each room in the cream colored building is being suited to a specific function with 15 lockers located in each dressing room.

White took time out to a brief tour of the building and athletic facilities under contruction. He pointed out the area set aside for the baseball field, just north of the football stadium and said a part of the outfield will be lighted and used for football practice.

The Indians open against Southeast Missouri Sept. 17, and will probably play at Ouachita Stadium since there is little hope the new college stadium will be completed by that time. The Cape Girdeau-based team provided the only win for the Indians last season, a 5-0 conquest which came with a safety and a field goal.

The two - a - day workouts will continue until registration begins, Sept. 14, with the morning sessions beginning at 9:30 devoted mainly to kicking and passing and the evening sessions, which will begin at 7, consisting mainly of fundamentals. Most of the Indians' heavy contact work will be done in the night workouts.

Packers Stop Steelers 17-6 With Taylor

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Stutter - stepping Jim Taylor put some steam back into the sluggish Green Bay Packers' attack and carried the National Football League champions to a 17-6 exhibition victory over the revamped Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night.

The veteran fullback, enjoying a fine training season, scored one touchdown and set-up another with a brilliant 41-yard gallop through the Steeler secondary.

He also paved the way for a 17-yard Don Chandler field goal with a series of sparkling runs with short passes from Bart Starr.

The Packers, held to only one touchdown in losing their last two exhibition outings, struck first when Taylor, all alone in the end zone, pulled in a first period Starr pass from the 11.

His 41-yard jaunt in the second period carried the ball to the Steelers' ten, and Paul Hornung rammed up the middle from there.

Taylors' heroics carried into the second half when he raced 15 and 18 yards with Starr passes to lug the ball into field goal range for Chandler's boots.

The Steelers, who had difficulty holding on to Bill Nelsen's passes, had to settle for Mike Clark field goals of 22 and 31 yards as they lost their third exhibition in four outings under new head coach Bill Austin.

Their best touchdown shot came in the closing minutes when Packer rookie Donny Anderson fumbled on the Green Bay 5 and John Baker recovered for the Steelers.

Nelsen passed 44 yards to Roy Jefferson to give Pittsburgh a first down on the Packer one, but the Steelers were unable to crack the Packer one, but the Steelers were unable to crack the Packer line. They finally surrendered the ball on the ten.

Dallas Gets 20-10 Victory

TULSA, Ok.a. (AP) — Danny Villanueva's two field goals and Jerry Rhome'u three-yard touchdown scamper in the third quarter pulled the Dallas Cowboys to a 20-10 National Football League exhibition victory over the Detroit Lions here Saturday night.

Villanueva's first field goal, from the 12-yard fline after rookie fullback Walt Garrison carried the ball into scoring territory, tied the score at 10-10. His second, from the 15, was set up by Mel Renfro's 56-yard punt return.

Late in the period, Rhome, who played most of the second half, scored from the three on a keeper.

The Cowboys, now 5-0 in exhibition play, scored on their first offensive play of the game when Don Meredith hit Bob Hayes with a 38-yard scoring strike.

The Lions made their bid in the second quarter. Milt Plum's 13-yard field goal broke the icem Then Plum engineered an 80-yard scoring drive in the final two minutes of the first half, tossing six yards to Pat Studstill for the touchdown with 24 seconds remaining to give the Lions a 10-7 halftime lead.

Kansas City Tops Oilers

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Quarterback Pete Beathard and flanker Otis Taylor revived a sagging Kansas City offense and the Chiefs completed a perfect exhibition season with a 31-20 victory over the Houston Oilers Saturday night.

Until the closing minutes of the first half the rugged Kansas City defense, led by linebacker Bobby Bell, tackle Buck Buchanan and safety Bobby Hunt kept the club in the game, trailing 6-3.

Hunt's third interception with 64 seconds left in the half set the stage for Beathard, who moved the club 57 yards in five plays, the last one a 37-yard TD strike to Taylor on third down and 24, with 21 seconds left.

From the second half kickoff, the running of Bert Coan and Mike Garrett led a 65-yard drive for a 17-6 lead.

After veteran George Blanda pulled the Oilers within four points at 17-13 with a fourth-down, five-yard scoring pass to end Bob McLeod, the Chiefs struck back with a 69-yard drive.

Curtis McClinton's 21 and 12-yard bursts were the big plays and Coan cracked over from the one to make it 2 -13. Taylor got the last Kansas City touchdown on a sensational 80-yard pass play in which he backtracked several yards to get the ball, then stiff-armed safety Allen Trammell at the 20 and romped in.

Tony Oliva Doesn't Talk About Winning Batting Crowns Except At Contract Time

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (AP) — Tony Oliva doesn't like to talk about winning batting championships — until he goes to talk contract with Minnesota Twins' President Calvin Griffith.

There is still a lot of the gangling, smiling Cuban kid in Oliva — the kid who came up to the Twins in 1964 and promptly became the first rookie in history to win a major league batting title.

He still readily flashes that big smile, exposing shiny gold teeth cappings. He's still got those glib answers when somebody wants to know if he's going to win another batting title. And he still has that great, natural swing.

But, there are changes.

For one thing, Oliva is getting more business-minded. "I tell Mr. Griffith how many championships I have won when season is over," he says. "That's when they count."

For another, Oliva has become a big baseball star, and it shows.

He still signs autographs for the kids, but he'll stop with a "too bad, have to go now," after a while.

He used to be trapped in the Metropolitan Stadium parking lot for upwards of an hour in his rookie year. And he'd stay put until everyone had an autograph. He would catch youngsters coming back for seconds.

He holds court in front of his locker on occasion with fellow Latins Cesar Tovar and and Sandy Valdespino — before Valdespino went down to the minors in mid-season — at his side.

Oliva is one of two main hitting cogs for the Twins. Harmon Killebrew is the other. If both are hitting, the Twins roll. If one is in a slump, things become a struggle. If both slump, the Twins die.

They died a lot the first half of this season, falling so far behind front-running Baltimore that all hope has just about ended for repeating as American League champions despite a second-half comeback.

Oliva went into the slump a few weeks before the All-Star game break, and his average slipped to a season low of .314.

So rare are such slumps for Oliva that he genuinely was confused and began to press — a rarity for him. He would sit shaking his head and mumble, "I don't know. I don't know."

Twins Manager Sam Mele helped get him out of the slump by suggesting Oliva was curling his bat too far behind his head. Nobody advances tips to Oliva without Mele's approval now.

A minor league manager once tried to change his batting and Oliva barely hit .200 for half a season at Dallas-Fort Worth.

He won the A.L. title in 1964 with .323 and in 1965 with .321. If he wins a third straight crown, he will be the first to do so in the league since Ty Cobb won three in a row in 1917-1919.

"I tell you after the season if I think I win the batting title," is his stock reply. He's been saying the same thing three years.

Oliva, now 25, came up to the majors as a questionable fielder. Now, he's one of the league's most respect right fielders with a rifle arm. He's also played center on occasion.

"He's just one heck of a ball player," Mele says. "If he doesn't win the batting championship this year, and win several more in future years, I'll be very surprised."

Baltimore's Rally In 9th Falls Short

BALTIMORE (AP) — Reliever Don McMahon pitched out of a ninth-inning jam Saturday night, preserving a 3-2 victory for Boston over American League-leading Baltimore.

McMahon relieved Billy Short in the ninth after Larry Haney walked with one out and Paul Blair singled. Luis Aparicio singled for one run, and Russ Snyder hit a sacrifice fly for another, but McMahon ended the rally and the game by striking out Frank Robinson.

Short had come on in the previous inning, replacing starter Jim Lonborg and getting out of another jam.

Lonborg and Eddie Kasko walked in the fifth inning, and both scored on Joe Foy's double.

Lonborg was in the middle of a throwing controversy.

Frank Robinson went to the ground on two consecutive pitches in the third inning, and Brooks Robinson hit the dirt to avoid an inside pitch in the fourth.

When Lonborg came to bat in the fifth, a pitch from Frank Bertaina went behind the Boston hurler's head and sailed all the way to the backstop.

Yanks Romp To Easy Win Over Detroit

Bouton, 2-6, pitching his second complete-game of the season, limited the Tigers to seven hits, one of them Dick McAuliffe's 17th home run of the season.

Steve Whitaker, hit his second major-league homer in the second, a long fly to right-center that got past the outfielders and went for an inside-the-park homer. He doubled in another run in the seventh.

Boyer's double in the sixth scored Tom Tresh and Whitaker, and Bouton's ground-rule single scored Boyer and Elston Howard. An error by shortstop McAuliffe let in the other two runs of the inning.

Screwdrivers, Mowers & Football

By STUART HILL
World Sports Writer

An arsenal of tools, from screwdrivers to mowing machines, partially manned by members of the Northeast coaching staff has been shoved into motion in an effort to make ready for the opening of fall football drills.

The task of preparation has been doubled this year with the transpianting of the athletic facilities — lock, stock and all — from the main campus area to a section across Bayou DeSiard off Peyton Drive.

The Indians begin two-a-day workouts Thursday but most of the squad is scheduled to arrive for the evening meal Tuesday. Wednesday will be devoted to phsyical examinations and picture taking.

For assistants Ralph Lane and Bill Dotson there was the job of rearranging equipment and finding slots for loose ends.

On the new practice area, coaches Wallace Hargon and Lynn LeBlanc were busy cutting grass and marking off the two fields. One field will be used for offensive players and the other for the defensive group.

Trainer Charlie Martin planned his temporary hospital in the former barracks which will serve as dressing room for the Indians until the reconstructed Brown Stadium is completed.

The old Army-constructed building, formerly used as a men's dormitory and as the college's ROTC headquarters, was located at the north end of the old stadium. Both the stadium and barracks were moved to make room for a new science building.

When the stadium was first being torn down, the building was used as a warehouse for athletic equipment. Now the building is being rearranged to accomodate some 70 football players.

Coach White sees some benefits in the new location. "Actually we have more room here than we ever had," he says. Dressing facilities were previously located underneath the stadium, and were rather cramped."

Each room in the cream colored building is being suited to a specific function with 15 lockers located in each dressing room.

White took time out to a brief tour of the building and athletic facilities under contruction. He pointed out the area set aside for the baseball field, just north of the football stadium and said a part of the outfield will be lighted and used for football practice.

The Indians open against Southeast Missouri Sept. 17, and will probably play at Ouachita Stadium since there is little hope the new college stadium will be completed by that time. The Cape Girdeau-based team provided the only win for the Indians last season, a 5-0 conquest which came with a safety and a field goal.

The two - a - day workouts will continue until registration begins, Sept. 14, with the morning sessions beginning at 9:30 devoted mainly to kicking and passing and the evening sessions, which will begin at 7, consisting mainly of fundamentals. Most of the Indians' heavy contact work will be done in the night workouts.

Packers Stop Steelers 17-6 With Taylor

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Stutter - stepping Jim Taylor put some steam back into the sluggish Green Bay Packers' attack and carried the National Football League champions to a 17-6 exhibition victory over the revamped Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night.

The veteran fullback, enjoying a fine training season, scored one touchdown and set-up another with a brilliant 41-yard gallop through the Steeler secondary.

He also paved the way for a 17-yard Don Chandler field goal with a series of sparkling runs with short passes from Bart Starr.

The Packers, held to only one touchdown in losing their last two exhibition outings, struck first when Taylor, all alone in the end zone, pulled in a first period Starr pass from the 11.

His 41-yard jaunt in the second period carried the ball to the Steelers' ten, and Paul Hornung rammed up the middle from there.

Taylors' heroics carried into the second half when he raced 15 and 18 yards with Starr passes to lug the ball into field goal range for Chandler's boots.

The Steelers, who had difficulty holding on to Bill Nelsen's passes, had to settle for Mike Clark field goals of 22 and 31 yards as they lost their third exhibition in four outings under new head coach Bill Austin.

Their best touchdown shot came in the closing minutes when Packer rookie Donny Anderson fumbled on the Green Bay 5 and John Baker recovered for the Steelers.

Nelsen passed 44 yards to Roy Jefferson to give Pittsburgh a first down on the Packer one, but the Steelers were unable to crack the Packer one, but the Steelers were unable to crack the Packer line. They finally surrendered the ball on the ten.

Dallas Gets 20-10 Victory

TULSA, Ok.a. (AP) — Danny Villanueva's two field goals and Jerry Rhome'u three-yard touchdown scamper in the third quarter pulled the Dallas Cowboys to a 20-10 National Football League exhibition victory over the Detroit Lions here Saturday night.

Villanueva's first field goal, from the 12-yard fline after rookie fullback Walt Garrison carried the ball into scoring territory, tied the score at 10-10. His second, from the 15, was set up by Mel Renfro's 56-yard punt return.

Late in the period, Rhome, who played most of the second half, scored from the three on a keeper.

The Cowboys, now 5-0 in exhibition play, scored on their first offensive play of the game when Don Meredith hit Bob Hayes with a 38-yard scoring strike.

The Lions made their bid in the second quarter. Milt Plum's 13-yard field goal broke the icem Then Plum engineered an 80-yard scoring drive in the final two minutes of the first half, tossing six yards to Pat Studstill for the touchdown with 24 seconds remaining to give the Lions a 10-7 halftime lead.

Kansas City Tops Oilers

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Quarterback Pete Beathard and flanker Otis Taylor revived a sagging Kansas City offense and the Chiefs completed a perfect exhibition season with a 31-20 victory over the Houston Oilers Saturday night.

Until the closing minutes of the first half the rugged Kansas City defense, led by linebacker Bobby Bell, tackle Buck Buchanan and safety Bobby Hunt kept the club in the game, trailing 6-3.

Hunt's third interception with 64 seconds left in the half set the stage for Beathard, who moved the club 57 yards in five plays, the last one a 37-yard TD strike to Taylor on third down and 24, with 21 seconds left.

From the second half kickoff, the running of Bert Coan and Mike Garrett led a 65-yard drive for a 17-6 lead.

After veteran George Blanda pulled the Oilers within four points at 17-13 with a fourth-down, five-yard scoring pass to end Bob McLeod, the Chiefs struck back with a 69-yard drive.

Curtis McClinton's 21 and 12-yard bursts were the big plays and Coan cracked over from the one to make it 2 -13. Taylor got the last Kansas City touchdown on a sensational 80-yard pass play in which he backtracked several yards to get the ball, then stiff-armed safety Allen Trammell at the 20 and romped in.

Oliva is one of two main hitting cogs for the Twins. Harmon Killebrew is the other. If both are hitting, the Twins roll. If one is in a slump, things become a struggle. If both slump, the Twins die.

They died a lot the first half of this season, falling so far behind front-running Baltimore that all hope has just about ended for repeating as American League champions despite a second-half comeback.

Oliva went into the slump a few weeks before the All-Star game break, and his average slipped to a season low of .314.

So rare are such slumps for Oliva that he genuinely was confused and began to press — a rarity for him. He would sit shaking his head and mumble, "I don't know. I don't know."

Twins Manager Sam Mele helped get him out of the slump by suggesting Oliva was curling his bat too far behind his head. Nobody advances tips to Oliva without Mele's approval now.

A minor league manager once tried to change his batting and Oliva barely hit .200 for half a season at Dallas-Fort Worth.

He won the A.L. title in 1964 with .323 and in 1965 with .321. If he wins a third straight crown, he will be the first to do so in the league since Ty Cobb won three in a row in 1917-1919.

"I tell you after the season if I think I win the batting title," is his stock reply. He's been saying the same thing three years.

Oliva, now 25, came up to the majors as a questionable fielder. Now, he's one of the league's most respect right fielders with a rifle arm. He's also played center on occasion.

"He's just one heck of a ball player," Mele says. "If he doesn't win the batting championship this year, and win several more in future years, I'll be very surprised."

Biltmore

Past the vine - covered lodge gate, the road wanders three miles through a forest of mountain laurel, cedars, pines, and flowers. It crosses sparkling creeks over rustic stone bridges, and when it rounds a final turn through high, wrought iron gates, you can see the house.

George Vanderbilt would have been deep in thought as he looked out his office window in New York City many years ago. Though generations have come and gone, the scenes of winter snow and the lives of city people change little through the years. And so it is easy to understand his longing for a country home in the southern mountains where winters are mild, and one can escape the summer heat of streets and tall buildings. In 1888 he started purchasing land in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina near the city of Asheville. Two years later he had gathered one hundred twenty-five thousand acres, and construction had begun on his home.

The army of workers which had moved onto the property would pause now and then to watch a small steam engine as it struggled along a special three mile spur pulling trainloads of Indiana limestone from Biltmore station and the Southern Railroad. To build the house, Vanderbilt appointed Richard Morris Hunt, one of the finest architects of the day. Frederick Law Olmstead, creator of New York's Central Park, and master of naturalistic landscape architecture was engaged to design the estate. History tells that five years and eight million dollars passed before the Christmas party of 1895 when Biltmore House was dedicated. But no record could have described the feelings which must have been Vanderbilt's as he gazed across the hills and trees and saw his Carolina home.

Tall poplars line each side of a wide, long park of grass and a fountain. At the far end stands the majestic house. 250 rooms, it is a French Renaissance chateau only slightly removed from the mother country. You think of castles in Europe and of how there could be no such homes as this in America, for these are the new times and empire builders are strollers across the pages of history in an era which respects no empires.

Biltmore House is awe-inspiring and many a manor house of the old world would be hard put to match its grandeur. Moreover, the house has something typically American which gives it an interesting charm. It seems to strive for the greatness of Europe, but with its Americanisms is something different and dynamic.

You can imagine a roaring fire in the fireplace of the Norwegian oak paneled drawing room as Vanderbilt described his estate. Guests enjoyed twenty thousand priceless volumes in the library, or banquets which were held in the huge hall as the great organ played. In the Palm Court cut flowers and palms still rustle. There is a softness about the tapestry gallery which knew the hands of Edith Stuyvesant Vanderbilt. Visitors can still see the chess set used by Napoleon in exile on the island of St. Helena.

Up the sweeping curved marble staircase, on the second of four floors, is First Hall. Adjacent to two magnificent Renoirs is another oil — "The Waltz," — which depicts the grace and charm of America at the turn of the century when Vanderbilt and the nation knew peace, order, and tranquility as the normal way of life.

Now, the house is no longer young, but you can almost taste the ivy-clad gentility. Vanderbilt's distinguished guests are replaced by awe-stricken tourists who come to see and try to understand how it was that some lived when this country was young. The gardens are more beautiful than they could have been a half century ago. One hundred twenty - five thousand acres of barren, washed-out farmland was turned into a forest paradise by the monarch of capitalism who loved his state and country. Because of this devotion, the American people now enjoy Mt. Pisgah National Park, a gift from Vanderbilt — the greatest portion of his estate.

British Accept New View To Cope With Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson s government concedes now that worldwide sanctions will not by themselves end Rhodesia's rebellion against British authority, senior diplomats said Saturday.

These diplomats said the British and 22 other Commonwealth governments have concluded South Africa — Rhodesia's southern neighbor — is largely responsible for the failure of this pressure.

South African financial, economic and fuel supplies have enabled the Rhodesian economy to survive, according to these authorities.

Recognizing all this, informants said, the British have accepted a nearly unanimous Commonwealth view that other unspecified measures will be needed to topple the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith, which proclaimed Rhodesian independence last November.

The Commonwealth states were reported split over what new action should be taken to insure ultimate African rule in Rhodesia will replace the all-white administration.

A majority, informants said, want Britain to yield responsibility for Rhodesia s immediate future to the United Nations, which authorized the sanctions.

But Wilson s government so far is against such a move, hoping it may yet pull off a compromise settlement.

Sir Alec Douglas-Home, a Conservative and former prime minister, summed up his party s attitude Saturday in a public warning to Wilson to resist any temptation to shift the responsibility.

Kenilworth Castle ivy clings to a brass fountain turned green with the passing of years. There is an arbor outside the library under which you can almost see Vanderbilt in his later years. Near a magnificent boxwood hedge, you can look across the sweep of hazy hills. Biltmore House rises, majestic, a monument to the imagination of men who lived in the twilight of an era.

Engagement Of Donna Sue Green, David Johnson Announced At Tea Saturday In Farmerville

The engagement of Miss Donna Sue Green to David Carl Johnson of Houston, Texas, was formally announced at a tea given Saturday afternoon, August 27 by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eldred at their home in Farmerville. Parents of the betrothed couple are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Green of Farmerville and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Gustav Johnson of Louise, Texas.

The wedding is planned for November 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the First Baptist church, Farmerville, with Dr. L. B. Hall officiating.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. J. Michael Rabun of Monroe, sister of the bride. Accenting the brick wall in the foyer was an arrangement of white and gold Fuji chrysanthemums in a tall antique brass compote over which hung a cluster of white and gold wedding bells. Hanging from the arrangement were white streamers, inscribed in gold, "Donna and David," and the date of their wedding, November 26.

Receiving guests with the Eldreds, the engaged couple were Mr. and Mrs. Green, and Miss Carol Ann Johnson, sister of the prospective bridegroom. For the occasion Miss Green was wearing a designer dress of dubonnet silk alluskeen, featuring an A-line skirt and sleeveless overblouse with soft French bow at the waist front. Black accessories completed her costume.

White and gold pompon chrysanthemums surrounding a tall white memory candle ornamented the guest book table which was presided over by Miss Joanne Wiley.

On the mantel in the reception area was a tall arrangement of yellow, white and gold chrysanthemums and a brass candelabra holding seven avocado candles. The tea table was covered with a white organdy cloth over gold satin and was centered with an antique brass compote of gold, bronze and white chrysanthemums, stock and yellow and bronze Fujis. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Jake Lee Netterville of Baton Rouge; Misses Diane Nation, Carol Diane and Gail Gene Johnson, Paula Elizabeth Bundrick and Deborah Ann Longfellow. They wore formal length gowns of pink silk crepe styled with scoop decolletage and elbow sleeves and featuring brief trains.

Think Pink In Makeup For Plum Shades

For the plums in dresses, costumes the beauty makers are thinking PINK. . . even the mauve under-foundation and the pink over-eye are right for purple clothes. Lilac shadow softened with plenty of white is subtle flattery at eye level . . . and on the fingertips pink-mauve lacquer carries out the theme Hair? Color it smokey taupe or cool brown when the purples are worn.

Fashion shines in vinyl: so faces must shine. One transparent liquid goes over foundation or directly on the skin and covers the face with light. A dry brush-on eye shadow leaves patches of light on the eyes in Misty White, Beige Mist, Golden Frost, or French Blue. Eyes also shine with light with Shadow Creme.

Fashion Parades The Pants Suit For Wear Everywhere

The straight leg pants and the matching jackets go anywhere . . . from football games and fraternity parties to discotheques and dinner clubs. Lending a helping hand to the new fashion are the many faces of cotton. Corduroys, suedes, velours and velveteens provide the versatility necessary for a morning to midnight collection of pants suits.

Designers tip their hats to the military, making epaulettes, brass buttons, doughboy hats and cadet collars an integral part of their fashion vocabulary. Capturing the military spirit is one designer who chooses beefy brown corduroy for her pants and shorter - than - regulation trench coat . . . then adds a poster-bright orange cotton knit turtleneck.

Challenging the military ensembles are the pants with safari jackets and trousers teamed with subtly shaped riding jackets. And for the most MODern fashion followers, there are double-breasted suits underscored with Carnaby shirts and wide polka-dotted ties that leave nothing for the men to call their own.

Tips Given On Storing Wedding Gown At Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you plan to store a wedding gown at home, follow these tips from the National Institute of Drycleaning.

If a gown is packed in a plastic package that isn't vacuum sealed, the package can "sweat" and mildew is the unhappy result. Take the gown out and air periodically, to remove moisture and relieve the strain on folds. Many professional drycleaners offer special storage — a safer method of preserving the gown.

August, September Gaining On June As 'Marry' Months

May is a merry month, but August and September are "marry" months. The latest marriage statistics show that early fall months are gaining on June as the most popular times for exchanging marriage vows.

Luci Baines Johnson became Mrs. Patrick Nugent in August, and a growing number of couples are celebrating wedding anniversaries during early autumn. Not only are couples marrying younger today, but more of the total population is married than ever before. In 1940 over 11 per cent of American women between the ages of 35 and 44 were single. By 1960, their number was reduced to just five per cent.

For couples celebrating another year of married life, an anniversary gift of fresh flowers is sure to recall memories of their wedding day. A mixed arrangement of wedding-white and brightly colored blossoms is recommended by Florists' Transworld Delivery designers, who can deliver the flowers in a matter of hours for any anniversary celebration.

Flowers are an official symbol of the fourth wedding anniversary, and floral experts suggest a gift of flowers in special vases for other dates. A wooden container, for example, will signify a fifth anniversary. Copper is for seven years of marriage, and tin for the tenth year.

Flowers have been a wedding tradition for centuries. In medieval days, brides were adorned with garlands of roses and the Anglo-Saxons crowned both bride and groom with flowers. In Elizabethan England, a kissing knot of rosemary and eroton leaves was hung over the newlyweds. The custom of carrying a nosegay of heather, considered a lucky charm for the bride and groom, was started by Queen Victoria, who received a gift of heather from Prince Albert.

Tossing the bride's bouquet is a fourteenth century tradition, meaning that the bride dedicates her flowers to another's future happiness. And fresh flowers for anniversary greeting is a modern day custom to toast fond memories and extend best wishes to the happy couple.

Mississippi Girl Is Bride Of Paul Hayne Johnson III

In a double ring ceremony Saturday evening, August 27 in Trinity Presbyterian Church, Jackson, Mississippi, Miss Gwen Ann Mills became the bride of Paul Hayne Johnson III of Minden. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glendon O'Neal Mills of Jackson and parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hayne Johnson Jr., of Minden, formerly of Monroe.

Rising high in the background beneath the gold chancel cross was a tier of candles in brass holders, with woodwardia ferns arranged behind gold chandelier-type candelabra. The choir rail behind the prie-dieu was banked with white delphinium, Fuji chrysanthemums, roses and pompons. On either side classical columns held matching floral arrangements.

Miss Copper Mills, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Misses Elizabeth Dorsey Nicholson and Jo Claire Borthwick of Jackson; Mrs. Billups Shepard Allen of Oxford, Miss Lucia Ann Littleton of Baton Rouge, cousin of the groom and Mrs. David Eliot Sherrod and Miss Lisa Ann Mills of Memphis, cousins of the bride. Their floor length gowns of avalon green silk chiffon over aqua charmeen crepe were designed with empire silhouettes and featured scoop necklines and long pointed sleeves. A satin band of the two tones outlined the waistline. They wore hats of matching velvet rosebuds and leaves with short poufs of illusion and carried bouquets of tuberous begonias shading from autumn coral to pale gold.

Mr. Johnson was attended by Warren Candler Dorsey of Jackson, as best man. Groomsmen were Thomas Edwin Shelton of Marks, Miss., Alton Lionel Lightsey Jr., Michael Joseph Boland and Grady Lin McCool Jr., of Jackson; Charles Jones Swayze Jr., Greenwood, Thomas Sparks Ford, Vicksburg, Donald Drummond Jones of McComb; John Rush Abbott and Robert Joseph Johnson of Memphis. William Gregory Schmidt of Jackson, was ringbearer.

For the occasion the bride's mother wore an aqua crepe sheath with an overblouse embroidered in ribboned lace highlighted with crystal teardrops. Her corsage was of Royal Bouquet orchids. Mrs. Johnson chose a two piece model of Bahama green silk featuring a neckline heavily encrusted with bugle beads. She wore a corsage of golden cattleya orchids.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Mills entertained with a reception in the church. Renaissance flower candelabra marked the receiving line against a smilax entwined treillage, hanging from the center of which was a cascading arrangement of white roses.

In the center of the reception hall a pair of curved tables featuring the two wedding cakes, held golden candelabra epergnes arranged with bridal white and golden wave roses, yellow and coral begonias. The bride's cake was crested with a nosegay of fleur d'amour, lily of the valley and ivory and yellow roses. Coral begonias and ivy decorated the groom's cake. Forming a focal point in the room was an antique gold pedestal holding a gold candelabra entwined with a garland shading from white to ivory to yellow.

For traveling the bride changed to a three piece costume of wheat colored wool and mohair with brown lizard accessories. She wore a white orchid from her bridal bouquet and a gold monogram pin, a gift of the groom. The couple left for a wedding trip through the eastern United States, New York and Boston, after which they will be at home in Cambridge, Mass., where Mr. Johnson will attend Harvard Law school.

...On Dit...

by Marillyn Taylor

With school opening this coming week, the season of house guests draws to a close. There have been a number of families visiting and being entertained during these last few precious days of summer in Monroe.

Former Monroyan CORNELIA THOMAS of Louisville, Kentucky, was here early this week as guest of her mother, FRANCES McHENRY. Cornelia stopped over for several days en route to Kerrville, Texas, to pick up daughter ANN at Camp Waldemar. The two stopped over this weekend for another day and night, are to go on to Louisville today . . . . . Monday JUNE McHenry entertained at luncheon at her home on Riverside drive, complimentary to Cornelia. Eight guests were seated at a table centered with white phlox and calladium leaves.

About fifteen old friends from high school days were invited for a visit with Cornelia Tuesday afternoon when POLLY MILNER was hostess at her home on Park avenue. Gardenias centered the table. The menu included chicken sandwiches, fudge squares, date bars, sand tarts, cheese straws, and ham biscuits, served with a choice of coffee or sauterne.

Another visitor here for this party was CAROLYN GANDY, who is visiting her parents, the R. R. GRIFFITHS on Civic street. Carolyn and her husband, COL. WILLIAM F. ## A Beauty Hint

Margaret Merril advises that it is quite simple for every woman to promote an English countryside complexion. Her hint to gain a peaches-and-cream loveliness is to damp a cloth with cold water from your refrigerator and press it over your face for a few minutes once or twice a day. Then, to hold the good of the complexion - beautifying cold water smooth on a little tropical oil of Olay. ## Truck Drivers Find Women Good At Driving

One moving van company set out to find how passenger car drivers rated among their own men and the answer for the women was — swell. Out of 200 replies which Atlas Van-Lines received in a questionnaire it sent to van drivers, only two suggested that women were not to be compared to men behind the wheel.

But one driver of a big van stated, "there ought to be more women drivers."

Another gave women and salesmen top billing. He said his favorite drivers were, "Salesman . . . who always manage to stay out of the way and women in town who are afraid to get in the way."

The questionnaire asked the van drivers to rate others in general.

The truckers were equally consistent in those things about which they complained. They accused passenger car drivers of pulling out in front of them from side roads. They said drivers repeatedly passed them only to slow down in front of them. And, they said, worst of all were the drivers who speed up when a truck pulls out to pass them.

On the other hand, the truckers said most drivers "try to be good drivers." And the truckers, known for giving aid to motorists in distress, said most motorists will return the compliment by stopping to "help a trucker who is broken down or give him a lift into town."

The most frequently committed passenger car driver errors? The truckers were of one mind here. They ranked the top three as "failure to signal properly," "failure to dim lights," and "following too closely."

"Tail-gating," following close behind, results too many times, the truckers said, in a motorist going skidding under the rear of a huge trailer which had to stop suddenly.

MRS. JESSE DALE Connor, before her marriage Saturday, August 27 in Urania Pentecostal Church was Miss Patricia Ann Barnhill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Barnhill of Olla. The bridegroom is the son of Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Connor of Urania. Both are graduates of LaSalle high school at Olla.

Correct Mascara Use Important For Beautiful Eyes

Dramatically beautiful eyes should be the pride of all fashionable women today. Although several make-up requisites are used to create the new eye looks, knowing how to use mascara correctly is of vast importance.

For the most glamorous results, when applying this product to your own eyelashes or to real hair artificial lashes, follow this simple technique. If you are using cake or creme mascara, zigzag the brush up through and down through the upper lashes to encircle each eyelash hair with color from the roots to the tips. When applying the color to the lower lashes, zigzag the brush down through the lashes only. Next, take a clean eyelash brush and lightly brush through the lashes until the hairs are separated an velvety looking.

If you use the wand type simply apply the mascara from the roots to the tips making sure the tops of the lashes are colored as well. To insure a longer and thicker look, apply an extra coast of color over the tiny hairs at the corners of each eye. Then, when the mascara is dry, stroke over the tips of all the lashes again.

ENGLISH TUDOR: The well-earned reputation of the English Tudor architectural style for solid construction is reflected in this modified version, which has a look of strength as well as more than 2200 square feet of living space in its 1½ floors.

Living Space In English Tudor

By ANDY LANG

But here's one that will fit on a fairly narrow lot. It's a version of the old English Tudor houses that dot the countryside from London to Liverpool to Plymouth.

Much of the distinctive charm of this 1½-story house comes from its triple-gable front view. The second floor rooms are roofed from front to rear instead of from side to side. Adding to the over-all effect is the interesting combination of exterior materials — smooth stucco, half timber and brick. Note, too, how the front entrance porch is weather-protected by a gable roof extension.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G 51.

Using the F.H.A. minimum side yard aggregate requirements of 10', this home, without garage, could be built on a 50-foot-wide lot. With a one-car garage, as shown in the first-floor plan, only a 60-foot lot would be needed.

Usually, in a narrow-lot house, a foyer is difficult to provide, as is good circulation. Both are designed in here by architect Rudolph A. Matern with a minimum of wasted hall space. Even though the foyer is not centrally located, but is at the left, the traffic pattern is excellent. The formal living room-dining room area, the kitchen and the bedroom sector each can be entered directly from the foyer.

The sunken living room is full of interesting details. There are two nostalgic window seats, one on each side of a corner fireplace, which has a high, timber mantel. The ceiling is cathedraled and beamed, and there is a see-through grill to a second-floor studio room. Beyond the living room is a dining room, with corner windows at right angles and with accessibility to the kitchen and a private porch.

The kitchen has a full service area as well as a breakfast section. Stub walls and brick-patterned resilient floor tiles set aside the eating area so that it has the appearance of a separate room. Like the dining room, the kitchen also has an entrance to the porch.

There are three bedrooms on the first floor, along with 1½ baths. Located here, as in the homes of early America, is the stairway to the second floor. The bedroom hall contains an extra-sized linen closet — 9' long and of a depth to make access of all items simple.

On the second floor are two bedrooms, a bath and a generous amount of closet space. But the big feature is a studio with a cathedral ceiling and roof skylight. While designed as a studio, it can, of course, be used as a study area, recreation room or even a sixth bedroom.

The Tudor style, which had its beginnings during the reign of the English House of Tudor, always has been noted for exceptionally sturdy construction. This one is no exception. But its modest size keeps construction costs at a minimum for the space provided. There are 1500 square feet of living area on the first floor, not including the porch and garage — and 731 additional square feet on the second floor.

Protect Woods Wild Flowers

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

We are so tempted to help ourselves to wild plant materials for our own gardens, without giving a thought to the outcome of the plants existence. It is so important to keep in mind all those wonderful tips given by Dwight Hall and Neil Odenwald, L.S.U. horticulturists. Hope you enjoyed last week's column and clipped it for reference.

The first tip is to leave this transplanting to the expert — the nurseryman. He will know better than anyone else about how to place native materials in your garden. But, if you do try your luck, you should keep in mind that it is your moral obligation to preserve our native plant materials. There are some plants listed that we should definitely purchase from the nursery — if possible — or gather seeds instead of plants. These are plants on the Conservation List of Louisiana. These were adopted at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, at a meeting, August 12, 1954. They are:

1. American Holly — Ilex Opace
2. Wild Azaleas — Rhododendron Canoscens
3. Birdfoot Violet — Viola Pedata (foot-like)
4. Bloodroot — Sanguinaris Also called Red Pucoon.
5. Closed Gentian — Gentiana Andrewsii (For Botanical artists and engraver)
6. Dogwood — Cornus florida (flowering).
7. Gayfeather — Liatris or laciniara, several species. Also known as Button Snakeroot, Blazing Star.
8. Lady's Slipper — Cypripedium parvifloorum (small flowered) var. pubescens (pubescent).
9. Jack-in-the-Pulpit — arisaema triphyllum (large leaved) Indian turnio or dragon arum.
10. Cowcumber Magnolia — Magnolia macrophylla (large leaved.)
11. Oak Leaf Hydrangea—Hydrangea quercifolia.
12. Pogonia Ophilglossidea, also known as beard flower.
13. Shooting Star — Dodecatheib Neadua (American Cowslip).
14. Indian Pink — Spigelia marilandica (or Maryland).
15. Pitcher Plant — Sarracenia Flava (Yellow)
16. Stuartia — Stuartia Malachodendron, Silky Camellia, Wild Camellia.
17. Solomon's Seal — Polygonatum biflorum (two flowered)
18. Trillium — Trillium ludovicaianum, or T.Viride (green). Also called Wakerobin or Birthroot.
19. Trout Lily — Erythronium Americanum. Genus also known as Dog's Tooth Violet or Fawn lily. Species also known as Yellow Adder's Tongue.
20. Yellow fringed orchid — Habenaria Ciliaris. Also known as orange plum (fringed).

List of Native Trees of Louisiana — as follows: Dogwood (cornus florida) likes acid soil, good drainage, full shade or partial sun. Difficult to transplant due to shallow feeder roots.

White Fringe Tree (chionanthus virginica), called Grancy-graybeard. Grows in full sun or partial shade in woodland type soil, good drainage necessary. Very difficult to obtain.

Redbud (cercis canadensis) likes well-drained soil (acid) slightly, prefers some shade. Easily grown from seed. Short-lived tree with a life span of 15-20 years.

Tuliptree (liriodendron tulipifera) Yellow Poplar; prefers low land, plenty moisture, but will survive where high water table exists.

American Holly (Ilex opaca), evergreen, prefers acid soil, sun or shade, foliage is darker green in shade areas.

Black Locust (Robinia pseudocacia), easy to grow, prefers sun, shallow rooted and easily damaged by winds, brittle wood, suckers badly and thorny.

Sassafras (sarrafras albidum) grows in poor soil if well drained. Tea can be made from young tender roots.

Silverbell (Halesia diptera), grows in sun or shade, under moist conditions of woodland soils. Good substitute for dogwood, but, may be difficult to obtain.

Further listing of Shrubs and Small Trees, Vines, Easily Grown La. Wild Flowers for Shade Area, Easily Grown Louisiana Wild Flowers for Sunny Areas, and Easily Grown Louisiana Wild Flowers for Wet or Damp Areas may be found in "Louisiana Trees, Shrubs, Vines and Wildflowers" as compiled by Dwight Hall and Neil Odenwald, Extension Horticulturists, for 1963 Home and Garden Week Program.

The Fifth District Garden Center has a copy of this on hand, or you may obtain it from L.S.U. Extension Service, Baton Rouge, La.

Daylily Plants Check Erosion

By AUDREY DAWSON
DAYLILIES

The daylily is a plant that can do a job of beauty as well as conservation in Louisiana. Daylilies can be used alone or in combination with other plants to control erosion on ditch banks, roadbanks, and other areas where erosion is a problem. The "spreading" daylilies are the ones to use on roadbanks. This is the type often found growing around abandoned homesites. Areas for digging should be selected when the daylilies have spread and formed a large mat of plants. An advantage of using these daylilies is their low requirements in fertilization, spraying or other care. Plants that develop in this environment have developed hardiness and need little maintenance.

School bells will be ringing again soon and it's a good time for parents to remind themselves of some important facts to help the children to become better citizens. Honor the teachers of your children and teach them to honor them. Don't condone the faults of your children through a misguided sense of loyalty. Endorse decency in the dress of your daughter, dignity in the dress of your son.

Conduct your own affairs, Mr. & Mrs. Parent, in such a manner as to set an example worthy of imitation by your child.

Make the home a sanctuary of love and devotion. Teach your children respect for the law and keep them from the championship of those who disrespect it.

H. D. COUNCIL MEMBERS

Mrs. E. W. Earl, President of the Ouachita Parish Home Demonstration Council, reminds you, Mrs. Council Member, of the important meeting Friday, at 10:00 a.m. Definite arrangements for the parish fair will be made so be sure to make plans to attend and help with the decisions.

Important changes in the constitution will be voted upon at this meeting. Other important plans and activities for the future will be discussed, so come and give your assistance to your council work.

FREEZING BULLETIN

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, have more vegetables to put in your food freezer, then be sure to call the Agricultural Extension Service office and get the newest copy of our bulletin, "Freezing Fruits and Vegetables." There are some major changes in the methods and blanching time. For instance one of the changes in blanching is to cover the vessels and start counting time immediately after putting the product in boiling water. It is most important that the directions for quantity be followed closely. Not more than one pound of vegetables per gallon of boiling water.

A section has been added giving recommendations for care of frozen foods in case of power failure, with a warning regarding re-freezing of foods.

HOME AND GARDEN WEEK

There were 42 homemakers from Ouachita who attended Home and Garden week on the LSU campus last week. Home Demonstration Club members' names ommited from a previous list were: Mrs. W. J. Dunn, from Claiborne Club; Mrs. W. L. Bonnette and Mrs. J. E. Tolbird from Okaloosa Club and Mrs. Elbert Moore, McClendon Club. It was most informational, as well as, an enjoyable activity for this group of homemakers.

It was good to meet and visit with homemakers from other parishes of the state. A great big thanks to the homemakers from our neighboring parishes Morehouse, West Carroll, East Carroll, Tensas and others who told me how much they enjoy reading my column each week.

HINTS TO HOMEMAKERS

Floor materials that have excellent resistance to grease are ceramic tile, vinyl and vinyl asbestos. Linoleum and special linoleum tile rate next. If the family room includes the kitchen, and rubber or asphalt tile is used, the floor should be of the grease resistant type. Regular cork tile is not recommended for the kitchen. Several of the above mentioned tiles are available in cork tone patterns and should not be confused with the regular or vinyl finished cork.

A THOUGH: The secret of happy living is not to do what you like, but to like what you do.

Long Will Introduce Bill Soon

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said Saturday he will introduce a bill shortly to cancel the investment credit tax plan passed in 1962 to stimulate the economy.

Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the system is not needed during an overheated economic period when the U.S. is faced with a long war in Viet Nam.

He said the move will reduce inflationary pressures which have led the Federal Reserve board and other institutions to boost interest rates in recent months. With some of the pressure removed he said, "the Federal Reserve Board should lower rates to let home owners and working people borrow on reasonable terms."

The investment credit system was — with the income tax cuts in 1964 — one of the major proposals developed under the Kenedy administration to stimulate economic expansion. It permits industres to deduct from their tax bills seven per cent of the cost of new capital investments in machinery and other facilities geared for production of goods.

Long supported the investment credit provisions in 1962 but he said that, "those who are now benefitting from this program are in an advantageous position to draw off available funds from the money market. They should not have this added advantage."

His bill would suspend the tax credits indefinitely. The legislation, he said, would amount to a tax increase but its effect would be to induce businesses to postpone long-range expansion plans.

Long called the interest rates ordered by the Federal Reserve Board, "nothing less than a national scandal", and noted that costs of borrowing money under the Johnson administration are higher than at any point in the administration of Herbert Hoover.

Long called the interest rates ordered by the Federal Reserve Board, "nothing less than a national scandal", and noted that costs of borrowing money under the Johnson administration are higher than at any point in the administration of Herbert Hoover.

"This is a credit economy for all of its people — not just those associated with banks and banking," Long said. "If the president wishes, he can continue to say he has no control over a board (the Federal Reserve) appointed by him but we of the Congress have no such excuse."

He added, "The Federal Reserve reports to the Congress and we are directly and legally responsible for its conduct. As one who supported investment credit, applaud it as a maganificent weapon to do the job it was intended to do."

Now that the economy is overheated, he said, Congress should take steps to reduce the level of expansion and borrowing.

He said he will also propose other legislation soon to help reserve the flow of American gold abroad and strengthen other aspects of the nation's economy to help the struggle in Viet Nam.

Chattanooga To Get Two Newspapers

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) —Chattanooga's two daily newspapers began separate publishing operations Saturday for the first time in a quarter of a century.

Newspaper readers will have a choice of today's local publications for the first time since 1942. Monday they will find two evening newspapers available.

These developments are results of what is believed to be the first termination of a joint operating agreement in American newspaper history.

In the first announcement three months ago of plans to end joint business and printing operations, publisher Roy McDonald said the evening Chattanooga News-Free Press would add a Sunday newspaper.

The next morning, publisher Ruth S. Golden of the Morning Chattanooga Times announced plans to add an evening newspaper, subsequently named the Chattanooga Post.

Big Colchicums For Fall Beauty

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

September Wonders

The bulbs of the autumn-flowering crocuses and the big colchicums will be in the seed and bulb stores shortly. If you do not find them there, then order the catalogues of such plant and bulb specialists as John J. Riordan, Box 394 Farmington, Michgan, and Oakhurst Gardens, Box 444, Arcadia, California, right away. By mid-August, we can expect the arrival of these bulbs from Holland, and they ought to be planted after an overnight soak in water.

Sometimes even the ten-cent stores offer the little lavender Crocus zonatus. This tough little wild crocus from Asia Minor and the Lebanon where the famous cedars grew is one of the very easiest crocuses anyone can have in his garden. Plant the small flat corms four or five inches deep in good soil with a little bone meal, and they will flower there for years. In five or six years, you may have to dig and divide them. The light lavender flowers with yellow throats are not big, but each corm produces a small eruption of them in September.

The next easiest and one of the most dazzling crocuses is Crocus speciosus. We are compelled to use Latin names with these crocuses because there is no well established common name, and they are listed in catalogues this way.

There are several named varieties of Crocus speciosus. They run to bright blue-violets and there is one pure white variety. When they bloom just as the hard frosts come, you will be astonished at the four to five-inch flowers that almost match the November sky in color.

If you receive the above-mentioned and other rare bulb catalogues, you will run into the winter-flowering crocuses, too. Crocuses in fall and winter! Yes; there are more kinds of fall and winter crocuses than there is of those common Dutch crocuses we see every spring. We are just so far behind in our knowledge of the fine flowers we could grow here in the South that most people never even heard of winter crocuses. In a later column, we shall discuss them.

The big flowered colchicums come from strangely shaped corms . . . some as big as your fist. Each of these strange blobs of plant life is covered with a beautiful brown covering like that which covers tulip bulbs. When you plant colchicums, be sure to stick the pointed part of the corm straight down into the soil. From the bottom of this point will arise the flowers. They will use up some of the strength of the corm, and then the big leaves will come out in late January and begin to store up strength in a new corm for next year.

You may set some of your colchicums on your desk or window sill and watch them bloom with no soil or water. Then you can plant the corms in the ground. If you will soak the corms you use in the house overnight every night or so, the flowers will be bigger. There will be no green in the flower stems, so little moisture will escape through the stems.

ENGLISH TUDOR: The well-earned reputation of the English Tudor architectural style for solid construction is reflected in this modified version, which has a look of strength as well as more than 2200 square feet of living space in its 1½ floors.

Living Space In English Tudor

By ANDY LANG

But here's one that will fit on a fairly narrow lot. It's a version of the old English Tudor houses that dot the countryside from London to Liverpool to Plymouth.

Much of the distinctive charm of this 1½-story house comes from its triple-gable front view. The second floor rooms are roofed from front to rear instead of from side to side. Adding to the over-all effect is the interesting combination of exterior materials — smooth stucco, half timber and brick. Note, too, how the front entrance porch is weather-protected by a gable roof extension.

Using the F.H.A. minimum side yard aggregate requirements of 10', this home, without garage, could be built on a 50-foot-wide lot. With a one-car garage, as shown in the first-floor plan, only a 60-foot lot would be needed.

Usually, in a narrow-lot house, a foyer is difficult to provide, as is good circulation. Both are designed in here by architect Rudolph A. Matern with a minimum of wasted hall space. Even though the foyer is not centrally located, but is at the left, the traffic pattern is excellent. The formal living room-dining room area, the kitchen and the bedroom sector each can be entered directly from the foyer.

The sunken living room is full of interesting details. There are two nostalgic window seats, one on each side of a corner fireplace, which has a high, timber mantel. The ceiling is cathedraled and beamed, and there is a see-through grill to a second-floor studio room. Beyond the living room is a dining room, with corner windows at right angles and with accessibility to the kitchen and a private porch.

The kitchen has a full service area as well as a breakfast section. Stub walls and brick-patterned resilient floor tiles set aside the eating area so that it has the appearance of a separate room. Like the dining room, the kitchen also has an entrance to the porch.

There are three bedrooms on the first floor, along with 1½ baths. Located here, as in the homes of early America, is the stairway to the second floor. The bedroom hall contains an extra-sized linen closet — 9' long and of a depth to make access of all items simple.

On the second floor are two bedrooms, a bath and a generous amount of closet space. But the big feature is a studio with a cathedral ceiling and roof skylight. While designed as a studio, it can, of course, be used as a study area, recreation room or even a sixth bedroom.

The Tudor style, which had its beginnings during the reign of the English House of Tudor, always has been noted for exceptionally sturdy construction. This one is no exception. But its modest size keeps construction costs at a minimum for the space provided. There are 1500 square feet of living area on the first floor, not including the porch and garage — and 731 additional square feet on the second floor.

A full study of this architect - designed House of the Week may be obtained by writing THE HOUSE OF THE WEEK, c-o the Monroe Morning World, Monroe, La., and enclosing 50 cents to cover cost of handling and mailing. Please specify House Plan G-51.

Protect Woods Wild Flowers

By MRS. JOHN TOLAR

We are so tempted to help ourselves to wild plant materials for our own gardens, without giving a thought to the outcome of the plants existence. It is so important to keep in mind all those wonderful tips given by Dwight Hall and Neil Odenwald, L.S.U. horticulturists. Hope you enjoyed last week's column and clipped it for reference.

The first tip is to leave this transplanting to the expert — the nurseryman. He will know better than anyone else about how to place native materials in your garden. But, if you do try your luck, you should keep in mind that it is your moral obligation to preserve our native plant materials. There are some plants listed that we should definitely purchase from the nursery — if possible — or gather seeds instead of plants. These are plants on the Conservation List of Louisiana. These were adopted at Baton Rouge, Louisiana, at a meeting, August 12, 1954. They are:

1. American Holly — Ilex Opace
2. Wild Azaleas — Rhododendron Canoscens
3. Birdfoot Violet — Viola Pedata (foot-like)
4. Bloodroot — Sanguinaris Also called Red Pucoon.
5. Closed Gentian — Gentiana Andrewsii (For Botanical artists and engraver)
6. Dogwood — Cornus florida (flowering).
7. Gayfeather — Liatris or laciniara, several species. Also known as Button Snakeroot, Blazing Star.
8. Lady's Slipper — Cypripedium parvifloorum (small flowered) var. pubescens (pubescent).
9. Jack-in-the-Pulpit — arisaema triphylium (large leaved) Indian turnio or dragon arum.
10. Cowcumber Magnolia — Magnolia macrophylla (large leaved.)
11. Oak Leaf Hydrangea—Hydrangea quercifolia.
12. Pogonia Ophilglossidea, also known as beard flower.
13. Shooting Star — Dodecatheib Neadua (American Cowslip).
14. Indian Pink — Spigelia marilandica (or Maryland).
15. Pitcher Plant — Sarracenia Flava (Yellow)
16. Stuartia — Stuartia Malachodendron, Silky Camellia, Wild Camellia.
17. Solomon's Seal — Polygonatum biflorum (two flowered)
18. Trillium — Trillium ludovicaianum, or T.Viride (green). Also called Wakerobin or Birthroot.
19. Trout Lily — Erythronium Americanum. Genus also known as Dog's Tooth Violet or Fawn lily. Species also known as Yellow Adder's Tongue.
20. Yellow fringed orchid — Habenaria Ciliaris. Also known as orange plum (fringed).

List of Native Trees of Louisiana — as follows: Dogwood (cornus florida) likes acid soil, good drainage, full shade or partial sun. Difficult to transplant due to shallow feeder roots.

White Fringe Tree (chionanthus virginica), called Grancy-graybeard. Grows in full sun or partial shade in woodland type soil, good drainage necessary. Very difficult to obtain.

Redbud (cercis canadensis) likes well-drained soil (acid) slightly, prefers some shade. Easily grown from seed. Short-lived tree with a life span of 15-20 years.

Tuliptree (liriodendron tulipifera) Yellow Poplar; prefers low land, plenty moisture, but will survive where high water table exists.

American Holly (Ilex opaca), evergreen, prefers acid soil, sun or shade, foliage is darker green in shade areas.

Black Locust (Robinia pseudocacia), easy to grow, prefers sun, shallow rooted and easily damaged by winds, brittle wood, suckers badly and thorny.

Sassafras (sarrafras albidum) grows in poor soil if well drained. Tea can be made from young tender roots.

Silverbell (Halesia diptera), grows in sun or shade, under moist conditions of woodland soils. Good substitute for dogwood, but, may be difficult to obtain.

Further listing of Shrubs and Small Trees, Vines, Easily Grown La. Wild Flowers for Shade Area, Easily Grown Louisiana Wild Flowers for Sunny Areas, and Easily Grown Louisiana Wild Flowers for Wet or Damp Areas may be found in "Louisiana Trees, Shrubs, Vines and Wildflowers" as compiled by Dwight Hall and Neil Odenwald, Extension Horticulturists, for 1963 Home and Garden Week Program.

The Fifth District Garden Center has a copy of this on hand, or you may obtain it from L.S.U. Extension Service, Baton Rouge, La.

Daylily Plants Check Erosion

By AUDREY DAWSON DAYLILIES

The daylily is a plant that can do a job of beauty as well as conservation in Louisiana. Daylilies can be used alone or in combination with other plants to control erosion on ditch banks, roadbanks, and other areas where erosion is a problem. The "spreading" daylilies are the ones to use on roadbanks. This is the type often found growing around abandoned homesites. Areas for digging should be selected when the daylilies have spread and formed a large mat of plants. An advantage of using these daylilies is their low requirements in fertilization, spraying or other care. Plants that develop in this environment have developed hardiness and need little maintenance.

School bells will be ringing again soon and it's a good time for parents to remind themselves of some important facts to help the children to become better citizens. Honor the teachers of your children and teach them to honor them. Don't condone the faults of your children through a misguided sense of loyalty. Endorse decency in the dress of your daughter, dignity in the dress of your son.

Conduct your own affairs, Mr. & Mrs. Parent, in such a manner as to set an example worthy of imitation by your child.

Make the home a sanctuary of love and devotion. Teach your children respect for the law and keep them from the championship of those who disrespect it.

H. D. COUNCIL MEMBERS

Mrs. E. W. Earl, Presidept of the Ouachita Parish Home Demonstration Council, reminds you, Mrs. Council Member, of the important meeting Friday, at 10:00 a.m. Definite arrangements for the parish fair will be made so be sure to make plans to attend and help with the decisions.

Important changes in the constitution will be voted upon at this meeting. Other important plans and activities for the future will be discussed, so come and give your assistance to your council work.

FREEZING BULLETIN

If you, Mrs. Homemaker, have more vegetables to put in your food freezer, then be sure to call the Agricultural Extension Service office and get the newest copy of our bulletin, "Freezing Fruits and Vegetables." There are some major changes in the methods and blanching time. For instance one of the changes in blanching is to cover the vessels and start counting time immediately after putting the product in boiling water. It is most important that the directions for quantity be followed closely. Not more than one pound of vegetables per gallon of boiling water.

A section has been added giving recommendations for care of frozen foods in case of power failure, with a warning regarding re-freezing of foods.

HOME AND GARDEN WEEK

There were 42 homemakers from Ouachita who attended Home and Garden week on the LSU campus last week. Home Demonstration Club members' names ommited from a previous list were: Mrs. W. J. Dunn, from Claiborne Club; Mrs. W. L. Bonnette and Mrs. J. E. Tolbird from Okaloosa Club and Mrs. Elbert Moore, McClendon Club. It was most informational, as well as, an enjoyable activity for this group of homemakers.

It was good to meet and visit with homemakers from other parishes of the state. A great big thanks to the homemakers from our neighboring parishes, Morehouse, West Carroll, East Carroll, Tensas and others who told me how much they enjoy reading my column each week.

HINTS TO HOMEMAKERS

Floor materials that have excellent resistance to grease are ceramic tile, vinyl and vinyl asbestos. Linoleum and special linoleum tile rate next. If the family room includes the kitchen, and rubber or asphalt tile is used, the floor should be of the grease resistant type. Regular cork tile is not recommended for the kitchen. Several of the above mentioned tiles are available in cork tone patterns and should not be confused with the regular or vinyl finished cork.

A THOUGH: The secret of happy living is not to do what you like, but to like what you do.

Long Will Introduce Bill Soon

World Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., said Saturday he will introduce a bill shortly to cancel the investment credit tax plan passed in 1962 to stimulate the economy.

Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said the system is not needed during an overheated economic period when the U.S. is faced with a long war in Viet Nam.

He said the move will reduce inflationary pressures which have led the Federal Reserve board and other institutions to boost interest rates in recent months. With some of the pressure removed he said, "the Federal Reserve Board should lower rates to let home owners and working people borrow on reasonable terms."

The investment credit system was — with the income tax cuts in 1964 — one of the major proposals developed under the Kenedy administration to stimulate economic expansion. It permits industres to deduct from their tax bills seven per cent of the cost of new capital investments in machinery and other facilities geared for production of goods.

Long supported the investment credit provisions in 1962 but he said that, "those who are now benefitting from this program are in an advantageous position to draw off available funds from the money market. They should not have this added advantage."

His bill would suspend the tax credits indefinitely. The legislation, he said, would amount to a tax increase but its effect would be to induce businesses to postpone long-range expansion plans.

Long called the interest rates ordered by the Federal Reserve Board, "nothing less than a national scandal", and noted that costs of borrowing money under the Johnson administration are higher than at any point in the administration of Herbert Hoover.

Long called the interest rates ordered by the Federal Reserve Board, "nothing less than a national scandal", and noted that costs of borrowing money under the Johnson administration are higher than at any point in the administration of Herbert Hoover.

"This is a credit economy for all of its people — not just those associated with banks and banking," Long said. "If the president wishes, he can continue to say he has no control over a board (the Federal Reserve) appointed by him but we of the Congress have no such excuse."

He added, "The Federal Reserve reports to the Congress and we are directly and legally responsible for its conduct. As one who supported investment credit, applaud it as a maganificent weapon to do the job it was intended to do."

Now that the economy is overheated, he said, Congress should take steps to reduce the level of expansion and borrowing.

He said he will also propose other legislation soon to help reserve the flow of American gold abroad and strengthen other aspects of the nation's economy to help the struggle in Viet Nam.

Chattanooga To Get Two Newspapers

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) —Chattanooga's two daily newspapers began separate publishing operations Saturday for the first time in a quarter of a century.

Newspaper readers will have a choice of today's local publications for the first time since 1942. Monday they will find two evening newspapers available.

These developments are results of what is believed to be the first termination of a joint operating agreement in American newspaper history.

In the first announcement three months ago of plans to end joint business and printing operations, publisher Roy McDonald said the evening Chattanooga News-Free Press would add a Sunday newspaper.

The next morning, publisher Ruth S. Golden of the Morning Chattanooga Times announced plans to add an evening newspaper, subsequently named the Chattanooga Post.

Big Colchicums For Fall Beauty

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

September Wonders

The bulbs of the autumn-flowering crocuses and the big colchicums will be in the seed and bulb stores shortly. If you do not find them there, then order the catalogues of such plant and bulb specialists as John J. Riordan, Box 394 Farmington, Michgan, and Oakhurst Gardens, Box 444, Arcadia, California, right away. By mid-August, we can expect the arrival of these bulbs from Holland, and they ought to be planted after an overnight soak in water.

Sometimes even the ten-cent stores offer the little lavender Crocus zonatus. This tough little wild crocus from Asia Minor and the Lebanon where the famous cedars grew is one of the very easiest crocuses anyone can have in his garden. Plant the small flat corms four or five inches deep in good soil with a little bone meal, and they will flower there for years. In five or six years, you may have to dig and divide them. The light lavender flowers with yellow throats are not big, but each corm produces a small eruption of them in September.

The next easiest and one of the most dazzling crocuses is Crocus speciosus. We are compelled to use Latin names with these crocuses because there is no well established common name, and they are listed in catalogues this way.

There are several named varieties of Crocus speciosus. They run to bright blue-violets and there is one pure white variety. When they bloom just as the hard frosts come, you will be astonished at the four to five-inch flowers that almost match the November sky in color.

If you receive the above-mentioned and other rare bulb catalogues, you will run into the winter-flowering crocuses, too. Crocuses in fall and winter! Yes; there are more kinds of fall and winter crocuses than there is of those common Dutch crocuses we see every spring. We are just so far behind in our knowledge of the fine flowers we could grow here in the South that most people never even heard of winter crocuses. In a later column, we shall discuss them.

The big flowered colchicums come from strangely shaped corms . . . some as big as your fist. Each of these strange blobs of plant life is covered with a beautiful brown covering like that which covers tulip bulbs. When you plant colchicums, be sure to stick the pointed part of the corm straight down into the soil. From the bottom of this point will arise the flowers. They will use up some of the strength of the corm, and then the big leaves will come out in late January and begin to store up strength in a new corm for next year.

You may set some of your colchicums on your desk or window sill and watch them bloom with no soil or water. Then you can plant the corms in the ground. If you will soak the corms you use in the house overnight every night or so, the flowers will be bigger. There will be no green in the flower stems, so little moisture will escape through the stems.

JAMES A. BRADFORD

Municipal Plant Head Is Named

James A. Bradford, a veteran of 13 years with Monroe's municipal power plant, has been named superintendent, according to an announcement by David M. Kaplan, chairman of the Monroe Utilities Commission. He succeeds the late L. L. Nunley.

Bradford was born in Grayson and attended grammar schools in Clarks and Fairbanks; junior high in Sterlington, and graduated from Ouachita Parish High School in 1950. After which he attended Northeast Louisiana State College. After serving two years with the army in Korea, he joined the power plant as a maintenance man and has moved up through the ranks including jobs as instrument technician, results engineer, and became assistant superintendent last year.

Since his association with the power plant he has attended the following technical schools: Hays Instrument School, Michigan City, Ind., Republic Flow Meter School, Chicago, Bailey Meter School, Cleveland, and Westinghouse Turbine Generator School, Gulfport, Miss.

French L. Smith, general manager, Monroe Utilities Commission commented: "This is one of the most responsible jobs in our system. We are fortunate in having a person as dedicated and capable as Mr. Bradford, who has equipped himself for his job through many years experience and attendance at trade schools."

Bradford participates actively in civic affairs, currently serving as treasurer of the Minnie Ruffin School PTA, assistant coach for two minor league baseball clubs, past assistant Scoutmaster for Boy Scout Troup 128 and Cubmaster for Pack 133 for two years. He is a Mason, having membership in the West Monroe Lodge No. 419, F & A M.

He is married to the former Louise Williamson, Monroe, and the father of two boys and one girl. The Bradfords, who are members of St. Alban's Episcopal Church, reside at 1906 Medra Drive, Monroe.

Contract Signed By Britt Ekland

Somali Students Attack Embassy

Police reinforcements rushed to the embassy, along the Nile near the university, arrested 50 of the demonstrators and dispersed the others. Two policemen were reported hurt in the wild, 15-minute melee.

The demonstrations followed up rioting by independence-minded Somalis during President de Gaulle's visit this week to Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland, last bit of French empire in Africa.

Within minutes after the demonstrators here dispersed, heavy police cordons were set up on all streets leading to the embassy and additional guards were mounted at entrances to the embassy compound.

Virtually every window in the front of the embassy building was smashed and the street was littered with broken glass and debris thrown by the students, estimated to number more than 400. Four automobiles parked in front of the embassy building were damaged.

The demonstration was the first involving a foreign embassy in Cairo since the 1964 Thanksgiving Day attack by African students on the U.S. Embassy compound in protest of American participation in the rescue of whites threatened by Congo rebels. The John F. Kennedy Memorial Library was destroyed by fire in that attack. The building remains a blackened shell on the embassy grounds.

Milk Agency Forecasts No Increase

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana Milk Commission now says there will be no increase in the minimum prices that consumers pay for milk during the month of September.

In two previous statements this week, the commission said the retail price of milk was slated for a two-cent hike per gallon on Sept. 1 and then said, the increase would not come until mid-September.

In a statement Saturday, Jack Lord, assistant secretary of the commission, said the commission will meet in the second week of September to make some decisions relative to the recently-announced hike in the price the dairy farmers receive for raw milk.

Local Cemetery Being Restored

By DIANE TAYLOR
World Staff Writer

A lonely and nearly-forgotten cemetery in West Monroe, where it is said Confederate soldiers and slaves lie buried in unmarked graves, was almost ruined by vandals and neglect, before a group of citizens in 1965 began to restore the grounds.

Those who visit the graves of friends or relatives, even today, feel a certain detachment from the world, because the small cemetery is, in fact, off the highway. The burying ground, though, still serves a useful purpose as West Monroe's only free burial place.

The cemetery is said to be well over 100 years old and has a small amount of historical signifance because the grandson of one of Don Juan Filhiol's aides in the building of Fort Miro is buried in an above-the-ground vault there.

SHELL MARKS

A bronze plaque which was apparently stolen by vandals from the vault, stated that Hyppolite de La Baume, a grandson of Lt. Joseph de La Baume, who was Filhiol's aide in the building of the fort, is buried there. Shell marks were indented on the vault when target-practicers destroyed monuments at the cemetery. The holes shot into the vault are still visible.

Smith Cemetery, located outside the city limits of West Monroe on New Natchitoches Road, is still being restored. The process has been a demanding one, because the "grounds were in such bad shape," said Mrs. Hightower.

Adjoining a former gravel pit, the cemetery was left in an island when the gravel company moved out. Bluffs 40 feet deep were left on three sides of the cemetery, and rain quickly washed away much of the original two acres. Now no more than one and a half acres of the burial grounds remain.

ELECTED TRUSTEES

Six women were elected trustees of the cemetery in the restoration project — Mrs. Hightower, Mrs. Elbert Moore, Mrs. John Stennett, Mrs. Grace Freeman, Mrs. Frank Croft and Mrs. Emma Beeson. They began a drive to raise funds for a fence to encircle the grounds and for cleanup work.

Contractors sent bulldozers, loaders, trucks, tractors and loads of dirt. Large mounds of dirt leading from the highway to the cemetery grounds have been leveled. Trees have been removed, except for the cedars on the grounds, to make the upkeep an easier job. A levee has been constructed around the cemetery and four culverts were installed to carry off the rainfall. The parish police jury aided in getting the road to the cemetery rebuilt and widened, and erected a sign which prohibits garbage dumping and target shooting in the area. The sheriff's department has patrolled the area to keep the situation under control.

Money for the chain link fence was raised by contributions. Metal posts, filled with concrete, now separate the parking area from the cemetery plots. Loads of dirt and fill were donated to rebuild the cemetery, paint and grass seeds were supplied and poison was given to kill honeysuckle and wild bushes.

NAMES LISTED

A sign was donated which lists the names of the trustees and advises that those who wish information should contact them.

"We've been so fortunate," said Mrs. Moore, "in finding people and business firms willing to help us in the project. We appreciate every donation, large or small."

"Before this project was begun," Mrs. Hightower said, "we sent a letter to a minister friend in Dallas, Tex., and also to our local ministers, asking that they help us pray for the restoration of this cemetery where so many of our loved ones are buried. Our prayers were answered and we were granted all we asked and a lot more."

Two lawn mowers have been given and contractors are now building a block house to keep the lawn tools in. The ladies are attempting to establish a mowing fund for the cemetery, and shrubbery will be planted when fall arrives. Donations will be taken at P. O. Box 1024, West Monroe, or from the trustees.

The land, which once was a plantation site, has been set aside as a cemetery, and there is no personal ownership of the burial grounds. "We just single out a plot when the family asks that they be allowed to bury someone there," Mrs. Hightower said. "We don't give plots before they are needed."

THE BRONZE PLAQUE on the vault of Hyppolite de La Baume, a grandson of Lt. Joseph de La Baume, who was Don Juan Filhiol's side in the building of Fort Miro, has been stolen from the gravesite in Smith Cemetery, West Monroe's only free burial place. Some of the brick work of the vault was also taken away before trustees restored the century-old cemetery. Mrs. Frank X. Cline Sr., of Monroe, granddaughter of Hyppolite de La Baume, and her son, Dr. Frank X. Cline Jr., are in the process of restoring the vault and replacing the plaque. Mrs. Cline said there is no known record of the burial place of Lt. de La Baume. Filhiol was buried in a plot which is now on Filhiol Avenue, West Monroe. (Staff photo by Ronald F. Heflin)

LBJ Sets Challenge For Demos

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. (AP) — President Johnson on Saturday challenged Americans unhappy with inflation to face up to "the problems of prosperity" or "go join the Republican party."

"When we have full employment people can buy more and prices go up," Johnson said. "I'd much rather have the problems of prosperity of the 1960s than the problems of poverty of the 1930s."

"If a man has nothing to do all day long but complain about inflation and worry, and worry his family, he ought to go join the Republican party because when they get in, the problems of prosperity will be gone," Johnson said.

It was more partisan than any speech Johnson made since leaving Washington on Friday. He visited Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma on Friday on what was billed as a nonpolitical trip, before going to the ranch to celebrate his 58th birthday Saturday.

"You never have to worry about getting too much money for cattle under a Republican administration," Johnson told the Westerners. He recalled selling a calf for 3.5 cents a pound in the 1930s.

He said he realized that people were concerned because the cost of living has increased 2.5 per cent recently.

"But under President (Dwight D.) Eisenhower it went up 4 per cent but wages went down."

He said prices had gone up 10 per cent since 1960 but wages had increased 20 per cent.

"That leaves 10 per cent to pay the increase and 10 per cent more to take home to mama and the kids," the President said.

"Profits are up 83 per cent," he said. "Yet you read the Wall Street Journal and you'd think they need an extra supply of aspirin."

He held Denver, Colo., up as an example of a city "that has the fairest laws in the nation."

"Instead of building ghettos they've been planting grass," he said. Later on, the President added, "If we could all only do what Denver has done to clean up these rats' nests."

He praised the Democratic 89th Congress as "one of the bright chapters of our history" and asked his Western Democratic audience for support of his position on inflation.

"Don't go out and join the mob and help do the lynching," he said. "Help us work out these problems."

Beauty vs. Utility Is Plight Of Cities

By TRAVIS MAYO
World Staff Writer

Those ancient Romans were famous for their roads because when one got underway neither Greek nor high water could halt its progress. Roman roads were remarkable for preserving a straight course from point to point regardless of obstacles which might have been easily avoided.

Even in modern Rome when the Via Nazionale was to be constructed through the heart of the city to connect the railway station with St. Peter's Cathedral, the Villa Aldobrandini with its historic architecture had to be destroyed because it stood in the way.

To the Louisiana Council for the Vieux Carre the men of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce are dirty Romans because they condone the plan to run an elevated riverfront expressway "right smack through the French Quarter."

Non-New Orleanians can sit back, read the charges hurled back and forth, read the broadsides and the attempts at poetic expression and chuckle about it all. But after the laughter must come serious reflection for Monroyans because many of the problems on both sides now faced in New Orleans will soon be coming our way.

1. The Civic Center has breathed new life into the area around it.

2. The maintenance of a strong downtown section, and the reinforcement of its commerical and cultural attractions, is generally seen to be healthy for the city as a whole.

3. The substandard areas beyond the downtown area should give pause to anyone interested in the image of the central area. The effort should be to rehabilitate all areas rather than push the character of a "backdoor" on to some areas.

SYMBOL OF LIFE

4. The river, symbolically the lifeline of the city, should be seen as something more than a commercial generator. The riverfront could be the showplace of the city.

5. The development of the river frontage along the downtown area will be an urban asset and should not simply be a corridor for traffic.

6. Any traffic artery along the river should not ignore west bank traffic or tend to strangle transportation by being too small.

7. Any development of downtown must provide for access and agress to the civic auditorium.

8. An evacuation route via a limited access system must be available in times of natural or nuclear disaster.

9. The price of downtown parking must, either through subsidy or other means, be kept well below existing and competitive facilities within the central area.

10. A downtown complex should form about an open urban space or mall. Commercial uses would flank this and apartments and town houses would occur near the river. The mall may either be elevated or at grade.

Parallels between problems and desires in New Orleans and Monroe are all the more pointed in light of Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard's statement last Tuesday that the city has "a master plan to build an expressway along the water front."

Persons familiar with this master plan are no doubt vitally interested in how other cities are progressing with their urban renewal plans. New Orleans officials consider the revitalization of the downtown area as "an expanded image for the city" as a whole.

Because the proposed riverfront expressway in New Orleans has brought about such controversy, the school of architecture of Tulane University has conducted a study of the expressway route and has offered an alternate proposal — one that would avoid the historic French Quarter.

GREATEST HAPPINESS

The Tulane study has made the expressway a case of the utilitarian versus the beautiful. The Louisiana Department of Highways, the New Orleans City Planning Commission and the New Orleans Traffic Engineering Department have been depicted as utilitarians who determine the worth of anything solely by its utility; by how well it brings about the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

The Louisiana Council for the Vieux Carre, Urban America, Inc., and the American Institute of Architects have been depicted as lovers of beauty, of historic monuments and of aesthetic values.

"Feasibility is a word of much currency in New Orleans," the Tulane report states, adding later that "Economics is only one band of the whole spectrum of feasibility. If 'feasibility' is equated to 'cheapest' without due regard for humanistic values, we mock history and the whole process of man's progress through building what is right instead of what is cheapest."

The Tulane study points out how the tendency is to focus on transportation needs often to the neglect of the unique character and historic interest of the city, its cultural life and the pschology of its people, aesthetics and scope for growth.

Vieux Carre residents, on one hand, argue that the purpose of city planning is to make the city more like home for its residents. They, therefore, oppose any plan that would separate the Vieux Carre, their city's living room, from its creator, the great river.

Officials connected with the proposed riverfront expressway are quoted in the report as responding that "any delays which would prevent this proposal from meeting the 1972 completion deadline, now effective for Interstate Highway projects, must at all cost be avoided."

Pros and cons of the problem and similarities or differences in Monroe's case cannot be argued in this space. What is important for Monroyans is the mood behind the arguments. Some people feel that those who would be architects of their existence, who would impose a design upon nature are doomed to failure. They prefer to just take what comes, to accept what life offers without challenge, to live a life without plan or design and to accept with charity what cruel civilization inflicts.

Others are not content to just escape by luck or chance whatever happens accidentally. Nature and chance can build a city that will be a monster. Intelligent planning can build a city that offers both utility and aesthetic beauty.

City officials in Monroe appear to be intelligent planners, as a peep into the plans for downtown renewal will show. We can be thankful then that they see more importance in having coal enough to keep one room warm all winter than that four rooms should be heated for a day.

Iran To Send Syria Vaccine

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran agreed Saturday to send one million doses of anticholera vaccine to Syria to help prevent the disease spreading there from Iraq, a Health Ministry spokesman announced.

Iran, the major vaccine producer in the Middle East, has already sent one million doses to Iraq, where the disease broke out Aug. 12.

U.S. Taxes To Increase By Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal taxes will increase on Jan. 1 by about a billion dollars even if the Johnson administration doesn't seek an income tax hike to help fight the war in Viet Nam or to stem inflation.

That's the approximate size of the bite increased Social Security taxes will take next year to pay for increases in retirement, disability and other benefits and for the new health care program for the aged which went into effect last July 1.

Some 75 per cent of the increase will be applied to the medicare program.

This, however, is only one of five changes in the tax laws which go into effect on New Year's Day. The others won't change the amount of taxes to be paid but will spell out in greater detail how and who they should be paid.

The bite in Social Security taxes next year won't be as severe as the one last Jan. 1 when both the tax rate and the basic earnings on which it's collected went up.

Only the rate will rise next January — from 4.2 per cent to 4.4 per cent each for the worker and his employer on the first $6,600 in earnings. This will raise the maximum tax on each by $13.20.

Social Security taxes for the self-employed also will rise from 6.15 per cent to 6.4 per cent — or a maximum of $16.20 — on the first $6,600 in earnings.

Thus, the maximum payment will increase from this year's $277.20 to $290.40 in 1967 for each worker and his employer and from $405.90 to $422.40 for the self-employed.

Last year the maximum payment was $174 each by the worker and his employer based on earnings of $4,800 and a tax rate of 3.625 per cent. The law which established the medicare program also set up a separate trust fund to pay for it. Consequently the Treasury Department and the Social Security Administration show separate tax rates for the basic coverage and for medicare.

This year, a person who pays the maximum tax of $277.20 will pay $23.10 of it for the medicare trust fund based on a medicare tax of .35 per cent.

Next year the medicare tax rate will increase to .5 per cent while the basic rate will rise from 3.85 to 3.9 per cent. Thus, $33 of next year's maximum payment will go for medicare.

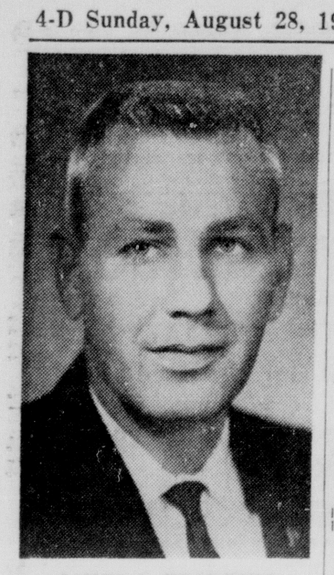
The maximum paid by both a worker and his employer will rise to $323.40 in 1969-72; to $356.40 in 1973-75; to $359.70 in 1976-79; to $366.30 in 1980-86, and to $372.90 in 1987 and thereafter.

Other tax changes which go into effect Jan. 1 result from the Tax Adjustment Act passed by Congress early this year which provided the first graduated withholding in American history. New withholding schedules ranging from 14 to 30 per cent went into effect last May 1.

Once change will permit some taxpayers — those with a substantial total of itemized deductions — to claim withholding allowances which will have the same effect as increasing the number of exemptions.

Taxpayers now claim a $600 exemption for themselves and each of their dependents but can't claim any extra exemptions to reduce the amount of taxes withheld from their paychecks.

This new provision will have the same effect as permitting this extra exemption and will give the taxpayers more take-home pay. But it will reduce the refund he would normally receive after filing his income tax return.



JAMES A. BRADFORD

Municipal Plant Head Is Named

James A. Bradford, a veteran of 13 years with Monroe's municipal power plant, has been named superintendent, according to an announcement by David M. Kaplan, chairman of the Monroe Utilities Commission. He succeeds the late L. L. Nunley.

Bradford was born in Grayson and attended grammar schools in Clarks and Fairbanks; junior high in Sterlington, and graduated from Ouachita Parish High School in 1950. After which he attended Northeast Louisiana State College. After serving two years with the army in Korea, he joined the power plant as a maintenance man and has moved up through the ranks including jobs as instrument technician, results engineer, and became assistant superintendent last year.

Since his association with the power plant he has attended the following technical schools: Hays Instrument School, Michigan City, Ind., Republic Flow Meter School, Chicago, Bailey Meter School, Cleveland, and Westinghouse Turbine Generator School, Gulfport, Miss.

French L. Smith, general manager, Monroe Utilities Commission commented: "This is one of the most responsible jobs in our system. We are fortunate in having a person as dedicated and capable as Mr. Bradford, who has equipped himself for his job through many years experience and attendance at trade schools."

Bradford participates actively in civic affairs, currently serving as treasurer of the Minnie Ruffin School PTA, assistant coach for two minor league baseball clubs, past assistant Scoutmaster for Boy Scout Troup 128 and Cubmaster for Pack 133 for two years. # Somali Students Attack Embassy

Police reinforcements rushed to the embassy, along the Nile near the university, arrested 50 of the demonstrators and dispersed the others. Two policemen were reported hurt in the wild, 15-minute melee.

The demonstrations followed up rioting by independence-minded Somalis during President de Gaulle's visit this week to Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland, last bit of French empire in Africa.

Within minutes after the demonstrators here dispersed, heavy police cordons were set up on all streets leading to the embassy and additional guards were mounted at entrances to the embassy compound.

Virtually every window in the front of the embassy building was smashed and the street was littered with broken glass and debris thrown by the students, estimated to number more than 400. Four automobiles parked in front of the embassy building were damaged.

The demonstration was the first involving a foreign embassy in Cairo since the 1964 Thanksgiving Day attack by African students on the U.S. Embassy compound in protest of American participation in the rescue of whites threatened by Congo rebels. The John F. Kennedy Memorial Library was destroyed by fire in that attack. The building remains a blackened shell on the embassy grounds.

Milk Agency Forecasts No Increase

BATON ROUGE (AP) — The Louisiana Milk Commission now says there will be no increase in the minimum prices that consumers pay for milk during the month of September.

In two previous statements this week, the commission said the retail price of milk was slated for a two-cent hike per gallon on Sept. 1 and then said, the increase would not come until mid-September.

In a statement Saturday, Jack Lord, assistant secretary of the commission, said the commission will meet in the second week of September to make some decisions relative to the recently-announced hike in the price the dairy farmers receive for raw milk.

Local Cemetery Being Restored

By DIANE TAYLOR
World Staff Writer

A lonely and nearly-forgotten cemetery in West Monroe, where it is said Confederate soldiers and slaves lie buried in unmarked graves, was almost ruined by vandals and neglect, before a group of citizens in 1965 began to restore the grounds.

Those who visit the graves of friends or relatives, even today, feel a certain detachment from the world, because the small cemetery is, in fact, off the highway. The burying ground, though, still serves a useful purpose as West Monroe's only free burial place.

The cemetery is said to be well over 100 years old and has a small amount of historical signifance because the grandson of one of Don Juan Filhiol's aides in the building of Fort Miro is buried in an above-the-ground vault there.

SHELL MARKS

A bronze plaque which was apparently stolen by vandals from the vault, stated that Hyppolite de La Baume, a grandson of Lt. Joseph de La Baume, who was Filhiol's aide in the building of the fort, is buried there. Shell marks were indented on the vault when target-practicers destroyed monuments at the cemetery. The holes shot into the vault are still visible.

Smith Cemetery, located outside the city limits of West Monroe on New Natchitoches Road, is still being restored. The process has been a demanding one, because the "grounds were in such bad shape," said Mrs. Hightower.

Adjoining a former gravel pit, the cemetery was left in an island when the gravel company moved out. Bluffs 40 feet deep were left on three sides of the cemetery, and rain quickly washed away much of the original two acres. Now no more than one and a half acres of the burial grounds remain.

ELECTED TRUSTEES

Six women were elected trustees of the cemetery in the restoration project — Mrs. Hightower, Mrs. Elbert Moore, Mrs. John Stennett, Mrs. Grace Freeman, Mrs. Frank Croft and Mrs. Emma Beeson. They began a drive to raise funds for a fence to encircle the grounds and for cleanup work.

Contractors sent bulldozers, loaders, trucks, tractors and loads of dirt. Large mounds of dirt leading from the highway to the cemetery grounds have been leveled. Trees have been removed, except for the cedars on the grounds, to make the upkeep an easier job. A levee has been constructed around the cemetery and four culverts were installed to carry off the rainfall. The parish police jury aided in getting the road to the cemetery rebuilt and widened, and erected a sign which prohibits garbage dumping and target shooting in the area. The sheriff's department has patrolled the area to keep the situation under control.

Money for the chain link fence was raised by contributions. Metal posts, filled with concrete, now separate the parking area from the cemetery plots. Loads of dirt and fill were donated to rebuild the cemetery, paint and grass seeds were supplied and poison was given to kill honeysuckle and wild bushes.

NAMES LISTED

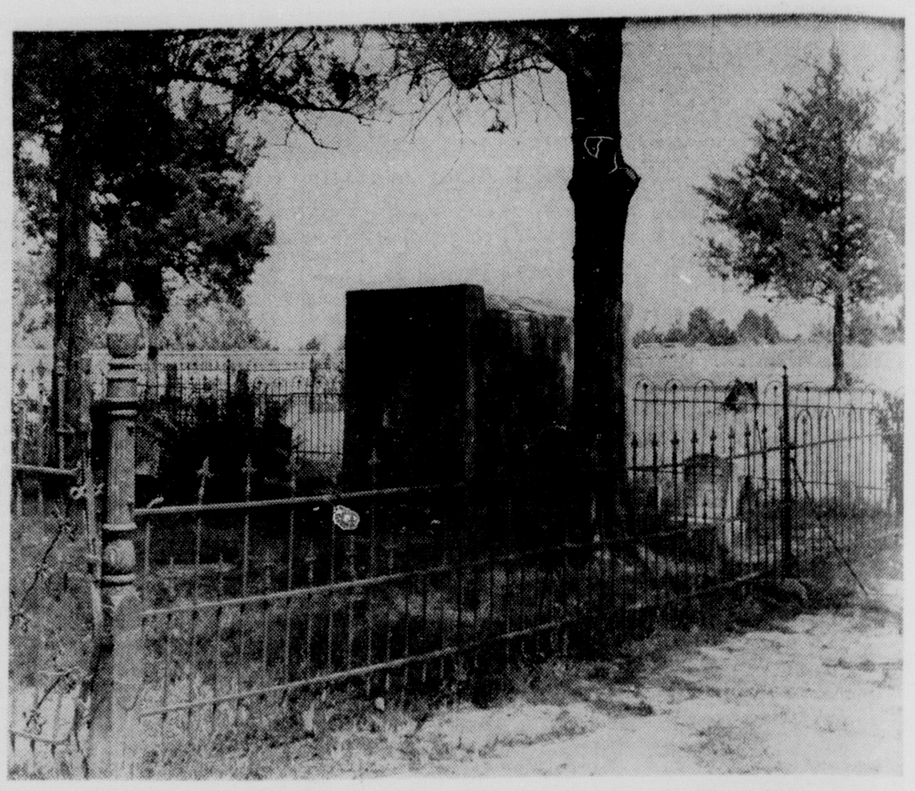
A sign was donated which lists the names of the trustees and advises that those who wish information should contact them.

"We've been so fortunate," said Mrs. Moore, "in finding people and business firms willing to help us in the project. We appreciate every donation, large or small."

"Before this project was begun," Mrs. Hightower said, "we sent a letter to a minister friend in Dallas, Tex., and also to our local ministers, asking that they help us pray for the restoration of this cemetery where so many of our loved ones are buried. Our prayers were answered and we were granted all we asked and a lot more."

Two lawn mowers have been given and contractors are now building a block house to keep the lawn tools in. The ladies are attempting to establish a mowing fund for the cemetery, and shrubbery will be planted when fall arrives. Donations will be taken at P. O. Box 1024, West Monroe, or from the trustees.

The land, which once was a plantation site, has been set aside as a cemetery, and there is no personal ownership of the burial grounds. "We just single out a plot when the family asks that they be allowed to bury someone there," Mrs. Hightower said. "We don't give plots before they are needed."



THE BRONZE PLAQUE on the vault of Hyppolite de La Baume, a grandson of Lt. Joseph de La Baume, who was Don Juan Filhiol's side in the building of Fort Miro, has been stolen from the gravesite in Smith Cemetery, West Monroe's only free burial place. Some of the brick work of the vault was also taken away before trustees restored the century-old cemetery. Mrs. Frank X. Cline Sr., of Monroe, granddaughter of Hyppolite de La Baume, and her son, Dr. Frank X. Cline Jr., are in the process of restoring the vault and replacing the plaque. Mrs. Cline said there is no known record of the burial place of Lt. de La Baume. Filhiol was buried in a plot which is now on Filhiol Avenue, West Monroe. (Staff photo by Ronald F. Heflin)

LBJ Sets Challenge For Demos

GLACIER NATIONAL PARK, Mont. (AP) — President Johnson on Saturday challenged Americans unhappy with inflation to face up to "the problems of prosperity" or "go join the Republican party."

"When we have full employment people can buy more and prices go up," Johnson said. "I'd much rather have the problems of prosperity of the 1960s than the problems of poverty of the 1930s."

"If a man has nothing to do all day long but complain about inflation and worry, and worry his family, he ought to go join the Republican party because when they get in, the problems of prosperity will be gone," Johnson said.

It was more partisan than any speech Johnson made since leaving Washington on Friday. He visited Idaho, Colorado and Oklahoma on Friday on what was billed as a nonpolitical trip, before going to the ranch to celebrate his 58th birthday Saturday.

"You never have to worry about getting too much money for cattle under a Republican administration," Johnson told the Westerners. He recalled selling a calf for 3.5 cents a pound in the 1930s.

"I sold one yesterday for 28 cents a pound," he said.

"A lot of people are worried about inflation," Johnson said. "I'm worrying too and we're going to do everything we can to solve this problem."

He said he realized that people were concerned because the cost of living has increased 2.5 per cent recently.

"But under President (Dwight D.) Eisenhower it went up 4 per cent but wages went down."

He said prices had gone up 10 per cent since 1960 but wages had increased 20 per cent.

"That leaves 10 per cent to pay the increase and 10 per cent more to take home to mama and the kids," the President said.

"Profits are up 83 per cent," he said. "Yet you read the Wall Street Journal and you'd think they need an extra supply of aspirin."

He held Denver, Colo., up as an example of a city "that has the fairest laws in the nation."

"Instead of building ghettos they've been planting grass," he said. Later on, the President added, "If we could all only do what Denver has done to clean up these rats' nests."

He praised the Democratic 89th Congress as "one of the bright chapters of our history" and asked his Western Democratic audience for support of his position on inflation.

"Don't go out and join the mob and help do the lynching," he said. "Help us work out these problems."

He asked the Democrats to be loyal to their party and not to individuals such as himself, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, or Senate Democratic majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

Those ancient Romans were famous for their roads because when one got underway neither Greek nor high water could halt its progress. Roman roads were remarkable for preserving a straight course from point to point regardless of obstacles which might have been easily avoided.

Even in modern Rome when the Via Nazionale was to be constructed through the heart of the city to connect the railway station with St. Peter's Cathedral, the Villa Aldobrandini with its historic architecture had to be destroyed because it stood in the way.

To the Louisiana Council for the Vieux Carre the men of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce are dirty Romans because they condone the plan to run an elevated riverfront expressway "right smack through the French Quarter."

Non-New Orleanians can sit back, read the charges hurled back and forth, read the broadsides and the attempts at poetic expression and chuckle about it all. But after the laughter must come serious reflection for Monroyans because many of the problems on both sides now faced in New Orleans will soon be coming our way.

A brief rundown of their problems will show how closely they correspond to our own. New Orleanians say:

1. The Civic Center has breathed new life into the area around it.

2. The maintenance of a strong downtown section, and the reinforcement of its commerical and cultural attractions, is generally seen to be healthy for the city as a whole.

3. The substandard areas beyond the downtown area should give pause to anyone interested in the image of the central area. The effort should be to rehabilitate all areas rather than push the character of a "backdoor" on to some areas.

SYMBOL OF LIFE

4. The river, symbolically the lifeline of the city, should be seen as something more than a commercial generator. The riverfront could be the showplace of the city.

5. The development of the river frontage along the downtown area will be an urban asset and should not simply be a corridor for traffic.

6. Any traffic artery along the river should not ignore west bank traffic or tend to strangle transportation by being too small.

7. Any development of downtown must provide for access and agress to the civic auditorium.

8. An evacuation route via a limited access system must be available in times of natural or nuclear disaster.

9. The price of downtown parking must, either through subsidy or other means, be kept well below existing and competitive facilities within the central area.

10. A downtown complex should form about an open urban space or mall. Commercial uses would flank this and apartments and town houses would occur near the river. The mall may either be elevated or at grade.

Paralleis between problems and desires in New Orleans and Monroe are all the more pointed in light of Monroe Mayor W. L. Howard's statement last Tuesday that the city has "a master plan to build an expressway along the water front."

Persons familiar with this master plan are no doubt vitally interested in how other cities are progressing with their urban renewal plans. New Orleans officials consider the revitalization of the downtown area as "an expanded image for the city" as a whole.

Because the proposed riverfront expressway in New Orleans has brought about such controversy, the school of architecture of Tulane University has conducted a study of the expressway route and has offered an alternate proposal — one that would avoid the historic French Quarter.

GREATEST HAPPINESS

The Tulane study has made the expressway a case of the utilitarian versus the beautiful. The Louisiana Department of Highways, the New Orleans City Planning Commission and the New Orleans Traffic Engineering Department have been depicted as utilitarians who determine the worth of anything solely by its utility; by how well it brings about the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

The Louisiana Council for the Vieux Carre, Urban America, Inc., and the American Institute of Architects have been depicted as lovers of beauty, of historic monuments and of aesthetic values.

"Feasibility is a word of much currency in New Orleans," the Tulane report states, adding later that "Economics is only one band of the whole spectrum of feasibility. If 'feasibility' is equated to 'cheapest' without due regard for humanistic values, we mock history and the whole process of man's progress through building what is right instead of what is cheapest."

The Tulane study points out how the tendency is to focus on transportation needs often to the neglect of the unique character and historic interest of the city, its cultural life and the pschology of its people, aesthetics and scope for growth.

Vieux Carre residents, on one hand, argue that the purpose of city planning is to make the city more like home for its residents. They, therefore, oppose any plan that would separate the Vieux Carre, their city's living room, from its creator, the great river.

Officials connected with the proposed riverfront expressway are quoted in the report as responding that "any delays which would prevent this proposal from meeting the 1972 completion deadline, now effective for Interstate Highway projects, must at all cost be avoided."

Pros and cons of the problem and similarities or differences in Monroe's case cannot be argued in this space. What is important for Monroyans is the mood behind the arguments. Some people feel that those who would be architects of their existence, who would impose a design upon nature are doomed to failure. They prefer to just take what comes, to accept what life offers without challenge, to live a life without plan or design and to accept with charity what cruel civilization inflicts.

Others are not content to just escape by luck or chance whatever happens accidentally. Nature and chance can build a city that will be a monster. Intelligent planning can build a city that offers both utility and aesthetic beauty.

City officials in Monroe appear to be intelligent planners, as a peep into the plans for downtown renewal will show. We can be thankful then that they see more importance in having coal enough to keep one room warm all winter than that four rooms should be heated for a day.

Iran To Send Syria Vaccine

TEHRAN, Iran AP) — Iran agreed Saturday to send one million doses of anticholera vaccine to Syria to help prevent the disease spreading there from Iraq, a Health Ministry spokesman announced.

Iran, the major vaccine producer in the Middle East, has already sent one million doses to Iraq, where the disease broke out Aug. 12.

U.S. Taxes To Increase By Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal taxes will increase on Jan. 1 by about a billion dollars even if the Johnson administration doesn't seek an income tax hike to help fight the war in Viet Nam or to stem inflation.

That's the approximate size of the bite increased Social Security taxes will take next year to pay for increases in retirement, disability and other benefits and for the new health care program for the aged which went into effect last July 1.

Some 75 per cent of the increase will be applied to the medicare program.

This, however, is only one of five changes in the tax laws which go into effect on New Year's Day. The others won't change the amount of taxes to be paid but will spell out in greater detail how and when they should be paid.

The bite in Social Security taxes next year won't be as severe as the one last Jan. 1 when both the tax rate and the basic earnings on which it's collected went up.

Only the rate will rise next January — from 4.2 per cent to 4.4 per cent each for the worker and his employer on the first $6,600 in earnings. This will raise the maximum tax on each by $13.20.

Social Security taxes for the self-employed also will rise from 6.15 per cent to 6.4 per cent — or a maximum of $16.50 — on the first $6,600 in earnings.

Thus, the maximum payment will increase from this year's $277.20 to $290.40 in 1967 for each worker and his employer and from $405.90 to $422.40 for the self-employed.

Last year the maximum payment was $174 each by the worker and his employer based on earnings of $4,800 and a tax rate of 3.625 per cent. The law which established the medicare program also set up a separate trust fund to pay for it. Consequently the Treasury Department and the Social Security Administration show separate tax rates for the basic coverage and for medicare.

This year, a person who pays the maximum tax of $277.20 will pay $23.10 of it for the medicare trust fund based on a medicare tax of .35 per cent.

Next year the medicare tax rate will increase to .5 per cent while the basic rate will rise from 3.85 to 3.9 per cent. Thus, $33 of next year's maximum payment will go for medicare.

The maximum paid by both a worker and his employer will rise to $323.40 in 1969-72; to $356.40 in 1973-75; to $359.70 in 1976-79; to $366.30 in 1980-86, and to $372.90 in 1987 and thereafter.

Other tax changes which go into effect Jan. 1 result from the Tax Adjustment Act passed by Congress early this year which provided the first graduated withholding in American history. New withholding schedules ranging from 14 to 30 per cent went into effect last May 1.

Once change will permit some taxpayers — those with a substantial total of itemized deducations — to claim withholding allowances which will have the same effect as increasing the number of exemptions.

Taxpayers now claim a $600 exemption for themselves and each of their dependents but can't claim any extra exemptions to reduce the amount of taxes withheld from their paychecks.

This new provision will have the same effect as permitting this extra exemption and will give the taxpayers more take-home pay. But it will reduce the refund he would normally receive after filing his income tax return.

KATHY MOONEY

Northeast Beauty To Attend Meet

The Northeast Louisiana Contractors Association will insert a fluff of femininity into what tradionally has been a man's domain — the annual convention of the Louisiana State Council of The Associated General Contractors of America, which will be held in New Orleans, September 8-10.

Kathy Mooney of Bastrop, Miss Northeast Louisiana State College, has been invited to attend the meeting as the guest of the contractor's group.

Purpose of Miss Mooney's appearance, explained J. H. Heard, president of the Monroe-based association, will be to publicize the new building construction course being offered at her college. The curriculum is the only one of its kind in the state and was established at the request of the Louisiana AGC.

In addition to distributing literature about the college program, Miss Mooney will disseminate information about construction career opportunities in northeast Louisiana.

An office administration major, Miss Mooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mooney, won the top yearbook title, Miss Chacahoula at Northeast during the 1965-66 school year. She was a contestant in the 1964-65 Miss Louisiana Pageants, first as Miss Bastrop and then as Miss North Louisiana Cotton Queen, winning the Miss Congeniality title in the 1964 contest.

Labor Force Poses Threat In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — This country's labor force emerged Saturday as the next potential source of trouble for Gen. Carlos Ongania, now rounding out two months as Argentina's military strong man.

He has won an apparent victory over defiance in the universities, although mass resignations by hundreds of professors still pose a serious problem for a return to full normal operations.

Several hundred metalworkers demanding higher pay clashed with police in suburban Buenos Aires Friday in the first reported labor violence since Onganai took over in a military coup June 28.

Boss of the metalworkers is Augusto (The Wolf) Vandor, a top Peronista leader. Followers of the exiled Argentine dictator control most of Argentina's labor force.

It was an upsurge of Peronist activity that triggered the coup which toppled President Arturo Illia, a civilian. The Ongania regime was reported to have patched up a truce with labor. But that could end if Vandor's metalworkers persist. They want a 35 per cent wage boost.

Repression at the universities touched off a worldwide uproar, and most quarters agree that it was the first big mistake of the Ongania regime. But the regime survived and student resistance dwindled. A call for a nationwide student strike on Thursday failed. Half the closed schools have reopened.

Ongania has the solid backing of the military. He dissolved Congress and political parties. No word has been said about elections or restoring the country to civilian rule. Government sources say he plans to rule for at least 10 years.

In the economic field, the new regime showed signs of increased activity when it closed seven money-losing sugar plantations in Tucuman Province and announced it would build 11 factories and plants in other industries to absorb unemployed workers.

Tucuman, in northern Argentina, is the country's top sugar producer, but the government had to pour in $230 million this year to finance the operation.

Government officials said they plan to lower taxes on beef and grains in an effort to reduce these production costs. This would put Argentina in a better competitive position in world

Six Persons Injured In 2-Car Wreck

A 23-year-old West Monroe woman was hospitalized and five others injured in a two-car accident on Trenton Street near its intersection with Jackson Street at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Mary J. Hutchinson, 215 Pelican Dr., was listed in satisfactory condition at Glenwood Hospital with undetermined injuries. Two passengers in a car driven by her, Sherry Hutchinson, 3, and Johnny Hutchinson, 4, were treated and released from the emergency room of Glenwood.

Others treated in the Glenwood emergency room and released were Donald Snowden, driver of the other vehicle; Mrs. Wallace Snowden, 39, and Troy Snowden, 14, passengers in the automobile.

According to reports of the West Monroe Police Department witnesses said the car driven by the Hutchinson woman was traveling south on Trenton when it swerved into the path of the southbound car driven by Snowden, as she reached for a child in her vehicle.

Fumes Defeat Statue

Northeast Beauty To Attend Meet

The Northeast Louisiana Contractors Association will insert a fluff of femininity into what tradionally has been a man's domain — the annual convention of the Louisiana State Council of The Associated General Contractors of America, which will be held in New Orleans, September 8-10.

Kathy Mooney of Bastrop, Miss Northeast Louisiana State College, has been invited to attend the meeting as the guest of the contractor's group.

Purpose of Miss Mooney's appearance, explained J. H. Heard, president of the Monroe-based association, will be to publicize the new building construction course being offered at her college. The curriculum is the only one of its kind in the state and was established at the request of the Louisiana AGC.

In addition to distributing literature about the college program, Miss Mooney will disseminate information about construction career opportunities in northeast Louisiana.

An office administration major, Miss Mooney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Mooney, won the top yearbook title, Miss Chacahoula at Northeast during the 1965-66 school year. She was a contestant in the 1964-65 Miss Louisiana Pageants, first as Miss Bastrop and then as Miss North Louisiana Cotton Queen, winning the Miss Congeniality title in the 1964 contest.

Labor Force Poses Threat In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — This country's labor force emerged Saturday as the next potential source of trouble for Gen. Carlos Ongania, now rounding out two months as Argentina's military strong man.

He has won an apparent victory over defiance in the universities, although mass resignations by hundreds of professors still pose a serious problem for a return to full normal operations.

Several hundred metalworkers demanding higher pay clashed with police in suburban Buenos Aires Friday in the first reported labor violence since Onganai took over in a military coup June 28.

Boss of the metalworkers is Augusto (The Wolf) Vandor, a top Peronista leader. Followers of the exiled Argentine dictator control most of Argentina's labor force.

It was an upsurge of Peronist activity that triggered the coup which toppled President Arturo Illia, a civilian. The Ongania regime was reported to have patched up a truce with labor. But that could end if Vandor's metalworkers persist. They want a 35 per cent wage boost.

Repression at the universities touched off a worldwide uproar, and most quarters agree that it was the first big mistake of the Ongania regime. But the regime survived and student resistance dwindled. A call for a nationwide student strike on Thursday failed. Half the closed schools have reopened.

Ongania has the solid backing of the military. He dissolved Congress and political parties. No word has been said about elections or restoring the country to civilian rule. Government sources say he plans to rule for at least 10 years.

In the economic field, the new regime showed signs of increased activity when it closed seven money-losing sugar plantations in Tucuman Province and announced it would build 11 factories and plants in other industries to absorb unemployed workers.

Tucuman, in northern Argentina, is the country's top sugar producer, but the government had to pour in $230 million this year to finance the operation.

Government officials said they plan to lower taxes on beef and grains in an effort to reduce these production costs. This would put Argentina in a better competitive postiion in world markets and increase exports, officials say.

Six Persons Injured In 2-Car Wreck

A 23-year-old West Monroe woman was hospitalized and five others injured in a two-car accident on Trenton Street near its intersection with Jackson Street at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Mary J. Hutchinson, 215 Pelican Dr., was listed in satisfactory condition at Glenwood Hospital with undetermined injuries. Two passengers in a car driven by her, Sherry Hutchinson, 3, and Johnny Hutchinson, 4, were treated and released from the emergency room of Glenwood.

Others treated in the Glenwood emergency room and released were Donald Snowden, driver of the other vehicle; Mrs. Wallace Snowden, 39, and Troy Snowden, 14, passengers in the automobile.

According to reports of the West Monroe Police Department witnesses said the car driven by the Hutchinson woman was traveling south on Trenton when it swerved into the path of the southbound car driven by Snowden, as she reached for a child in her vehicle.

Fumes Defeat Statue

'PLEASE DON'T HURT MY LITTLE GIRL'

DEAR DRIVER:

My daughter, who is eight years old, will start another new year in school. She'll wear a light blue dress with a white collar. She'll have on black shoes with colorful anklets. Her Cocker Spaniel whose name is "Scoot" will sit on the front porch and whine his canine belief in the folly of education, as she waves "goodbye" and starts off to the hall of learning. Last night we talked about school . . . you know, all those tremendous vital, unimportant things, then we talked a little bit, and then she went to bed . . . She's upstairs now . . . sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's her doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see . . . I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger cut, or her head gets cut . . . I can fix it . . . but when she starts to school . . . crosses the street, then she's in your hands. She's a sweet little girl and I'm proud of her. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time . . . I have to work to pay for her clothes and education. So please help me look out for her . . . please drive carefully, please drive slowly past the schools and intersections . . . and please do remember that children do run from behind parked cars.

PLEASE DON'T HURT MY LITTLE GIRL

'PLEASE DON'T HURT MY LITTLE GIRL'

DEAR DRIVER:

My daughter, who is eight years old, will start another new year in school. She'll wear a light blue dress with a white collar. She'll have on black shoes with colorful anklets. Her Cocker Spaniel whose name is "Scoot" will sit on the front porch and whine his canine belief in the folly of education, as she waves "goodbye" and starts off to the hall of learning. Last night we talked about school . . . you know, all those tremendous vital, unimportant things, then we talked a little bit, and then she went to bed . . . She's upstairs now . . . sound asleep, with "Princess Elizabeth" (that's her doll) cuddled in her right arm. You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see . . . I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger cut, or her head gets cut . . . I can fix it . . . but when she starts to school . . . crosses the street, then she's in your hands. She's a sweet little girl and I'm proud of her. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoons. But I can't be with her all the time . . . I have to work to pay for her clothes and education. So please help me look out for her . . . please drive carefully, please drive slowly past the schools and intersections . . . and please do remember that children do run from behind parked cars.

PLEASE DON'T HURT MY LITTLE GIRL

REUNION FORESEEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Methodist Bishop Fred Pierce Corson of Philadelphia, on his way to London to preside over the Methodist World Council, predicted that Protestant bodies and the Roman Catholic Church will have a "definite scheme of unity" under consideration within five years.

OVERALL VIEW in this sketch of the $225,000 addition to Grace Episcopal Church, N. 4th Street and Glemar Avenue, shows the parish house in the front center, with classrooms to the rear, extreme left in the picture. The present education building is in the center with the church proper on the right background. The addition fronts on N. 4th street, as does the Church proper.

Construction Underway Here On $225,000 Church Addition

Construction is underway on the $225,000 addition to the Grace Episcopal Church of Monroe, following ground breaking ceremonies marked by pagentry of procession and prayers by the communicants of the church.

The addition to the famed church includes a large Parish House and six additional classrooms for the church school, according to the Rev. W. Bradley Trimble, rector of the church.

The proposed parish house will accomodate 300 people, the Rev. Trimble said.

"The conference rooms are large enough to seat 40 people," he said. "There is a very modern kitchen and the Sunday School rooms are designed for 20 students each with lockers and text cabinets as well as book shelves and display shelves. The interior walls of the class room employ a modern fabric finish. The six large class rooms are designed to double in Sunday School use, and as the parish Day School, St. Christopher's, grows, can be used to house a six grade parochial school."

The ground breaking ceremony was held last Sunday and work on the project was started on Monday.

Grace Church was organized in 1848 with the present Gothic structure being completed in 1926. It serves a growing congregation of more than 1,200 baptized persons, the Rev. Trimble said.

"Due to building restrictions running with the land which permitted only residences to be erected, the parish has not, heretofore, been able to extend its plant," the Rev. Trimble said. "Recently, due to the courtesy and cooperation of neighboring property owners these restrictions were lifted and the way paved for the new construction."

Others participating in the ground - breaking ceremony besides the Rev. Trimble, included such parish dignitaries as the Rev. James B. Brown, the Curate; the Senior Warden, S. C. Strausser, and the Junior Warden, Thomas L. Downs. Thomas L. Weigh and Clark G. Boyce, former Senior Wardens, also participated as did Victor Davis, chairman of the building committee, and William D. Brown, who headed the building fund campaign.

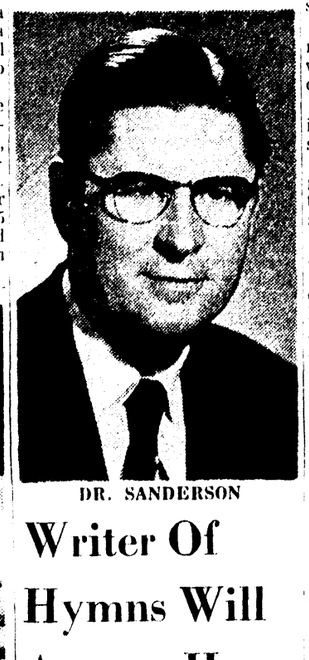
The Rev. Trimble pointed out that a "happy side-light of the occasion was the opportunity to participate offorded to Mrs. Ethel Hayward, widow of a former parish rector, The Rev. Edward Farren Hayward. It was under Father Hayward's long tenure of more than 25 years that the present church was built and the grounds purchased."

The Parish House was architecturally designed by Lestar Martin, a member of the firm of William King Stubbs, Architects, and a member of Grace Church, to compliment the architecture of the church building itself. The addition will front on North Fourth Street and will cloister with the church and administration building.

"The parish owes much to Mr. Martin for his careful study of the functional use, not only of the parish house, but of the Church School addition as well," the Rev. Trimble said. "He spent many hours in committee work and in preparing the art and model work for promoting the building fund canvass."

The Rev. Trimble said "much credit is also due to the work of Mr. Davis, Mr. Fred Westrom, Mrs. S. C. Strausser, Mr. W. L. Mattison, Mrs. H. K. Touchstone, Mr. Martin, Mrs. Dave Agnew, Mrs. George Snellings Jr., Mr. Don Larisey and Mr. Jack Neel, who worked on the prelminary planning committee."

Larisey, Westrom, and Mrs. William L. Mattison represented the Sunday School Department, and Henry Bernstein, Mrs. George Weaks, and Mrs. Kirt Touchstone represented the lay organization of the parish at the ground - breaking, while Mrs. Strausser represented St. Christopher's Day School. Layreaders, Frank Breese, Dave Agnew, Martin and T. Fitzhugh Wilson assisted the rector and curate with the ritual.



DR. SANDERSON

Writer Of Hymns Will Appear Here

Dr. Leonard Sanderson, former pastor of First Baptist Church of Lake Charles, who now devotes his time to evangelistic work, will speak during revival services at College Place Baptist Church today through next Sunday.

Eddy Nicholson, who works in revival ministry, will lead the singing. He is recording artist for RCA Victor and is composor of the hymn, "Try Jesus, Man of Galilee."

"Dr. Sanderson and Mr. Nicholson are both in great demand from coast to coast for revival efforts and city - wide campaigns," said the church pastor, Rev. T. Earl Ogg.

Weekday services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday through Friday, and at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Sunday services will include Sunday school at 9:45 a.m., the worship hour at 11 a.m., training union at 6 p.m. and the evening service at 7:10 p.m.

Rev. Don E. Wainwright, former pastor of Edgewood Baptist Church, West Monroe, has moved to Jackson, Miss., where he has accepted pastorial duties at West Jackson Baptist Church.

Rev. Wainwright, pastor of the West Monroe church for five years, was honored last Sunday by the Edgewood congregation.

Rev. Wainwright has served as a member of the Board of Trustees of Louisiana Baptist Children's Home and as moderator for two years of Trenton Baptist Association.

He is married to the former Ann Valerie Henderson of Jackson and their children, Donna Ann, 11, and David, 10, will be enrolled in the Jackson schools.

REV. WILSON

Pastor From Georgia To Visit Area

Rev. Bruce M. Wilson, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Waycross, Ga., will be the visiting preacher for revival services at Saint Andrews Methodist Church, Sterlington, beginning today and continuing through Friday.

Rev. Wilson is a member of the South Georgia Annual Conference of the Methodist Church and is in much demand as a revival and Camp Meeting preacher in that area. He has served several pastorates in Georgia and was director of the Georgia Temperance League for several years before being assigned to his present pastorate.

Special gospel singing will be featured in each service, according to Rev. Minns S. Robertson, pastor. A nursery will be provided for all evening services.

Rev. Wilson will preach for the regular services at 10:55 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. today and at 8:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. each day, Monday through Friday.

ROSEMARY Hovarter, resident of Compere Cottage at Louisiana Baptist Children's Home, Monroe, displays her award as "honor camper" at the Baptist Girls' Auxiliary camp she recently attended at Tall Timbers near Forest Hill. She was the guest of girls from First Baptist Church of Vinton, the church which sponsors her at the home.

REUNION FORESEEN

NEW YORK (AP) — Methodist Bishop Fred Pierce Corson of Philadelphia, on his way to London to preside over the Methodist World Council, predicted that Protestant bodies and the Roman Catholic Church will have a "definite scheme of unity" under consideration within five years.

OVERALL VIEW in this sketch of the $225,000 addition to Grace Episcopal Church, N. 4th Street and Glemar Avenue, shows the parish house in the front center, with classrooms to the rear, extreme left in the picture. The present education building is in the center with the church proper on the right background. The addition fronts on N. 4th street, as does the Church proper.

Construction Underway Here On $225,000 Church Addition

Construction is underway on the $225,000 addition to the Grace Episcopal Church of Monroe, following ground breaking ceremonies marked by pagentry of procession and prayers by the communicants of the church.

The addition to the famed church includes a large Parish House and six additional classrooms for the church school, according to the Rev. W. Bradley Trimble, rector of the church.

The proposed parish house will accomodate 300 people, the Rev. Trimble said.

"The conference rooms are large enough to seat 40 people," he said. "There is a very modern kitchen and the Sunday School rooms are designed for 20 students each with lockers and text cabinets as well as book shelves and display shelves. The interior walls of the class room employ a modern fabric finish. The six large class rooms are designed to double in Sunday School use, and as the parish Day School, St. Christopher's, grows, can be used to house a six grade parochial school."

The ground breaking ceremony was held last Sunday and work on the project was started on Monday.

Grace Church was organized in 1848 with the present Gothic structure being completed in 1926. It serves a growing congregation of more than 1,200 baptized persons, the Rev. Trimble said.

"Due to building restrictions running with the land which permitted only residences to be erected, the parish has not, heretofore, been able to extend its plant," the Rev. Trimble said. "Recently, due to the courtesy and cooperation of neighboring property owners these restrictions were lifted and the way paved for the new construction."

Others participating in the ground - breaking ceremony besides the Rev. Trimble, included such parish dignitaries as the Rev. James B. Brown, the Curate; the Senior Warden, S. C. Strausser, and the Junior Warden, Thomas L. Downs. Thomas L. Weigh and Clark G. Boyce, former Senior Wardens, also participated as did Victor Davis, chairman of the building committee, and William D. Brown, who headed the building fund campaign.

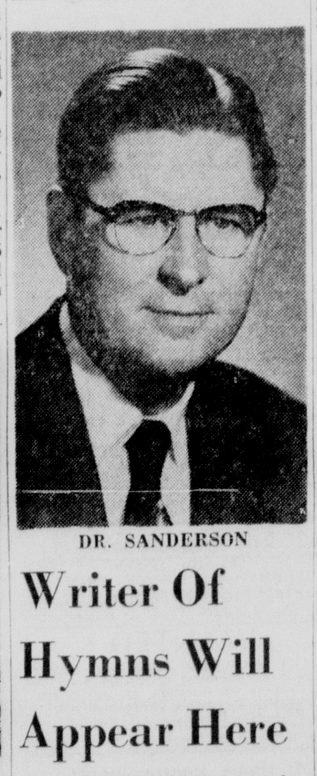
The Rev. Trimble pointed out that a "happy side-light of the occasion was the opportunity to participate offorded to Mrs. Ethel Hayward, widow of a former parish rector, The Rev. Edward Farren Hayward. It was under Father Hayward's long tenure of more than 25 years that the present church was built and the grounds purchased."

The Parish House was architecturally designed by Lestar Martin, a member of the firm of William King Stubbs, Architects, and a member of Grace Church, to compliment the architecture of the church building itself. The addition will front on North Fourth Street and will cloister with the church and administration building.

"The parish owes much to Mr. Martin for his careful study of the functional use, not only of the parish house, but of the Church School addition as well," the Rev. Trimble said. "He spent many hours in committee work and in preparing the art and model work for promoting the building fund canvass."

The Rev. Trimble said "much credit is also due to the work of Mr. Davis, Mr. Fred Westrom, Mrs. S. C. Strausser, Mr. W. L. Mattison, Mrs. H. K. Touchstone, Mr. Martin, Mrs. Dave Agnew, Mrs. George Snellings Jr., Mr. Don Larisey and Mr. Jack Neel, who worked on the preliminary planning committee."

Larisey, Westrom, and Mrs. William L. Mattison represented the Sunday School Department, and Henry Bernstein, Mrs. George Weaks, and Mrs. Kirt Touchstone represented the lay organization of the parish at the ground - breaking, while Mrs. Strausser represented St. Christopher's Day School. Layreaders, Frank Breese, Dave Agnew, Martin and T. Fitzhugh Wilson assisted the rector and curate with the ritual.



DR. SANDERSON

Writer Of Hymns Will Appear Here

Dr. Leonard Sanderson, former pastor of First Baptist Church of Lake Charles, who now devotes his time to evangelistic work, will speak during revival services at College Place Baptist Church today through next Sunday.

Eddy Nicholson, who works in revival ministry, will lead the singing. He is recording artist for RCA Victor and is composor of the hymn, "Try Jesus, Man of Galilee."

"Dr. Sanderson and Mr. Nicholson are both in great demand from coast to coast for revival efforts and city - wide campaigns," said the church pastor, Rev. T. Earl Ogg.

Weekday services will be at 10 a.m. Tuesday through Friday, and at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Sunday services will include Sunday school at 9:45 a.m., the worship hour at 11 a.m., training union at 6 p.m. and the evening service at 7:10 p.m.

HELP FOR HOMEMAKERS

DEAR HELOISE:
Six large kitchen match boxes glued together, and then covered (except for the front) with adhesive backed paper, will make an excellent button box. Stack them in threes for a tiny bureau arrangement.

Sew shank-type buttons through the front cardboard

Mary

* * *

These little chests of drawers would be wonderful for a little girl to keep her hair ribbons, barrettes and jewelry in. A seamstress could also keep her pins, snaps, hooks and eyes, tape measure, etc., in these little drawers.

Heloise

ATT'N: PHILATELISTS

DEAR HELOISE:
I find that some stamps fade when the envelope is placed in water to remove the stamps from the envelope.

I now pour some cigarette lighter fluid on the envelope behind the stamp. This doesn't make the colors run and the stamp comes off beautifully with no damage.

John H.

* * *

I tried it, and it works. Thanks, I am sure lots of our stamp collectors will appreciate this hint. Remember to read CAUTION DIRECTIONS on the lighter fluid container.

Heloise

CRACKERJACK IDEA!

DEAR HELOISE:
Try using a plastic tomato container that holds four tomatoes as a carrier for a pack of saltine crackers or any square cookies. Perfect fit!

Ann Fiore

* * *

We tried it, and that long pack of saltines fits into the tomato carton as snug as a bug in a rug!

You might want to just slit the top of the wrapping so that the paper will catch any crumbs or salt which might otherwise fall out the bottom of the basket.

Heloise

CLOTHESLINE SPECIAL

DEAR HELOISE:
I made a clothespin holder from a plastic bleach jug by cutting the top of the jug off—leaving the handle. I punched holes all over the bottom (used a very large nail and hammer) to allow rain water to seep through—this keeps the clothespins clean.

I attached a closed-type shower ring to the handle and hung it on my line. The holder can be pushed along the line ahead of me as I hang up the wash, and the pins can be put right back in as I take the wash down.

Alice Kramer

CRY, BABY, CRY!

DEAR HELOISE:
When we were studying baby-sitting in Homemaking class last year, our teacher told us how to stop children's crying.

She told us never to use physical punishment. If the child insists he must cry (not because of injury), make a game of it. Tell him, "If you can cry, so can I," and start to pretend to cry. Then say to him, "I've got it! Let's take turns crying!"

You'll find after a few times of "It's my turn—now it's your turn," he'll soon start laughing.

I'm 13 and read your column every day.

WHAT A SPONGE!

DEAR HELOISE:
While washing windows last week, I was irked at the trickle of water running down my arm.

I took an old sponge, made a slit through the middle, dampened it slightly and slipped it on my right wrist. When the sponge became soaked, I just took it off, squeezed the water out and put it back on.

No more trickling, tickling water on my arm!

Cora Gaines

WANTED: SHARP CREASES

DEAR HELOISE:
If you want to get a good crease in your children's wash-and-wear pants, try spray-starching the creases, then ironing them!

You can use any kind of starch, whether you make it yourself or purchase the bottled kind, by putting it in a plunger-type bottle.

I have six boys and find this a time-saving answer to the crease-ironing problem.

Mother

* * *

DEAR MOTHER:
I suggest that, if your kids wear dark blue or black pants, you spray them on the WRONG side while WET before ironing.

When the fibers of your sons' or husband's slacks are wet (which means right after washing), they will absorb the starch better.

Heloise

BISCUITS FOR BREAKFAST

DEAR HELOISE:
Did you know that you could use canned biscuits, rolled flat with a rolling pin, for either fried or baked filled pies?

All one has to do, after rolling out the biscuits, is put on their favorite jelly or pre-cooked fruits, fold over the round biscuits and crimp the edges with a fork. Prick the top in several places with the fork.

They may be fried in deep grease or put on a cookie sheet and baked in the oven like biscuits.

Land, what a breakfast!

Frank Polk

BATTER UP (ANY TIME)

DEAR HELOISE:
Those lovely plastic detergent bottles make wonderful containers for pancake batter, and are especially good for those who live alone or couples who do not use a whole recipe at one time.

I just made a larger hole in the cap of the bottle, and the batter pours out perfectly.

After using what you need, return the container to your refrigerator and the batter keeps beautifully.

"THINGS DO NOT HAPPEN IN THIS WORLD —THEY ARE BROUGHT ABOUT." -WILL H. HAYS.

THE NIGHT THEY KIDNAPED ANNIE AND WE CHASED THEM IN THE POLICE BOAT, THEY VANISHED JUST AHEAD, ALONG THIS SHORE!

BUT THAT SHORE IS SOLID, UNBROKEN, MANGROVE!

THERE IS NO TIME TO WASTE IN DISCUSSION! I WILL TAKE THE WHEEL!

B-BUT, LADY! YOU CAN'T DO THAT!

DO AS SHE SAYS, CAPTAIN!

B-B-BUT THAT SHORE LINE IS LIKE A WALL! SHE'LL SMASH INTO IT AND SINK US FOR SURE! AI---YI-I-I-I!

H-H-HOW COULD ANYBODY KNOW THAT HOLE WAS THERE? H-H-HOW?

OH, SHUT UP AND LET A REAL PILOT RUN THIS CRUISE, EH?

THAT LAST POND! A DOZEN LITTLE CREEKS, ALL ALIKE! BUT SHE DIDN'T EVEN SLOW DOWN! HOW'S SHE KNOW THIS ONE'S TH' RIGHT ONE?

DON'T ASK ME, BUT SOMEHOW I'M BETTING ON THIS LITTLE LADY!

HANG ON, BOYS! WHEW! THE WAY SHE SWAPPED ENDS AND SLAMMED THROUGH WHAT LOOKED LIKE SOLID BUSH!

YOU THROTTLED DOWN. WHAT IS IT, LILY? DO YOU FEEL WE'RE NEAR THE ISLAND?

YES! VERY NEAR. THOSE MONSTER ALLIGATORS, JUST AS I "SAW" THEM!

AND THE OUTLINE OF THE OLD FORT, TOO, JUST BELOW THE SURFACE OF THE WATER! SEE IT? AND THERE! IN THE TOP OF THAT GREAT TREE!

E-EEE! I'M F-F-FALLIN!

OH, N-NO!
